HITLER AND DUCE VOW FRIENDSHIP 'FOR ALL TIME'

Nazis Renounce All Claim to Tyrol.

ROME, May 7.—(AP)—Benito Mussolini and Adolf Hitler "completed and sealed" their political alliance tonight in an exchange of fidelity toasts at a formal state dinner in Palazzo Venezia.

The Fuehrer guaranteed "for all time" the Alpine border between Germany and Italy. Germany extended its territory to Italy's northern border on March 13, when Hitler annexed Austria. Germany thus renounced its claim to the Tyrol and its 250,000 German residents acquired by Italy after the world war.

"It is my unshakable will and also my political testament to the German people," Hitler said, "to consider inviolable for all time the frontiers of the Alps erected between us by nature. I am certain that for Rome as well as for Germany there will result a future that will be glorious as well as prosperous."

Result of Visit Still a Secret.

The dinner brought to a climax a week's visit filled with military demonstrations, pageantry, and political discussions whose import the world probably will not know until time discloses them.

The short speeches of the two dictators lacked concrete details of what they intend to do about Czechoslovakia, where a Nazi German minority is clamoring for autonomy, and other problems which were said to have been discussed.

But their blanket reaffirmation of the solidity of the Berlin-Rome working agreement was interpreted as an indication that they had struck a bargain with respect to each others' interests, wherever they meet, and would give each other mutual aid in the remaking of Europe.

Duce Pledges Fidelity.

Fascism's Duce told Naziism's Fuehrer:

"Your visit to Rome completes and seals the understanding between our two countries."

He pledged fidelity to the Rome-Berlin friendship, saying Fascist Italy "knows but one ethical law" of friendship, which was to march with a friend to the finish.

Hitler, who spoke faster than is his custom, responded to Mussolini's declaration on the Fascist principle of friendship by saying:

"I associate myself with this principle."

Salutes Crowd from Balcony.

Der Fuehrer's pledge of fidelity was solemn and all-inclusive:

"Duce," he said to Mussolini, "just as you and your people have remained true to your friendship for Germany in the decisive days, so I, too, and my people are ready to manifest the same friendship to Italy."

Following the banquet crowds in the Palazzo Venezia called for the two dictators to appear on Mussolini's famous balcony. Der Fuehrer and Il Duce stepped out several times to salute the throngs below. But they did not speak.

Hitler appeared in his customary brown uniform, decorated with an iron cross. Mussolini wore the garb of a commander of Fascist militia and the decoration of the Order of the German Eagle, which Hitler conferred upon him last October.

Hitler Sits with Princess.

Frau Joachim von Ribbentrop, wife of the German foreign minister, sat next to Il Duce and Princess Mafalda of Hesse, daughter of King Victor Emmanuel, sat next to Der Fuehrer.

Hitler spoke in German and Mussolini in Italian. Their toasts obviously had been worked over carefully in advance, since Mussolini, who spoke first, appeared to know what Hitler was going to say. Mussolini talked for six minutes, Hitler for five.

Both toasted their "unchangeable friendship." The premises and object of this collaboration, Mussolini said, have been "consecrated in the Rome-Berlin axis" and constantly and openly affirmed.

Utopias Left Behind.

"Germany and Italy," he said, "have left behind them the Utopias to which Europe blindly intrusted her destiny to seek between them and with others a régime of international relations which might restore

KELLY CALLS ON HORNER; GETS PLEDGE OF HELP

Special Session on Relief Promised.

BY PERCY WOOD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., May 7.—[Special.]—Early legislative action to meet Chicago's relief crisis was indicated by Gov. Horner here late today after a six hour conference with Mayor Kelly—the first meeting of the two opposing Democratic leaders since the primary.

The governor said he would call the assembly into special session within ten days to consider the shortage of funds which faces Chicago reliefers. It seemed probable the legislators will convene May 17, the day on which the city's funds will be exhausted.

Source Still Uncertain.

Although the governor said no agreement had been reached on how the money can be raised, it seemed probable an appropriation of state funds to meet the immediate emergency will be asked and the assembly then will be put to work on a permanent fund raising quest. Mayor Kelly told the governor that Chicago will need $14,000,000 for the remainder of the year.

"You can say this," the governor told reporters in Mr. Kelly's presence. "No one in Illinois will be permitted to starve. I have often said that."

"That sounds fine," said the mayor approvingly.

Airport Agreement Indicated.

Another subject for the call requested by the mayor—special legislation to move the Chicago and Western Indiana railroad tracks from the Chicago airport—seemed to have met with the governor's approval.

"Just what powers the city should have to go ahead with this removal have not been decided," the governor said, "but Chicago [turning to the mayor] has the greatest airport in the country, hasn't it?"

Mr. Kelly nodded.

"Then we should keep it so," the governor said. "I will have no hesitancy in recommending to the legislature whatever is necessary."

Subjects to Be Sifted.

Approximately 200 subjects for inclusion in the call are on Mr. Horner's desk. He said he expected within a few days to separate the emergency matters from those which can wait for the regular session in January.

"And," he continued, "you know that the session can be called in one or two days."

By his words the governor also gave the intimation that he was seriously considering the matter of placing relief administration under the direction of the public welfare department—a recommendation which has been made by several commissions which have studied the matter.

Parley Appears Harmonious.

Two other subjects are to be included in the call—a constitutional convention and legislation to extend the three cent sales tax upon utility services, which expires July 1.

On the surface the conference between the two leaders appeared to have been harmonious. A third man, James M. Slattery, chairman of the Horner commerce commission, was with them most of the time and toward the close Attorney Oliver Barrett of Chicago, one of the governor's fellow collectors of Lincolniana, sat in.

One humorous incident, reminiscent of the bossism charges made during the primary, featured the talk with newspaper men.

Mayor Kelly, telling how he had presented the city's request for help on relief to the governor, concluded by saying, with a wave toward Mr. Horner, "Of course, he's the boss."

"Boss?" the governor exploded, and both men burst into loud laughter.

Says the Mayor to the Governor.

"Why," the governor continued, "they're even saying now that I bossed a Democratic judicial convention here this week. A fellow from here [Attorney D. Logan Giffin] told that to the Republican convention in Decatur yesterday."

"You don't want to let them do that," the mayor advised, with a grin.

Whether politics was discussed was not disclosed, but the stake each faction has in the fall election is well defined. The governor's stake is the success of the state ticket, headed by

EXPLORER'S SEAPLANE FALLS; TWO WOMEN PASSENGERS DROWN

Seattle, Wash., May 7.—(AP)—Two women were killed late today when a seaplane piloted by Bradford Washburn Jr., Harvard geographer and explorer, fell into Lake Union. Washburn escaped.

The victims were Mrs. Orme Daiber, wife of the noted mountain climber, and Miss Dorothy Matthews of Seattle. James Borrows, another passenger, escaped. The plane was attempting to alight on the lake.

The women's bodies were recovered from the submerged cabin of the plane. Borrows and Washburn fought free of the plane as it sank, and were picked up by passing craft.

Washburn was visiting here enroute from Cambridge to Valdez, Alaska, where he planned an attempt to climb 13,250 foot Mount St. Agnes. Last summer he and Robert Bates, Philadelphia, were the first persons to scale 17,150 foot Mount Lucania.

Washburn's Alaska trip was sponsored by the National Geographic society.

HERR GOEBBELS' BLOOD PRESSURE GETS A BAD JOLT

ROME, May 7.—[U. P.]—The refusal of Paul Joseph Goebbels, Nazi minister of propaganda, to attend a luncheon presided over by Dino Alfieri, Fascist party official, because the guests included Jews, had an amusing sequel today.

Instead of attending the luncheon Goebbels bought several hats at a fashionable store. The proprietor suggested that he sign a register containing the names of famous personages who had visited the store.

Goebbels looked over the list. The last signer was Maurice Rothschild, member of the prominent Jewish banking family. Goebbels indignantly slammed shut the book and stamped out of the store.

Carries Letter for Week; Finds Million Dollars in It

Seattle, Wash., May 7.—(AP)—John F. Dore Jr., son of Seattle's late mayor, discovered today that the letter he absentmindedly carried around in his coat for a week contained a check from Uncle Sam for $1,241,961. The check represented a PWA grant for a city power project. It had come addressed to Mayor Dore and was forwarded to the Dore home.

Dear Mother: Love from Son and Daughter

This is the annual day when the sons and daughters of America pay formal homage to their mothers by trying to return some mite of the affection which their mothers have bestowed upon them through the years. It's Mother's day.

Some mothers will rejoice over gifts of flowers or candy, others will be gladdened by visits from long absent children, and almost all will gaze upon remembrances of some kind. In Chicago and elsewhere the personal tributes will be augmented by ceremonies dedicated to the occasion. Some such tributes were paid last night.

Mothers Make Best Actresses.

One of the rarest was made by Max Factor, beauty expert of Hollywood. After scanning the portraits and careers of dozens of feminine stars, he reached this conclusion:

"Mothers make the best actresses. Motherhood adds depth and understanding to a woman's face."

For proof he cited Joan Blondell, Norma Shearer, Frances Dee, Virginia Bruce, Joan Bennett, and Marlene Dietrich. What the screen needs, added Factor, is more actresses who are mothers.

In Lincoln, Neb., Warden Joseph O'Grady, of the Nebraska state penitentiary, made many convict hearts and as many mother hearts happy. To each life termer 10 or more years in prison he gave $5. "Buy flowers for your mothers," he told them.

Honor Mother of 1938.

At Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, entertained Mrs. Grace Noll Crowell, poet laureate of Texas, recently chosen "The American Mother of 1938."

In Charleston, W. Va., an unusual twist was given to a Mother's day essay contest. Mrs. H. C. Waybright won with this, "She came into our home, a stranger to eight motherless children. At once she took us into her arms, and into her heart. She loved us all, without favor. She gave us the sweet sympathy and understanding of a real mother." The essay was dedicated not to her mother but to her stepmother, Mrs. Ira W. Legg of Vinton, W. Va.

From Springfield came word that Illinois has succeeded in reducing the yearly death toll of mothers at childbirth from 1,000 to 500 in the last sixteen years.

Warden Quits Under Fire in Prison Breaks

Michigan City, Ind., May 7.—[Special.]—Louis E. Kunkel, political associate of former Gov. Paul V. McNutt and warden of the Indiana state penitentiary here for the last five years, resigned today. His resignation, effective Monday, closes a prison régime in which at least seventy prisoners, including many notorious killers, have escaped.

Alfred F. Dowd, assistant superintendent of the state reformatory at Pendleton, who became a prison guard thirty years ago, was appointed by Gov. M. Clifford Townsend to succeed Kunkel. Dowd, known as a strict disciplinarian, was said to have been chosen to succeed Kunkel in an attempt to silence the Indiana prison scandals.

Disclaims Blame for Breaks.

"I resigned because so many things happened here that I felt it was the best thing to do," Kunkel said today. "I don't feel that I was responsible for the things that happened, but the worry became too big."

Kunkel said he would be glad to turn the prison over to Dowd. He said his nerves are shattered by the experiences of the last five years. He criticized the construction of the prison and said the fact that buildings reached to the walls made it easy for prisoners to get to the top of buildings and escape.

Soon after Kunkel became warden on June 1, 1933, laws were amended to give McNutt, who then was governor, virtual control over state prisons. One of Kunkel's first acts was to discharge 69 of 120 experienced prison guards and employés and replace them with guards recommended by state Democratic chairmen and ward bosses.

Kunkel Party Officer.

Kunkel, who was a Michigan City attorney and twice had been prosecuting attorney of La Porte county, was vice chairman of the Democratic county central committee.

From 1925 to 1933 Warden Walter H. Daley, who spent twenty-six years as a prison guard, clerk, and deputy warden, had run the prison without political interference and with a staf that remained virtually unchanged. In the eight years one attempted break was foiled and there was not a single escape.

Daley became warden after Edward J. Fogarty, one of the leading penologists of the country, was discharged by Gov. Ed Jackson. Fogarty's ouster was said to have been the result of Ku Klux Klan pressure when D. C. Stephenson, Indiana klan leader, was sent to prison for life for murder. Fogarty became warden of the Cook

LIFE OR DEATH COUNCIL TO BE HELD TOMORROW

Family Conference Decides Course.

The distraut parents of little Helaine Judith Colan, infant victim of a dread cancerous malady, decided at 2 a. m. today, after an all night family conference, to rest her fate with a jury of medical specialists.

These specialists, who probably will be headed by one of Chicago's best known surgeons, will be called upon as medical men to settle the problem of whether to operate on the baby, and thus perhaps save her life, but with resultant total blindness, or to permit the disease to run its course, with death a certainty in the early future.

Grandparents at Conference.

Those at the conference, which began at 9 o'clock last night, were Dr. and Mrs. Herman Colan, Helaine's parents; Dr. and Mrs. Morris L. Hershman, her maternal grandparents, and the latter's sons, Seymour and Victor Hershman, medical students, and Samuel A. Hoffman, well known lawyer and personal friend of the Hershmans. The meeting place was kept a secret.

All agreed that whatever is done for the afflicted baby must be done soon, for the passing of each hour admittedly aggravates her condition. She is suffering from glioma of the retina, a cancerous tumor which spreads from the retina to the brain. The sight of her left eye already is gone; that of the right eye is impaired.

Mother Near Collapse.

The Colans and the Hershmans showed the strain of the tragedy confronting them as they met. Their discussions and arguments were a mixture of science, parental love, and emotion. Mrs. Colan was near collapse several times. Her husband, pensive, wept quietly. But carefully and methodically each possibility was weighed and discussed. Should it be operation, possible life, and certain blindness, or no operation and certain death?

The upshot of the conference was that the problem was one too difficult for those so intimately and personally concerned to decide. And somewhat in line with the thought advanced earlier by Dr. Cassius C. Rogers, that "in their mental anguish they should not rely on themselves," they came to the conclusion that others should be the jurors. Dr. Rogers is brain specialist at the Garfield Park Community hospital, where Helaine, 5 weeks old, is now a patient. Attorney Hoffman announced the decision.

Withhold Specialists' Names.

"Dr. and Mrs. Colan and Dr. and Mrs. Hershman and other members of the family," said Hoffman, "have decided to be guided by the advice of a group of specialists whose names they are not free to disclose. This conference [of the specialists] will be held Monday morning."

Nothing more was added, but the statement was taken to mean that the parents and the grandparents had agreed to assume a more or less hands off attitude, that whatever the medical jury or committee said should be done or should not be done would be accepted. Some time today Attorney Hoffman in his capacity of a family friend will invite a prominent Chicago medical man to serve as chairman of the committee.

Hope to Save One Eye.

Some brain specialists were of the belief that a surgical operation for the removal of both of the infant's eyes might save her life, but agreed that the chances of her recovery from the operation are slim. There is another slight hope that supervoltage X-ray treatments might save both the baby's life and the sight of the right eye.

Those advocating the latter procedure believe the left eye should be removed immediately and then the X-ray treatments be given. There is then the possibility that Helaine may grow up a normal child, except for the loss of one eye, these medical authorities said.

Hershman Skeptical of X-ray.

Dr. Hershman, in conversation with Dr. Rogers, was understood to be skeptical of the value of the X-ray treatments. He was reported to be of the opinion that this therapy, even if temporarily successful, might have lasting injurious effects. As for operating on the infant, he was not certain of the chances of recovery and pondered the great handicap under which Helaine would go through life if she did survive.

If the X-ray treatments are decided upon the baby will probably be taken to Dr. Herbert Schmitz, director of the Mercy Hospital Institute of Radiation Therapy, where one of the largest X-ray machines in the city is installed.

Willing to Treat Baby.

Dr. Schmitz said he has had some success in treating glioma cases and would gladly treat Helaine, but he declared no definite overtures have been made to him.

Dr. Hershman and Dr. Colan, though grief stricken, went about their professional duties yesterday. Dr. Hershman, who lives at 4110 Jackson boulevard, performed an appendectomy at the hospital where his granddaughter lies. Dr. Colan treated patients in his office at 559 West 31st street. His home is at 549 Brompton place.

Little Helaine slept well during the day and was given her regular feedings. She was suffering no pain, attendants said.

Her ailment was first observed a week ago by Dr. Hershman. His diagnosis of glioma of the retina was confirmed by several specialists. He then broke the news to his son-in-law and daughter.

Usually Present at Birth.

According to clinical studies, glioma of the retina is found among patients at the rate of from 6.8 to 17 per 100,000. The tumor is almost always congenital [present at birth] and in about 94 per cent of cases manifests itself during the first four years of life.

There apparently is no preponderance in either sex, nor is one eye more likely to be attacked than the other, but it is not infrequently found in both eyes—about 28 per cent of the time. There have been instances of the disease affecting individuals in two or more generations in a direct line. This hereditary tendency is remarkable, because few individuals affected by the malady survive to an age when they can have children.

Dr. Colan disclosed yesterday that he received a letter from a man whose name and address he would not give, the writer offering to give both his eyes to Baby Helaine if that would aid her. Specialists pointed out, however, that it would be impossible to restore the child's sight by transplanting of eyes because her optic nerves would have to be severed in the operation.

ROOSEVELT SHIP LEAVES COURSE TO AID SAILOR

Charleston, S. C., May 7.—(AP)—The cruiser Philadelphia bearing President Roosevelt back here from a vacation turned "mercy ship" in the south Atlantic tonight, sending a surgeon over the side to attend an injured sailor aboard the Norwegian steamer Marathon.

A radio received at the navy yard from the Philadelphia said the Marathon, Montreal to New Orleans, sent out a call for help, the message being intercepted by the escort destroyer Fanning.

The ships immediately changed course southward and at 8:15 p. m. the Marathon was sighted. Half an hour later the cruiser put over a whaleboat in a choppy sea with Commander Oscar Davis, the ship's surgeon.

The President and his party were attending the movies when the message reporting an injured seaman was received. They went forward to the bow of the cruiser and watched the whaleboat go to the Marathon.

On the return of the whale boat the surgeon said he had removed a steel splinter from the sailor's eye. The Philadelphia is scheduled to arrive here at 5 p. m. tomorrow.

WAUKEGAN LANDMARK BURNS.

Fire destroyed an old barn that was a landmark in the rear of 712 Pine street, Waukegan, last night. It was built seventy-five years ago by Russell Price, a son of Dr. Price, known to baking soda fame. The contents, largely baled waste paper owned by Gus Pribe, a junkman, were burned. He estimated the loss at $10,000.

YOUNG MOTHER HAPPY DESPITE LOSS OF SIGHT

Saved from Glioma Death by Removal of Eyes.

BY MARCIA WINN.

A young mother, who twenty-three year ago overcame death from glioma of the retina by means of an operation removing both her eyes, urged yesterday with resolute and confident voice that little Helaine Judith Colan be given a similar chance at life.

She is Mrs. Rose Scorzo, 24 years old, 7835 Drexel avenue. Although sightless, she is the mother of a daughter 8 months old and normal in every respect. Her life—even without the eyes that the seeing consider so indispensable—is full, complete, happy. She is certain that Baby Helaine, even if blind, would not find life void.

Urges an Operation.

"They should operate," she said without hesitation. "Life is too important to be denied any one."

When Mrs. Scorzo was 3 months old physicians first noticed the appearance of glioma in her left eye. It probably had been afflicted from birth, she now says, but had been unperceived. When she was 7 months old that eye was removed. Eleven months later the right eye was removed.

"Specialists predicted I would die by the age of 5," she laughed, "but I didn't. And now? Why, I do my own cooking and housework. I take care of my own baby. And I simply love to dance."

Far from Grim or Hollow.

Before reaching the age of 6, she said, she was able to walk about, run, and climb gates. From the age of 6 to 13, she attended the Jacksonville State School for the Blind, mecca for Illinois' 4,000 sightless, and then entered Sheridan grammar school in Chicago, later attending Bowen High school, where she completed the four year course in three and a half years.

"The only difference in my life and that of others," she said reflectively, "was that I had to be more careful. Certainly it was far from grim or hollow."

Her husband, Carmen, a storekeeper, also is blind. Like her, he enjoys dancing, sound movies, and swimming. They both feel strongly that a chance for life, no matter how slim, should not be disregarded.

A Mother Who Lost, Speaks.

Another Chicago mother, one who lost her baby twenty-one years ago because physicians deliberated too long over the "mercy death" angel, also urged yesterday that the Colan baby at least be given an opportunity to live.

She is Mrs. Evelyn Metter, 42 years old, now a widow, who lives with her five daughters at 653 West 61st street. Her first baby was born in 1917 with a diminutive brain, a missing upper skull cap and misshapen limbs. Immediate operation might have prolonged its life, but physicians demurred. And the baby died twelve hours later.

"I know just what Dr. and Mrs. Colan are going through," Mrs. Metter said sadly, "but I think they should do everything they can to give their baby a chance."

BABY HAS RIGHT TO LIVE, SAYS HELEN KELLER

New York, May 7.—[U. P.]—Helen Keller, who conquered blindness and deafness to enjoy life, today telegraphed Dr. and Mrs. Herman Colan urging that their baby be given every chance to live, although it may mean a life of complete blindness.

"The child has a right to every fighting chance," she wired. "I would suggest X-ray treatment be tried. I understand it has been successful. The operation is mandatory if it brings Helaine health.

"Blindness is not the greatest evil. It is only a physical handicap which Helaine's mind can overcome. That is life. Her father's heart is the best guide in this tragic, delicate problem. My tenderest sympathy and prayers."

Physicians to Decide Baby,s Fate

Residents of Home for Blind Urge Chance at Life for Baby

BY GREER WILLIAMS.

If Baby Helaine Colan's life can be saved by removing her eyes, she could still achieve a happy, useful existence. This is the opinion of residents of the Illinois industrial home for the blind, who yesterday reviewed their own lives of blindness since infancy.

They agreed, moreover, that Baby Helaine—if surgery should save her from the fatal effect of retinal glioma—would find it much easier to adapt herself to a sightless life than persons who go blind after learning to cope with their environment by eye.

It is almost an axiom with them that one can't miss something he never had.

Find Opportunities Better.

The 90 blind persons living in the home, Marshall boulevard at 19th street, are, on the whole, not only certain that their lives have not been worthless, but also that the blind children of today have much finer opportunities for succeeding in life, because of the special teaching methods now provided them.

As Edward Dement, 47 years old, blind since two weeks old, puts it: "It's a pretty tough proposition to battle the world blind. I don't know what the sensation of seeing is, so I just take what comes and try to make the best of a bad job."

Mr. Dement helps support himself by playing the piano at dances and luncheons. One of the hardest tasks he remembers was learning to walk. He finally gained this ability between the ages of 4 and 5.

Long Career for Woman.

Miss Isabelle Elliott, 47, born blind in England and reared in Canada by foster parents, has had a long career of singing, lecturing, teaching, and study. Her education in schools for the blind in Canadian public schools and a branch of the University of Ontario developed her dramatic and vocal ability and understanding of French, Latin, and Spanish. Until the movies gained their popularity, she found no difficulty in getting singing engagements. Now she is a Braille proofreader.

"When I had a garden in Canada I learned the flowers by touch," she said. "Sometimes in my studies of astronomy I wish I could see the stars, but it can't be helped and I don't waste time regretting it."

James Adair, 51, born blind, who learned to play the piano and trumpet at Jacksonville, said: "If it is possible, there are a lot of things for that baby to live for, even if blind. Facilities for teaching, such as talking books and the radio, have increased so much since I came to the home in 1912."

Asks No Coddling of Blind.

John Peardon, 64, switchboard operator and librarian at the home for thirty-eight years, practically blind since infancy, said the main thing in rearing a blind child is not to coddle it. "He should be taught to be self-sustaining," he said.

Cecil Howard, 46, blind since he was 2 weeks old, admitted that learning is harder for blind persons, since they must rely on their memory far more than those who see. He appraised his life as happy in some ways, unhappy in others.

Edward J. Komorous, managing officer of the home, pointed out that few of those who are blind from infancy are bitter over their handicap, although people who can see have far better chances of succeeding to support themselves.

YOUNG RUSHTON HURT TRYING TO CHASE DOG INTO A 3 FOOT SEWER

Because he is an agile dog, Pete ran into a three foot storm sewer at the Clark street beach in Evanston very easily yesterday. But because he forgot to duck as he followed him in their game, Pete's master, Joseph A. Rushton Jr., 30 years old, 1125 Sheridan road, Evanston, incurred a painful head injury. Rushton, whose father is a partner in the brokerage firm of Babcock, Rushton & Co., was taken to the Evanston hospital.

county jail in Chicago in 1926 and kept the post until 1929, when his health broke and he committed suicide at the home of a relative in South Bend. His collapse was attributed to pressure of politicians for jobs in the jail.

Blame Corruption for Escapes.

Many of the seventy escapes during Kunkel's régime, four of them major breaks, were attributed to corruption among the political henchmen with whom Kunkel was forced to replace veteran guards.

"The periodic escapes from the penitentiary, the reformatory, and the prison farm are a natural result of the system of graft and corruption which permeates Indiana's government," said Otto Ray, sherif of Marion county, this week.

"As an experienced police officer, I can predict that misgovernment at the state institutions will continue so long as the present crooked political system remains in power."

Under Fire Many Times.

Kunkel was under fire several times while he was warden. On Sept. 26, 1933, ten felons, the nucleus of the John Dillinger gang, escaped. On April 23, 1934, four convicts, three of them murderers, strolled away from the prison farm. Three days later a lifer disappeared from the prison. Then another convict escaped while attending a funeral. On July 28, 1934, five gunmen broke out. On Feb. 20, 1937, four convicts hid in a box car but were caught before the car left the yards. On July 4, 1937, two more convicts escaped. Five others sawed their way out last Feb. 10. Last Monday four more escaped.

Numerous other less sensational escapes and walkaways from the penal institutions occurred during the five years.

Start Search for New Warden.

Last fall an investigation resulted in the discharge of the chief clerk of the prison and the superintendents of two farms. Then the state welfare department began looking for a new warden, but none could readily be found who would take the $4,000 a year job because of the political strings that were attached to it.

Kunkel's first big worry, soon after he became warden and had been forced to install the politician guards, was the escape of the ten convicts, part of whom became the Dillinger gang. Armed with pistols smuggled into the prison shirt factory in boxes of buttons, the killers beat and shot their way to freedom and separated into smaller gangs.

Among these ten were Harry Pierpont and John Hamilton, who later went to Lima, O., shot and killed Sherif Jess Sarber of Allen county and freed Dillinger, who was said to have engineered their escape before he had been arrested and placed in the Lima jail.

Outlaws Kill Policeman.

Others of the felons fled to various parts of the middle west. Some were captured and several were killed, but not until one had slain an Indiana state policeman and another had killed a civilian in a robbery.

The Dillinger gang, with the nucleus of escaped prisoners and a dozen other recruits, parolees, and ex-convicts, roamed the country robbing and killing until Dillinger finally was slain July 22, 1934, when he left a theater in Chicago and walked into a trap set by Indiana police and federal agents. Dillinger had been paroled from the Michigan City prison a few weeks before Kunkel became warden.

After the escape of the Dillinger gang, the flight of others became almost weekly occurrences. In many cases the prisoners were caught within a few hours after their absence was noticed and no report of the incident was made public.

A tunnel 36 feet long and 12 feet underground was discovered Aug. 17, 1935. Four men had been digging for two months and were storing the dirt in sugar sacks in an air shaft.

Two weeks ago another tunnel was discovered. It would have led directly outside the prison walls if the convicts who were digging it had not miscalculated and dug beneath the clerk's office.

Escape plots of major importance were foiled in 1936. In May two automatic pistols were found in the prison yard. They had been tossed over the wall to two convicts. These two were placed in solitary confinement for a time and things within the prison became quiet until Aug. 8, when a cache of 18 sticks of dynamite was found in the prison.

When the four convicts escaped in April of 1934 Gov. McNutt dismissed the incident with the remark, "'Tis spring."

500 FARMERS VOTE TO OPPOSE U. S. CROP RULE

Form Bureau County Unit of Corn League.

BY HOMER NEISZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Princeton, Ill., May 7.—[Special.]—Five hundred farmers voted unanimously tonight in the Princeton High school auditorium to oppose the government's crop limitation program and to form a Bureau county branch of the newly formed Corn Belt Liberty league.

The league, which was founded April 27 at Macomb, Ill., already has a large membership and Tilden J. Burg of Sciota, its president, told the Bureau county farmers tonight that the movement was spreading.

"I have had hundreds of letters from farmers all over the country," said Burg, "and they are urging that they be given a chance to protest in some effective way against governmental control of the farmers' business."

Criticizes Farm Bureau.

Another speaker, Arthur H. Booth of Princeton, sharply criticized the American Farm Bureau federation for its promotion of the unpopular law.

"I blame the bureau," he said, "for having this law passed. I don't think the measure suits the farmers—certainly not the corn farmers. It may be all right for cotton producers, but it's all wrong for us."

Carl Dawson of Lamoille presided at the meeting which was transferred to the high school when it became apparent that no room in the courthouse would accommodate the crowd. He was elected the president of the new county branch of the league and Joseph Peterson, who is state's attorney of Bureau county, was made secretary treasurer.

Step Toward Dictatorship.

"This law is being jammed down our throats," asserted Dawson, "and we are going to oppose it. It is a step toward dictatorship."

Although the attendance at the organization meeting was held down by a cold rain during the afternoon, those who were present said that corn producers all over the county were opposed to the AAA control of their destinies and would gladly join. Dawson pointed out that the rebellion of the farmers was spontaneous and predicted that it would include the whole corn belt in a short time.

The Rev. Henry Bloomer of Macomb told the meeting that he didn't believe in giving subsidies to farmers and at the same time take away their freedom to produce. The vast majority of his neighbors, he asserted, felt the same way.

Burg recalled that there were already effective league organizations in McDonough and Warren counties and that representative farm leaders in nearly one-fifth of all Illinois counties have approved its principles.

Asks Corporation Charter.

Springfield, Ill., May 7.—[U. P.]—The Corn Belt Liberty league, organized by protesting farmers to combat the federal crop control program, today applied to Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes for a corporation charter.

The organization was formed by McDonough county farmers three weeks ago to protest Agricultural Adjustment administration corn allotments and is seeking support throughout Illinois and in other states.

The corporation will have offices in Macomb. Its directors will be Tilden J. Burg and Merle Keys, both of Sciota; O. L. Taft, Prairie City; James R. Barkley, Macomb; George W. Foley, Genesee; Andrew Yeart, Good Hope, and Perry L. Williams, Colmar.

Wisconsin Farmers Rebel.

Monroe, Wis., May 7.—[Special.]—Farmers of Green county who raise corn as one of their principal crops, are registering vigorous protests with the county agricultural adjustment administration over the corn crop curtailment ordered by the United States department of agriculture. The farmers complain that corn acreage for this county has been cut up to 15 per cent in some cases and that their benefits will be cut accordingly. Many farmers have indicated they will not participate in the crop control program but will raise as much corn as they see fit.

Holds Motherhood Adds Charm

Joan Blondell became a mother three and one-half years ago and now is expecting another child.

Norma Shearer's child is more than 7 years old, so there is quite a difference in ages here.

Virginia Bruce's child is nearly 5 years old. She's quite demure in the "before" picture.

2 CONGRESSMEN FAIL TO SPEAK TO DEFY HAGUE

65,000 Are Disappointed at Jersey City.

Jersey City, N. J., May 7.—(AP)—Vito Marcantonio, president of the International Labor Defense, announced Representatives Jerry J. O'Connell [D., Mont.] and John T. Bernard [F.L., Minn.] would not come to Journal square tonight where massed thousands gathered to witness their threat to defy a city ordinance prohibiting public speechmaking without a permit.

Marcantonio, after conferring with the representatives in New York for several hours, said they insisted on speaking. But, as president of the I. L. D., he said, "I cannot permit innocent people to face certain bloodshed, violence, and perhaps death at the hands of a mob incited to do violence by Mayor [Frank] Hague through his various henchmen."

Scheduled as Guests.

"I have now advised and urged them not to attend that meeting, and I take full responsibility for so doing," said Marcantonio who explained O'Connell and Bernard were "guests" of the I. L. D. to speak at the anti-Hague rally.

After the announcement that the speeches had been called off, supporters of Hague paraded in triumphant celebration.

A crowd estimated at 65,000 had assembled early in the evening to witness the showdown promised by the I. L. D. on the right of free speech in Jersey City.

While the crowd waited, bands of veterans' organizations played martial airs and a parade snaked through the press of people carrying bobbing placards denouncing communism, and praising Mayor Frank Hague.

Policemen in Abundance.

There were police in abundance, ten feet apart with night sticks swinging idly or held under their arms, but it was difficult to pick them out as the throng increased and the evening deepened.

Director of Public Safety Daniel J. Casey, who denied a permit for the meeting, said "There will be no speech-making here," as he directed 300 policemen on duty in the square.

Except for an incident early in the afternoon when one of five men distributing circulars advertising the massmeeting reported he was punched in the face by a man who fled before arrival of police, authorities said there were no disturbances beyond a little pushing and pulling by some over-enthusiastic onlookers.

Severely Beaten, but Routs Assailant with His Pistol

Quick work with his revolver enabled Thomas Camilletti to rout an assailant last night in the garage back of his home at 5329 Winona street. Camilletti, 48 years old, owner of a fruit market at 6105 Addison street, drove into the garage after closing hours. As he started to leave a man appeared from the shadows and struck him on the head with a club. They struggled, and Camilletti was hit several more times. Finally he drew a gun and fired four shots. The clubber fled. Camilletti was taken to the Swedish Covenant hospital.

WOMEN LEADERS RAP POLITICS IN SCHOOL SYSTEMS

A resolution deploring what were termed "conditions responsible for a breakdown of confidence" in the Chicago public schools was adopted yesterday at a five state conference of the American Association of University Women in the Palmer house. The resolution, presented by Mrs. Lawrence W. Prouty of La Grange, said such conditions are detrimental to the free development of education. It urged adherence to the merit system in selecting teachers and principals, complete separation of examining boards and other certifying agencies from political interference, and the safeguarding of tax funds available for education so that as large a portion as possible might go for instruction.

ETHIOPIAN TRIBES UNITE; PUSH WAR AGAINST ITALY

Huge Sections of Country Still Unconquered.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 7.—The following dispatch was sent exclusively to the Paris office of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE by J. R. Pecheral, French newspaper man, who has just returned from an adventurous journey in southwestern Ethiopia.

Slipping into Ethiopia by way of Kenya and Lake Rudolf and guided by a native interpreter to whom he had been given letters of introduction by exiled Ethiopian chieftains, Pecheral traveled through the still unconquered portions of the country and lived with native raiders who continue to carry on guerrilla warfare against the Italians.

In this message Pecheral analyzes the grave difficulties accumulating for Premier Mussolini in East Africa, supplementing his own observations in rebel territory with information available through diplomatic sources in Kenya and Djibouti. Another story of his adventures will appear in an early edition.

BY J. R. PECHERAL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DJIBOUTI, French Somaliland, [by mail to Paris.]—When the league of nations council in Geneva, at the instigation of Great Britain, authorizes its members to recognize the Italian conquest of Ethiopia it will not be accepting another accomplished fact but will be making Premier Mussolini a legal gift of territories which he has not in fact conquered.

In addition to troublesome guerrilla warfare in theoretically pacified sections of the country, which is proving a serious drain on the Italian conquerers, there is still a big area in the wild, southwest part of Ethiopia which has not been pacified at all—which has not even been conquered yet in any sense of the word.

Native Capital at Gore.

There is still at Gore an independent native capital with a formal government claiming jurisdiction over all tribes in this section and at least 50,000 armed men.

Rains prevented me from reaching Gore itself, so my evidence on this point is only hearsay, but I did travel through a large part of independent Ethiopia and can testify that the Italians have not occupied this area and that the natives there still acknowledge the sovereignty of the Gore government.

Throughout the former realms of the exiled former Emperor Haile Selassie, as a whole, the situation is as follows:

Moslems Back Italians.

The same is true for the province of Harrar, the richest part of Ethiopia. Fascist officials have followed here an intelligent policy which has won them the loyalty of the Moslem population, although recently some discontent has been noted.

In Danakil, the Italians have nominal control, having established friendly relations with the sultan, who supplies them with native troops. Like the soldiers of former Emperor Selassie, however, the Italians rarely venture into the Danakil country themselves.

In Ogaden, the Italians are encountering serious difficulties, being constantly harassed by guerrillas. Because of the flat nature of the country, their punitive expeditions have no difficulty in dispersing concentrations of rebels, but the Italians cannot maintain effective military occupation of the province as a whole.

Natives Unite Against Invader.

All efforts to pacify the warlike nomadic tribes have failed, and it is even reported that for the first time in history they have forgotten internal quarrels and have solidly united against the invader. As a result of the incessant guerrilla warfare in Ogaden, the Italians cannot maintain communications between Ethiopia and Italian Somaliland.

There still is something like an army operating against the Italians here, though the natives lack light artillery and machine guns and some of them even are without rifles. They also are short of ammunition.

Gives Britain an Advantage.

This throws some light on the Italian-British accord signed recently in Rome, for it cannot be denied that England could punish Italy severely for any violation of the pact by supplying the Gore army with machine guns and ammunition.

Despite these handicaps the Ethiopians have so far succeeded in keeping the Italians at bay. The main reason is that they have mastered the technic of guerrilla warfare and never offer a fixed front to the rare Italian expeditionary forces. They have learned how to scatter and take cover from air raids and avoid poison gas bombs which the Italians still use extensively in this region.

The Italians, for their part, seem to have abandoned any attempt to occupy this region. They content themselves with sending small patrols of native troops, who frequently are ambushed and cut to pieces.

Natives Raid Italian Areas.

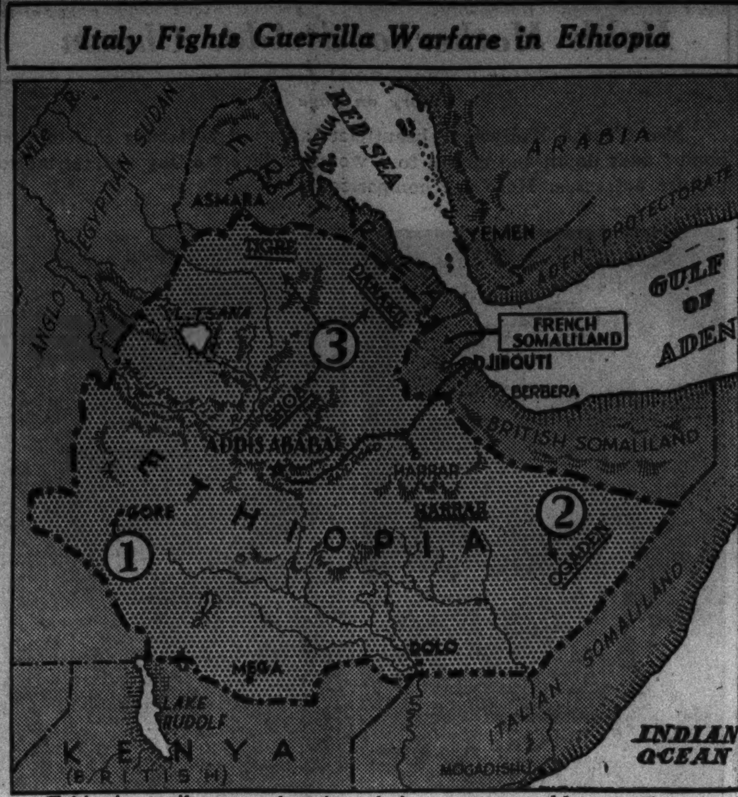
The Ethiopians, in addition to holding off the Italians from the independent areas, make frequent raids in small bands into Italian territory. They avoid contact with anything except isolated outposts, but they wreak havoc on crops, burning grain and slaughtering cattle. Adventurous bands of natives sometimes raid almost up to the outskirts of Addis Ababa, capital of the country.

Their tactics are so successful that this year's cereal harvest is less than 30 per cent of normal. The Italians are unable to live off the land and have to import supplies from Europe at great cost.

The Italians still are acutely hampered by a lack of communications. They are working hard at road building, but are making slow progress. Native raiders repeatedly cut roads at points thought to be safe.

And the Italians have grave difficulty in obtaining a sufficient supply of native workers for roads. To make up for this shortage they have recruited heavily in Yemen, across the Red sea in Arabia, but this source of supply appears to be menaced by clumsy and often cruel tactics in handling native labor.

Italy Fights Guerrilla Warfare in Ethiopia



Ethiopian tribesmen, burying their centuries old quarrels among themselves, have united and are pushing a guerrilla war against Italy, a reporter just returned from Premier Mussolini's East African colony reports. The reporter, during an adventurous journey in Ethiopia, found: (1) An independent native capital operates at Gore with a government claiming jurisdiction over all tribes in this section. (2) In Ogaden the Italians are encountering serious difficulties, being constantly harassed by guerrillas. (3) Northwest Ethiopia, notably Shoa and Tigre, is almost entirely under Italian control, while in Danakil the Italians have nominal control.

CHINESE STRIKE IN NO. CHINA TO BREAK JAP HOLD

Mass 13,000 Troops for Attack Near Peking.

SHANGHAI, May 8.—[Sunday.]—(AP)—Chinese guerrilla armies struck today in apparent coördination to break Japan's hold in North China. Chinese sources asserted fully 13,000 irregulars were concentrated at Peking, Japanese held North China city, and had the moral support of the population.

Chinese guerrila troops surrounded Paoting, former Hopei province capital, ninety miles southwest of Peking, the Chinese said. Paoting was under strict Japanese martial law and hundreds of Chinese were reported under arrest after a battle which lasted throughout Thursday night. The Japanese were said to have repulsed the Chinese attacks.

Savage fighting continued at Nantungchow, on the north shore of the Yangtze river sixty miles north of Shanghai, an important supply base for a Japanese army of 10,000 striking north through Kiangsu province toward the east-west Lunghai railroad.

A Japanese garrison of 300 there was said to face annihilation by 3,000 Chinese guerrilla troops which caught the Japanese unaware.

Penetrate Hopei Province.

Chinese said units of their 68th army had penetrated into southeastern Hopei province after smashing Japanese lines north of Tsinan, the Japanese held capital of Shantung.

The thrusts, they said, were made at Pingyuan and Yucheng, both in Shantung, fifty-two and thirty-two miles, respectively, north of Tsinan, with the aid of local irregulars.

Japanese war planes operated over a wide area in attempts to break openings for Japanese forces to take the offensive. Several Chinese troop trains were bombed in southern Shantung province, Japanese said, and Chinese heavy artillery emplacements were damaged south of Tancheng on the deadlocked central front.

Real Rainy Season Yet to Come.

Drenching rains strengthened the ponderous obstacles Chinese forces have raised against Japan's conquest of China. On the main front in southern Shantung province and in other sectors, roads were softened and trenches flooded, crippling the mechanized forces on which Japan's army relies.

The real rainy season has not yet started and foreign military observers predicted increasing difficulty for the Japanese if roads become impassable.

The Japanese, however, blamed the "slow" progress on the central front to China's advantages in numerical strength and its possession of strong, natural defense positions.

A Japanese military dispatch from the Shantung front today said the body of a soviet Russian officer had been found at Yuwangshan, which Japanese troops occupied May 4.

The implication was that soviet officers are aiding Chinese troops fighting in South Shantung. This was believed to be the first time the Japanese have said any foreigners, other than flyers, were fighting with the Chinese.

FOREIGN CHIEF WARNS JAPS TO BE READY FOR EXTREME SACRIFICES

TOKIO, May 7.—(AP)—Foreign Minister Koki Hirota called on the Japanese people today to prepare for "possible extreme personal financial sacrifices" to achieve victory in the Chinese war. He added that "no optimistic view of the future is waranted."

The foreign minister's comments, hinting at delays retarding the Japanese offensive on the central Chinese front, were made in a lengthy review of Japan's foreign relations. He spoke at the closing sessions of a conference of provincial governors.

Hirota paid tribute to the consistently neutral attitude of the United States.

"It is a matter for congratulation that friendly relations have been maintained despite the deplorable Panay tragedy," Hirota said in reference to the sinking of the United States gunboat by Japanese forces in China.

REBELS ADVANCE ON MADRID ROAD IN EASTERN SPAIN

Pierce Loyalist Lines; Open Valencia Drive.

HENDAYE, France [at the Spanish frontier], May 7.—Spanish insurgents tore a gap through government defenses in eastern Spain today and advanced five miles nearer the "lifeline" highway link between Madrid and the Mediterranean ports of Castellon de la Plana and Valencia.

Insurgent commanders reported the government line was broken forty miles north and slightly west of Castellon where they captured the town of Portell, deep in a pocket protecting the government's central coast lines.

Official advices said the town was taken by insurgent troops under Gen. Garcia Valino which pushed on to the southwest from Cinctorres, a village they captured yesterday.

Drive Toward Valencia.

Coördinated with this movement was a drive directly south by insurgent coastal columns. Valencia and Castellon were the object of both operations.

The double thrust to broaden the insurgent foothold on the eastern coast and close two gateways for supplies into the larger of the two segments of government territory broke the curving front of the defenders from Teruel eastward to the sea.

Insurgent dispatches reported heavy government losses as one rebel column routed Gen. Jose Miaja's "Milicianos" from mountain positions at bayonet point.

Battle in Olive Orchards.

The defenders tried to slip through the advancing insurgent line, but Franco's machine gunners drove them back into the shelter of olive orchards on the terraced farms that formed the battleground, reports said.

Spring rains and windstorms harassed the insurgents, but dispatches from them said the offensive continued.

A government battalion was reported destroyed as Navarrese troops cut through the east-west highway linking Alcala de Chisvert and Cuevas de Rinroma, less than thirty miles north of Castellon.

COMET MISSING 11 YEARS BOBS UP AGAIN IN THE SKY

Cambridge, Mass., May. 7.—[Special.]—Gale's comet, "missing" for eleven years, has been rediscovered, L. E. Cunningham, astronomer at the Harvard observatory, said today. The comet is at a point low in the southeastern sky, about ten degrees above the horizon.

The comet, invisible to the human eye, was first found June 7, 1927, by Walter F. Gale, an Australian. Then it disappeared, but its return was forecast for this spring. Harvard observers found it.

SCIENTISTS HUNT KEY TO MYSTERY OF DWARF SUNS

Small Heavyweights Found by Chance.

Williams Bay, Wis., May 7.—(AP)—Scientists at the University of Chicago's Yerkes observatory today outlined a four-faceted project which may disclose a preponderance of small, excessively dense stars in the universe.

Such a preponderance would mean that the earth is surrounded by heavenly bodies which are far hotter than the sun and of such terrific weight that a cubic inch of their gas weighs a ton. [That's right! A cubic inch weighs one ton.]

These small heavyweights of the universe—known to science as "white dwarfs"—always have been a mystery to astronomers, Dr. Otto Struve, Russian-born director of the observatory, explained, and the purpose of the Yerkes study is to solve this mystery.

"Our problem," he said, "will be to try to discover all the white dwarfs in existence in a certain volume of space, a sphere, say, of 50 or 100 light years. This work is in the charge of Dr. G. P. Kuiper of the Yerkes staf.

"At present astronomers don't know how frequent these white dwarfs are, or whether they are freaks or common bodies. The nine or ten known white dwarfs have been discovered by chance, mostly by Dr. Kuiper.

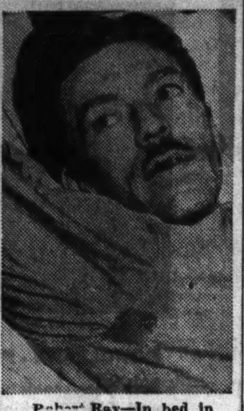
"It is entirely conceivable that the white dwarfs are the normal type of structure in the universe and that stars like our sun are the less common. Although some of the dwarfs are no larger than the earth, they represent a tremendous density of matter."

YANK RECOUNTS AIR SERVICE WITH SPANISH REBELS

Served as Personal Pilot for Gen. Franco.

(The story of The Lost Battalion, besieged for five days by the Germans in the Argonne, appears in today's Graphic section.)

Robert David Ray, world war veteran and professional soldier of fortune, yesterday recounted a life of adventure which he said included fourteen months as an aviator for the rebels in the Spanish war, during which he served as personal pilot for Generalissimo Francisco Franco.



Robert Ray—In bed in in Hines Hospital.

Ray, whose thirty-ninth birthday is today, was interviewed in the Hines veterans' hospital, where he is being treated for an old injury incurred in a crackup in Florida in 1929. Once recovered, Ray said, he hopes to fly for Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek and the Chinese nationalist army.

Served in World War.

Six feet tall and red haired, Ray is the son of an Eagle Pass, Tex., rancher, a member of the United States border patrol who was killed by smugglers in 1932. During the world war Ray served in five major engagements, was wounded twice, and won the Distinguished Service Cross and the Croix de Guerre with palm.

After a reënlistment term in the army Ray said he became a commercial pilot for oil companies in Central and South America, a manager of a rice plantation in Malay, and later a United States mail pilot. At the outbreak of the Spanish civil war he sailed from Mexico, landed in Spain, and went to work for the rebels for a promised salary of $1,500 a month.

"Franco promised all the foreign flyers a grant of land if the rebels were victorious," Ray said. "Personally I liked him. He always treated me well. Of course I was not too friendly with him, but I count him as a close friend. Because of my ability to speak Spanish, and because he took a liking to me, I was chosen to be his personal pilot."

Plane Shot Down in Flames.

Ray's first major engagement, he continued, was the rebel drive on Alcazar, in which there was "dog fighting" in the skies almost daily. In April, 1937, he was shot down. Although his plane was in flames, he landed safely behind his own lines.

Ray admitted he had met "Whitey" Dahl, the American loyalist flyer, when Dahl was shot down behind the rebel lines. He withheld any comment about Dahl, explaining that Dahl had shot down his [Ray's] best friend, George Tucker, another soldier of fortune, who was with the rebels.

Disgusted with the war last September, Ray said he flew 160 miles across the Portuguese frontier after a dog fight between rebel and loyalist squadrons. The American consul at Lisbon arranged his transport home, and on Oct. 3 he landed at San Francisco, Cal.

HITLER AND DUCE VOW FRIENDSHIP 'FOR ALL TIME'

Germany Renounces All Claim to Tyrol.

with equity for all a more effective guarantee of justice, security, and peace."

The place chosen for the banquet well may have caused Hitler to reflect upon the ironies of history. An Austrian by birth, he probably recalled that Palazzo Venezia at one time was owned by Austria and was used as the embassy for envoys to the holy see, with which Nazi relations now are strained. He may have reflected, too, that this magnificent palace would be German property had not Italy confiscated it in 1916 in reprisal for Austria's bombardment of Venice.

Tonight's activities came at the close of the most tranquil day Hitler has enjoyed since he arrived in Italy Tuesday night. After rain caused postponement of a scheduled air force and artillery demonstration, Der Fuehrer went on a sightseeing trip.

Has a Look at Vatican City.

He had a quick look at St. Peter's and Vatican City as his automobile sped through the new Avenue of Conciliation—named in commemoration of the settlement of differences between the church and Italy.

From his car he could see the windows of Pope Pius' private apartments, untenanted since the pope left for his summer residence at Castel Gandolfo three days before Hitler's arrival.

The Vatican museum was closed "until further orders," but museum officials said they did not know why.

On his tour through the countryside around Rome, Der Fuehrer saw drenched cattle with sodden decorations on their horns, drawn up along the roads for his inspection.

When he returned to the city he went back a second time to visit the Augustin exposition depicting the glories of ancient imperial Rome. Then, under the guidance of Minister of Education Giuseppe Bottai, he went to Campidoglio, the capitol, and spent some time viewing its paintings and sculptures.

Talked to Duce Two Hours.

He spent two hours in conversations with Italian leaders preparatory to tonight's speeches. After talking in private for an hour, Hitler and Mussolini called in their foreign ministers, Von Ribbentrop and Count Galeazzo Ciano, and the conversations continued for another hour.

The chief topic was reported to have been a possible four power pact involving France, Great Britain, Germany and Italy. German sources said Hitler indicated willingness to join such a pact, but left no doubt that he considered it essential that Italian-French and German-British agreements precede a four power pact.

German sources also said Mussolini had agreed to give Germany a free hand in Czechoslovakia so far as Italy is concerned. Il Duce was reported to have expressed hope Germany would be able to iron out its differences with Czechoslovakia "on its own strength."

Charges Betrayal

[Associated Press Wirephoto.]
GAYE MELTON.

Los Angeles, May 7.—(AP)—Gaye Melton, a show girl, filed a $200,000 suit in Superior court today charging William Koenig, motion picture executive, seduced her on a palatial yacht near Catalina Island last June. She asked $100,000 on the seduction charge and $100,000 for breach of promise.

The complaint said Miss Melton learned Koenig's representations of intent to marry her were "for the sole purpose of seducing her."

Koenig formerly was general manager of production at Universal studios.

Miss Melton maintained she still is willing to marry Koenig. She is employed occasionally as an extra at Universal. Miss Melton, a blue-eyed blonde, was said by a representative of Universal to be about 24 years old and formerly a resident of Detroit.

SUPREME COURT HEAD OF AUSTRIA OUSTED BY NAZIS

Eight Other High Judges Also Are Dismissed.

VIENNA, May 7.—(AP)—Austrians who imagined that sweeping changes in their official and private lives had been almost completed were told today that real Nazification was still to come.

Joseph Buerckel, federal commissioner for union of Austria with Germany, announced that Austrian pioneer Nazis, and especially those who were imprisoned or fled the country during the previous régime, now were privileged to hold the highest positions in the state and party.

Buerckel's statement came as he dismissed Felix Schubert, president of the Austrian Supreme court, and eight other high judges and replaced them with Nazis.

80,000 "Heroes" Await Jobs.

It was estimated at party headquarters here that some 80,000 Nazi heroes were awaiting suitable jobs. Many important posts were expected to be filled next week when Austria is divided into seven party districts.

In addition to these "only for party members" positions, thousands were expected to be opened to Austrians who will replace Jews in business.

Austrian labor statistics showed that unemployment had dropped from 300,000 to 206,000 since March. Germany annexed Austria on March 13. Labor officials were confident that construction of new airports, military barracks, highways and industrial enterprises soon would wipe out unemployment entirely.

Pensioning of elderly and unreliable municipal and state officials was considered the easiest way to furnish posts for Nazi veterans.

Plan to Emigrate Jews.

Responsible government officials said plans for mass emigration of Austrian Jews were almost completed.

"One difficulty seems to be the financing of their transportation to the port of immigration," one official said. "That, however, is a problem for the world's Jewry to worry about."

Frank Stertin, Austrian press chief of the propaganda ministry, said reports circulating in the foreign press that hundreds of Jews were committing suicide in Vienna every week were "gravely exaggerated."

"Only 360 Jews have attempted or committed suicide in the last two months," he said. "This number, however, bears no comparison with the many thousands of Aryan Austrians who by cruel Jewish methods were driven to desperation and death in recent years."

The whereabouts of some of the Austrians who once were prominent in politics is a topic of whispered coffee house gossip.

Officials confirmed reports that Dr. Stefan Mueller, former editor in chief of the Vienna Neue Freie Presse, had committed suicide.

FRANCE AND BRITAIN URGE CZECHOSLOVAKIA TO YIELD TO GERMANY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, May 7.—Sir Nevile Henderson, British ambassador to Berlin, today informed the German foreign office that the British and French ministers in Prague, Czechoslovakia, had called upon Dr. Kamil Krofta, Czech foreign minister. They acquainted him with Anglo-French proposals for a peaceful solution of the Sudeten German [Nazi] minority problem.

It is understood that the English and French representatives advised the Czech foreign minister to meet the Sudeten German demands "as far as this is compatible with the interests of state." The Sudeten Germans demand self-rule.

Official Nazi circles here denied reports published abroad that Henderson had warned the German Government against military action in Czechoslovakia. "Military action," a foreign office spokesman said, "is out of the question. Such a warning would have been regarded as an unfriendly action and would not have been accepted by the German government."

SPLIT UP EMPIRE, MOVE TO CANADA, IS BRITON'S PLAN

Give Colonies to Hitler, Young Writer Urges.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 7.—Every time Reichsfuehrer Hitler mentions colonies the British imperialists grow purple. They have just been given new ideas for clubroom discussion in a book by R. A. Piddington, young London schoolmaster, whose contribution to imperial defense is a suggestion that colonies be handed back to Germany and that king, parliament, premier, and population be shipped off to Canada, leaving half-derelict London in charge of a resident governor.

Schoolmaster Piddington, who is 32 years old, is no empire authority, but a former insurance man who studied after office hours for his B. A. degree. He presents his imperial theories with the foreword: 'Since my name does not end in -sky or -stein, or -macher, it is obvious that I have not the first qualification to discuss the future of the British empire."

U. S. Professor Assists.

On the next page of his provocative volume he acknowledges having had assistance from Prof. Raymond Pearl of Johns Hopkins university, Baltimore, Md.; Dr. James A. Williamson, maritime historian and empire development expert, and his father, A. H. Piddington, "for much patient research at the British museum."

Like many an empire statesman Piddington finds present imperial defense problems a headache. Scattered through five continents, held together by slender ocean lifelines, and still more nebulous threads of loyalty to a common crown, the British empire is vulnerable to attack from every side, he writes. So wide spread are its interests that a policy of isolation is impossible. The tempting baits offered by its vast empty areas are in themselves sufficient to insure that Britain will be involved in the next major war.

Piddington thinks that the British empire is a lot more worry than it is worth. Overpopulated India, he believes, is bound sooner or later to explode and Britain should therefore leave it to the Indians now with good grace.

Next step would be to give up the empire's possessions in Africa.

The remainder of the empire would consist of Canada, Australia, New Zealand, British Isles, West Indies, and the Union of South Africa.

Both Canada and Australia are countries where agriculture predominates over industry. In Britain industry predominates over agriculture. To balance this out Piddington would mobilize all national resources for conducting large scale migration of British industry and people to Canada and Australia. This could be carried out peaceably, as the aggressor countries would be busily engaged grabbing the abandoned areas.

HITLER PROMISES EVERY WORKER A HOME OF HIS OWN

Nazis Lure People with Grandiose Scheme.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, May 7.—The Germany of the future—a country in which every German worker and peasant owns his own home and lives largely on the products of his own garden—is being painted in glowing colors by the German Labor Front and the Nazi party.

Small down payments, easy monthly instalments, and anywhere from fifteen to thirty-five years to pay are the inducements held out to the German man on the street in an effort to win his coöperation in the building of a "Germany supported on two pillars: the farmer and the worker."

Nazis Paint Pretty Pictures.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler's "own your own home" campaign is being pushed with all the power of the enormous propaganda machine of the party.

Attractive little homes in settings of green fields and shady woods, the lure of coming home to a dinner of self raised, self cooked vegetables, the advantages of a side income of around $14 a month from the sale of silk worms, bees, rabbits, goats, pigs, furs, and garden products, and the possibility of raising a large family in healthy country surroundings far from the dust and smoke of the city—all these and more are examples of the methods used by the Nazis in their efforts to "get the German worker closer to the soil."

The city of the future, as envisioned in the Third Reich, will be composed of a business center, surrounded by residential sections. Outside the city proper will be the workers' settlements — village communities which will be entirely self-dependent.

Call City Influences "Evil."

"The worker must be away from the evil influences of the big city," settlement officials say.

From his suburban home, the settler will go to work each morning on fast suburban trains, buses, on his motorcycle or bicycle, or, when the dream of the "people's car" is fulfilled, in his own automobile.

Various types of houses are planned for the settlements. In general, they will be small, one-storied houses with a large attic where the family will sleep. A combination living room and kitchen will form the living quarters. Usually a chicken house and stalls for goats and pigs are built onto the typical home. The average price of such a home will be about $2,000.

Houses Must Be Simple.

"It must be understood," settlement officials say, "that our houses must be simple but well built. A cellar is always necessary. Gables are expensive and not useful. The hearth must be the central heating plant. Stairs will be built in straight lines to save space.

"The barn must be separate from the living quarters—if both are under one roof, they must be divided by a corridor or supply chamber. The building materials must fit in with the characteristics of the landscape. The basic demand is that German materials must be used."

The selection of the settlers who will be pioneers of the future Germany is to be carried out according to strict principles. The worker must be "racially unobjectionable, since he is being given German soil for his own"; he must be able to show a record of steady employment, preferably with one firm, and he "must be a lover of animals and nature and willing to work, since he takes upon himself the duty of tilling the soil and taking care of his land."

LONDON, May 7.—The arrival of two sons, Joseph Jr., and John from the United States in June will complete the London household of Ambassador and Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy. They came to London with five of their children on March 2, and a few days ago welcomed two more to the fold, Rosemary, 19 years old, and Eunice, 16.

Holy Land Terrorist Chief Slain in Battle with Police

JERUSALEM, May 7.—(AP)—Issa Battat, identified by police as a terrorist leader responsible for the slaying of J. L. Starkey, a British archæologist, was killed last night in the Hebron area in a pitched battle with police. Starkey was killed on Jan. 10 near Hebron in a holdup.

EDITOR WRITES OBITUARY, THEN LEAPS TO DEATH

SHANGHAI, May 7.—(AP)—Henry Hufner, city editor of the Shanghai Evening Post, plunged to his death early today from the sixth floor of the Navy Y. M. C. A., leaving a self-written obituary for his paper.

The Evening Post published the obituary, which concluded with the statement that the city editor had given the paper "his last scoop."

Hufner's death came less than 24 hours after that of his 23 year old fiancée, Violet Ethel Thompson, who died yesterday after a dental operation. In his obituary, Hufner said he desired to be "with the one girl he ever loved" and requested their bodies be buried together.

WOODRING TALK AROUSES STORM OF NAZI PROTEST

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, May 7.—The recent speech of Harry H. Woodring, United States secretary of war, before the United States Chamber of Commerce, in which he criticized aggression by dictator nations, aroused a storm of indignation in the German press today.

The usually mild toned mouthpiece of the foreign office, the Deutsch Diplomatisch Politsche Korrespondenz, said Woodring's utterances were "provocative and out of place." Other papers accused him of "sword rattling, meddling, ignorance, arrogance, and self-righteousness."

Moving Forward

Marshall Field & Company presents here each day observations and opinions intended to be of interest and value to those it seeks to serve.

TOMORROW AND TOMORROW

By CALEB

TODAY IS Mother's Day—but so is tomorrow. Today is a day of gifts—and memories. Think back to your first memories of mother's face above your bed; of hands tucking the blankets snugly about you; of a voice that filled you with warm and drowsy comfort.

What was she wishing then? What sort of present did she want from you? You were too sleepy to catch, and too young to understand the words that flew to her lips as she looked down at you. But if you had heard and understood, you'd know that all she asked that night was a grown man or woman of whom she could be proud.

If she thought of any other gifts, they were for you. Money meant only the things to keep you healthy, strong and safe; security meant only time enough to set the character that some day would give her the only important gift for which she asked.

It is certain that for herself she asked little or nothing. Today, over other trundle beds, mothers still ask for the gifts that only their children can give. In homes where the trundle bed has long since been taken to the attic, mothers still ask for that same gift. No matter how late it seems to the world, no matter how long she has waited, each mother still cherishes the hope for one gift; good children. To her it is never too late.

It will be well for us all if mothers have their wish today. Honesty, industry, self-reliance, reverence, faith, and courage—these are the essence of each mother's wish for her children. Her role is not an easy one, and her high courage, therefore, the more stimulating.

Mother is the living embodiment of the axiom that "there is only one real tragedy—a failure in human courage." So long as that courage remains in a mother's heart, so long are her children on the road to success and honor, they cannot give up because she will not.

Today telegrams and letters will carry words of affection and reassurance, gifts will change hands. But the gift will lack something unless it carries with it the assurance of the one gift nearest to mother's heart for tomorrow and tomorrow.

KELLY CALLS ON HORNER; GETS PLEDGE OF HELP

Special Session Promised for Chicago Relief.

Congressman Scott W. Lucas for senator. That of the Nash-Kelly organization is its county ticket, including many of the large patronage offices.

The mayor arrived about noon, on the same train with Slattery, who said it merely was a coincidence that he had ridden the same streamliner to the capital. It was raining when Mr. Kelly stepped off, and other passengers took the available taxicabs while he talked with reporters.

Rides with Newspaper Man.

No car from the statehouse was at the station, so, after waiting vainly for several minutes for a cab, the mayor accepted a lift to the executive mansion from one of the newspaper men.

Before entering the car he made it plain that he came here primarily to talk relief, but would be glad to discuss any subjects the governor raised.

Arrived at the mansion, the mayor was admitted by Clarence, the colored butler, and was removing his coat in the reception hall when the governor came down the stairs from the second floor.

"Hello, Ed," he greeted his visitor.

"Hello, governor," the mayor replied.

The two shook hands formally. Then, waving away a camera man, the governor led the mayor into his office. There they remained until luncheon.

At the close of the conference the governor and the mayor took the same train to Chicago, Mr. Horner to make his annual pilgrimage to his mother's grave on Mothers' day.

BRITISH PREMIER TO USE TALKIES TO PUSH POLICIES

LONDON, May 7.—(AP)—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain turned to talking movies today in an effort to popularize his foreign policy of negotiating with the dictators. He sat for the recording of a film speech which will be distributed throughout the country at open-air meetings.

In simple phrases, such as "it takes two to make peace, but only one to make war," Chamberlain explains in the talkies why he thinks Great Britain must enter into negotiations with other countries, even though disliking their policies, in order to remove the causes of war.

This is not the first evidence that the government is anxious to have the British people "understand" the government's foreign policy, which contributed to recent setbacks in by-elections. Recently the marquess of Lothian, Viscount Astor and Viscountess Astor issued statements denying the existence of any pro-Fascist "wire-pulling" in the "Cliveden set," the popular name for the group of notables frequently entertained by Viscountess Astor at her Thames-Side estate, Cliveden.

New High in Cook County Relief

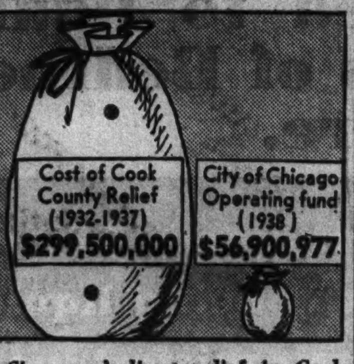
The total number of relief cases, including works progress administration cases, in Cook county this year is the greatest of the depression era. A case usually represents a family, but in some instances is an unattached individual.



Six years' direct relief in Cook county has cost more than five times the amount of the corporate (operating) fund of the city of Chicago for 1938.

CRIME IN COOK COUNTY HIGHER; CONVICTIONS RISE

Crime increased slightly in Cook county during the first four months of 1938, compared with the corresponding period in 1937, but the state's attorney's office and the Criminal court more than met the situation. This was the gist of a report yesterday by First Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert F. Crowley.

Burglary and automobile thefts showed a slight increase and the grand jury reflected the upward crime trend by returning more indictments—849 in the 1938 period, against 788 last year.

On the other hand, convictions were returned in Criminal court in 94 per cent of the cases in the first four months this year, contrasted with convictions in 90 per cent of the cases in the similar 1937 period. More habitual criminals were sentenced, more repeaters were committed, and more robbers were put away. All told, 549 persons were sentenced to prisons in the first part of 1938, against 522 in the corresponding period last year.

DOZENS INJURED IN UNION FIGHT AT CONVENTION

New York, May 7.—(AP)—The convention of the International Pocketbook Workers of America, an A. F. of L. union, got off to a turbulent start today with a fight that resulted in dozens of minor injuries.

Police broke up the mêlée in a West 43d street hotel. About 200 delegates participated. One version of the cause of the fight is that New York delegates tried to prevent the Chicago, midwest and Pacific coast union leaders from entering their delegates. Another version is that the western men tried to "capture" the convention.

Morris Fuchs, 38 years old, of the Bronx, and Samuel Laderman, 28 years old, 417 South Dearborn street, Chicago, were booked on charges of felonious assault.

PREDICT WAGE BILL WILL PASS AT THIS SESSION

Senate Opponents Lack Filibuster Leaders.

BY CHESLY MANLY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 7.—[Special.]—Hope of opponents of the Roosevelt administration's minimum wage and maximum hour bill that it would be killed in the senate dwindled tonight because of a lack of leadership in a threatened senate filibuster against the measure.

The house wage bill was forced out of the rules committee yesterday when a petition calling for it to be brought to the floor was signed by a majority of the membership in the house. There were predictions in well informed senate quarters that the measure will pass.

The house bill will come up for debate on May 23, if not sooner, and concededly will pass in that body. It then will go to the senate, which passed a drastically different scheme for the political regulation of wages and hours last year, and the opportunity for a filibuster in the senate will come when efforts are made to send the two bills to conference.

Lack G. O. P. Support.

Southern Democratic senators have threatened to filibuster against sending the house bill to conference because it provides for no geographical differentials to maintain the advantages of low wage paying southern industries.

It appeared today, however, that no southern Democrat is willing to take the leadership in organizing a filibuster. Southern Democrats who are opposed to the senate bill, and also the house bill, were pessimistic about the possibilities of a filibuster, saying they could not count upon the aid of fifteen Republican senators.

The house bill would require all industries engaged in interstate commerce, as determined by the secretary of labor, to pay a minimum of 25 cents an hour the first year. This figure would be increased automatically by 5 cents a year until the figure of 40 cents an hour is reached. It provides for a maximum work-week of 44 hours, which would be decreased by two hours a year down to 40 hours.

Provides Five Member Board.

The senate bill provides for a five man board which would have power to establish minimum wages by industries and occupations, up to 40 cents an hour and a maximum working week, by industries and occupations of not less than 40 hours.

In any event, the vast differences between the senate and house measures will require prolonged consideration in conference and delay adjournment far beyond the optimistic June 1 hopes heretofore expressed by the senate and house leaders. Conservative predictions now are that adjournment will be delayed until some time between June 15 and July 1, despite the anxiety of members to get back home for their reëlection campaigns.

Sign Revenue Bill Report.

The senate and house conferees on the $5,300,000,000 revenue bill intended to relieve business from destructive taxation approved the final draft of the measure today and signed the conference report, which is expected to be approved by both houses Tuesday. It may be approved in the senate on Monday if unanimous consent to bring it up, without the lying over one day under the rule, can be obtained.

The house will devote the remainder of the week to the administration's $3,000,000,000 spending and lending pump priming bill, which is to supplement the $1,500,000,000 lending authorization already voted for the Reconstruction Finance committee. The pump priming bill is expected to require a week in the senate appropriations committee and two weeks at least on the senate floor, so that its final approval will delay adjournment until well in June.

There still is the possibility that President Roosevelt will further delay adjournment plans by seeking to revive the bill to give him dictatorial powers to reorganize the federal government. Since the house voted to shelve this measure by sending it back to committee, Mr. Roosevelt has pressed his senate leaders to take up a house bill passed last year, containing that part of the program relating to the reshuffling of bureaus, and substitute the sweeping senate measure for the purpose of getting the whole thing in conference.

The senate bill not only would give Mr. Roosevelt blanket authority to transfer, consolidate or abolish some 130 governmental establishments, but would abolish the independent civil service commission and give the President control of the nation's purse strings by transferring the powers of the controler general to the politically responsible budget director.

Senate leaders thus far have manifested no inclination to revive the fight over the reorganization bill, which aroused fears of dictatorship throughout the country and split the Democratic party as wide open as the Supreme court measure did last year.

8 Cent Menu at Relief Banquet

Meal of chuck, potatoes, carrots, onions, bread, oleo, fruit, and coffee—the whole costing 8 cents—was served yesterday at relief gathering in Congress hotel. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Stew Is Main Dish

Fifty persons sat down yesterday to the cheapest luncheon ever served in the Gold room of the Congress hotel. Its cost was itemized at 8 cents by the Illinois Workers Alliance of Cook county, which took this way to point to the asserted need for more funds for its members, all on relief.

The menu read as follows: 3 5-9 ounces of chuck, 4 cents; 5⅓ ounces of potatoes, ⅔ cent; 2 ounces of carrots, ¼ cent; 1⅓ ounces of onions, ⅓ cent [all of which was mixed in a stew]; ⅛ loaf of bread, 1 cent; ½ apple, ½ cent; oleo, 3-10 cent; ¼ ounce of coffee, ¼ cent; 3-10 ounce of sugar, 1-10 cent, and 1-12 can of evaporated milk, 6-10 cent.

This portion was figured from the $28.50 budget of the average relief family of four. It equals 95 cents a day for the whole family. The alliance pointed out, however, that the 8 cents a meal per person would run less where rent or other necessities must be met from food money.

Carmi, Ill., May 7.—[Special.]—Kenneth Dunn, a tenant farmer in Edwards county, today confessed he robbed the First National Bank of Crossville last Monday to obtain money with which to pay a $512 note to a bank in New Harmony, Ind. Dunn showed great nervousness when he approached the Crossville bank cashier and they argued for some time before he accepted $600 and fled.

ESTIMATES 1939 FEDERAL DEFICIT AT 3 BILLIONS

Budget Chief Points to New Relief Programs.

Washington, D. C., May 7.—[Special.]—The administration's proposed relief and recovery program for the fiscal year 1939, beginning next July 1, makes possible a federal deficit of $3,000,000,000 to $4,000,000,000, according to new estimates made public today.

In recent hearings before a house appropriations subcommittee, testimony from which was published today, Daniel W. Bell, acting budget director, estimated that projected expenditures, if used in their entirety, would create a 1939 deficit of $3,722,000,000.

He qualified this with an explanation that probably not all of the appropriations, such as $1,000,000,000 asked for the long term public works, could be expected in that year.

Hopkins Estimates Needs.

However, at the same series of hearings, Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress administrator, estimated his possible need for 1939 at about $3,000,000,000, compared with a relief allowance of only $2,400,000,000 in Mr. Bell's figures. Mr. Hopkins anticipated a peak relief load of 3,000,000 to 3,100,000 persons next winter on the WPA rolls alone.

He disclosed that the number of families in the United States getting relief benefits of some kind is more than 6,000,000, including about 20,000,000 persons. At one time 27,000,000 were getting aid, he said.

Largest Official Estimate.

The prospective deficit as figured by Mr. Bell is considerably greater than any official estimate heretofore made by authorities thoroughly familiar with the government's fiscal operations.

It far exceeds the estimate of a deficit of $1,250,000,000 for the current fiscal year.

Mr. Bell said another budget estimate would be compiled as soon as congress enacts the tax bill and passes these appropriations.

"I don't know yet how much the revenue bill will affect tax receipts and, furthermore, I do not feel that the Public Works administration will draw out of the treasury $1,000,000,000 in cash in 1939, as its funds will be available for two years," said Mr. Bell.

WE'RE LADYLIKE, SAY TAXI DANCE GIRLS TO JUDGE

Deny Police Charges of Indecent Conduct.

Does biting a partner's ear or blowing down his neck constitute indecent dancing? Judge Michael Feinberg was asked about it yesterday after these and other goings-on were described by police opposing a suit for an injunction to restrain the city from revoking the license of the Century Dancing academy at 27 South Wabash avenue.

Sixty instructresses of one kind of dancing or another were interested listeners. On the outcome of the suit depends their jobs. They got $10 a week and 5 cents commission on every dance ticket they collect—at 10 cents a dance.

Denies She Kissed Policeman.

Giggling at her friends in the courtroom, Miss Nancy Kelly, 28 years old, a witness for the Banton corporation, operators of the dancing "school," said she had twenty-four dances with Policeman Francis O'Connor. She thought he was a theater usher.

O'Connor testified previously that several of the girls kissed him on the neck while they danced.

"Did you kiss the officer's neck, bite his ear, or blow hot breath down his neck?" asked Attorney Theodore Levin.

"No, I certainly did not," replied Miss Kelly, a slender blonde.

Another blonde, Miss Violet Guerro, 29 years old, 831 North La Salle street, also denied kissing, biting, or blowing. She told about dancing with Policeman Thomas Sampson.

Told to Be "Perfect Ladies."

A broad southern accent was displayed by another instructress, Mrs. Wilda Sherrod, 32 years old, 1958 Lincoln avenue. She said the "teachers" were told by the management to be perfect ladies. To an appreciative audience she described the low cut red satin gown she wore when the police were there. Policeman O'Connor she referred to as "the young man."

"I danced with him as he would have liked his sister to dance," she said.

In reply to another question, she said, "Honey, I don't know the taste of whisky or even of beer."

An investigator, Walter Cromwell, 33 years old, said a man on the street handed him cards inviting him to the premises on the second floor and promising him "beautiful girls."

He danced with eight girls, four of whom danced indecently, he testified.

Judge Feinberg overruled a plea for a temporary injunction that would have allowed the school to operate over the week-end. Tomorrow he will hear a plea for a permanent injunction.

CCC Youth Is Acquitted of Slaying Deputy Sherif

Harrisburg, Ill., May 7.—[Special.]—James I. Locke, 22 years old, Eddyville CCC camp enrollee whose home is in Detroit, was freed in Golconda Circuit court yesterday of charges of murdering Tom Rodgers, Golconda deputy sherif, New Year's eve. Judge D. F. Rumsey instructed the jury to return a verdict of acquittal.

U. S. WILL SEEK TO TRY BROKERS FOR MAIL FRAUD

Mail fraud indictments will be sought from the federal grand jury this week against three officials of Hoagland & Allum, Inc., defunct La Salle street investment house, Acting United States Attorney Warren Canaday said yesterday.

The company's offices were raided on April 14 and investigation showed that its customers apparently had lost $700,000. The company's principal officials, George F. Allum, president; Olaf A. Larsen, vice president, and Adolph Engel, secretary and treasurer, were indicted soon afterward by the county grand jury on charges of conspiracy and embezzlement. They are now in jail.

The government entered the case because of the alleged use of the mails by the company in its operations. Postal inspectors already have questioned thirty-five victims. The Securities and Exchange commission has also coöperated with the postal authorities, and their combined evidence will be submitted to the grand jury.

Farmer Killed by Mules; Dragged Across Pasture

Jacksonville, Ill., May 7.—[Special.]—George D. Taylor, a farmer living south of Jacksonville, was dragged and kicked to death by two mules last night. Taylor, who was 49 years old, was leading one mule to water and had his wrist entangled in the halter. The mule became enraged and dragged him across a pasture several times. The second mule ran along side the first, kicking and biting Taylor, who skull was fractured.

GUARD THROWN AROUND PLANT OF CUT RATE DAIRY

Police Launch Probe as Vandalism Continues.

In an effort to end the vandalism accompanying Chicago's milk price war a police guard was thrown around the plant of Meadowmoor Dairies, Inc., at 1334 South Peoria street last night and squads were instructed to watch company trucks delivering milk. Meadowmoor is a cut rate dairy.

The action followed the wrecking of another truck earlier in the day and the launching of an investigation by Capt. Daniel Gilbert of the state's attorney's office. He ordered officials of the Milk Wagon Drivers' union and company executives to meet with him tomorrow morning.

Armed Men Seize Truck.

Ralph Mottel, owner of the wrecked truck, and his helper, Theodore Olsansky, told Lieuts. Thomas Kelly and Charles Egan the truck was seized by three armed men at Jackson boulevard and Racine avenue. It was found later at the bottom of a fifteen foot embankment along the railroad tracks at Canal and Polk streets with its 190 cases of milk destroyed. Early Friday one of the company's trucks was also seized and overturned on a west side street.

Walter Schuab, vice president of Meadowmoor, asked Capt. John Egan of the Maxwell street station for police protection for the company's plant and also its trucks. He reported that many threatening calls had been received at the dairy offices.

"We will continue to deliver grade A milk at what we believe is a fair price if we have to buy new trucks every day," Schuab asserted.

Attorney David Riskind, representing the union, said it will welcome the investigation and will bring all its records to the state's attorney's office.

Attorney Defends Union.

"It is preposterous to think the milk wagon drivers would resort to these kind of tactics after the union had won its three year fight to picket the retail stores selling Meadowmoor milk," he said. Judge James Fardy in the Superior court last Monday dissolved an injunction restraining the union from peaceful picketing of the stores.

The attorney, in answer to a statement by one of the dairy officials that the union refused to admit the drivers as members, said the Meadowmoor company refused to sign an agreement to pay its drivers the union scale.

Torrence Avenue Bridge Opened for Sunday Trafic

The new Torrence avenue bridge crossing the Calumet river near 124th street, which has been closed recently to permit channel dredging, will be open today for Sunday trafic. It will be closed again early tomorrow, City Engineer Loran D. Gayton said. The work is expected to be completed by next Friday.

Gov. Murphy of Michigan in Chicago on Way North

FEDERAL AGENTS GUARD WOMAN TRIAL WITNESS

New York, May 7.—(AP)—Federal agents took special precautions today to guard Suzanne Capurro, a French woman, 27 years old, on her arrival aboard the S. S. President Harding to testify Monday in the trial of members of an alleged Paris fashion smuggling ring.

Miss Capurro is scheduled to appear as a star witness in the prosecution of Marcel Rochas, Inc., on charges of conspiracy to dodge payment of customs duties by sending models to Europe and having them return with the latest Paris gowns listed as personal belongings.

Guy Gurein de Font Joyeuse, New York manager of the firm; Rochas and Madeleine Reiss are under indictment in connection with the case. Rochas and Miss Reiss still are in Paris.

Ann Naylon, blonde, former model, of Los Angeles, Cal., another witness for the government, was reported to have flown here to testify.

NEARLY ALL CHICAGO DISTRIBUTORS LOWER MILK PRICE ONE CENT

The price of milk delivered to homes in the city and nearby suburbs has been reduced one cent a quart by practically all Chicago distributors, according to information received by the Associated Milk Dealers, Inc., yesterday. The reduction followed the price cut of 13 to 12 cents a quart, Friday afternoon by three of the larger milk distributing companies.

Lower retail milk prices to consumers resulted from the decision of the Pure Milk association to reduce the price paid to the 14,500 member dairy farmers in the Chicago milk shed. The farm price of milk was cut approximately two-thirds of a cent a quart.

Ex-Cashier Held to U. S. Jury on Bank Act Charges

Peoria, Ill., May 7.—[Special.]—Arraigned on a charge of violating the national banking act, Albert G. Kleinschmidt, former assistant cashier of the Central National bank, was held to the federal grand jury under $15,000 bond today. Kleinschmidt, N. L. Rogers, Landry P. Locke, and Ralph Buchele of the defunct N. L. Rogers brokerage concern were arrested yesterday on embezzlement charges in connection with the $500,000 bankruptcy case. Officials of the brokerage concern will be arraigned Monday.

NAVAL OFFICERS AND PROSECUTOR CLASH AT INQUEST

A bitter quarrel over the relative legal rights of Lake county authorities and officers of the Great Lakes naval training station developed yesterday in the courthouse at Waukegan at the final session of the inquest into the death of Miss Marian Newcomet.

Miss Newcomet, who was 25 years old, was the daughter of H. E. Newcomet, 1242 Lake Shore drive, a vice president of the Pennsylvania railroad. She was killed March 28 when the car she was driving collided, at Buckley road and Skokie boulevard, near North Chicago, with an ambulance driven by Harry R. Matchett, an enlisted man in the navy.

Held by Naval Authorities.

Matchett has since been in the custody of the naval authorities and was taken under guard of a sailor to the inquest. He was accompanied by Lieut. Comm. Bern Anderson, of the board of inquiry at the naval station, and Maj. Chester L. Fordney, a marine officer who is acting as the enlisted man's counsel.

The officers met State's Attorney Charles E. Mason of Lake county in the corridor outside the inquest room. Mason announced that if the evidence at the hearing waranted the action, he would have Matchett locked in the Lake county jail. Lieut. Comm. Anderson informed him he could not do that.

"You may think the naval training station is an asylum for sailors to run to after they kill people," said Mason. "We'll see if you can get away with it. Roosevelt wants to be a Hitler, but he's not one yet. Your sailors commit crimes in Lake county and then thumb their noses at us and say April fool. But the next time a sailor commits a crime in this county he's going to be jailed."

Threatens to Seize Prisoner.

Maj. Fordney replied that Matchett was a prisoner of the government and most certainly was going back to Great Lakes after the hearing.

"I'll take him if I want him," shouted Mason.

"Somebody might get shot if you try that," was the major's retort.

The strained situation was somewhat relieved when the coroner's jury returned a verdict that it was unable to place any blame for the accident. Testimony showed that Miss Newcomet was driving south at 55 to 60 miles an hour in Skokie boulevard and that the ambulance failed to halt for a stop sign. Matchett said he had slowed down and that his siren was blowing when he started to cross the Skokie road.

ADVERTISE IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

DEMAND ACTION TO STOP DOG AND COCK FIGHTING

Humane Society Leaders Tell of Cruelties.

At least one dog or cock fight is held in Chicago or suburban Cook county each week. Both are illegal under state laws. Thousands of dollars change hands here annually via the wager route on these fights.

These statements were made yesterday by Dr. W. A. Young, secretary of a midwest conference of the Humane society and general manager of the Anti-Cruelty society of Chicago, in a talk to delegates from seven states attending the conference. at the Medinah club. He and others demanded action by the authorities to put a stop to such cruelty.

Dr. Young spoke after Arnold Amundsen of St. Louis, head of the Humane society of Missouri, had told of a dog fight raid there in which $6,000 in bets was picked up from the ground near the blood-drenched pit. These fights are held secretly and crowds are gathered by word of mouth, making raids or arrests difficult, he said.

Dogs Bred for Fights.

The conference was told that American bull terriers are especially bred and trained for fighting, and that one dog is killed in each contest.

The American Institute of Meat Packers and several individual packing companies were complimented by Walter Detloff, superintendent of the Wisconsin Humane society for their experimental work in the use of electricity to stun live stock and thus make animal death painless. He said both the Swift and Cudahy companies have done good work along this line, but that the use of electricity for this purpose is still in an experimental stage because of injury to dressed meat.

Discuss Large Pigeon Flocks.

Delegates from Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Indiana, and Michigan discussed what to do with flocks of pigeons which deface buildings in urban areas.

Opinion prevailed that the numbers of the birds should be reduced by sorting out the crippled and unhealthy birds in box traps and humanely destroying them, and also by removing eggs from nests, and by transporting birds to other localities where they might be useful.

Try Campus Life

Sylvester Merkle and James Walsh, children from University of Chicago settlement, with Hart Perry at Alpha Delta Phi fraternity house. The dog is the fraternity mascot.

Two hundred children from the University of Chicago settlement, 4630 McDowell street, were treated to a day of college life yesterday on the Midway campus. After a lunch at fraternity houses and baseball on the playing field the children saw a tennis match with the University of Michigan and were entertained by actors in the Blackfriar show, "Where in the World." The program was arranged by the junior men's honorary society, Iron Mask, and the sophomore society, Skull and Crescent.

LA GUARDIA ASKS U. S. QUIZ ON AIR LINES' PRACTICES

New York, May 7.—(AP)—Mayor F. H. La Guardia today demanded that the federal department of commerce investigate what he said was a practice by air transport lines of advertising service into New York and then landing their planes at Newark, N. J., airport, necessitating a fourteen mile trip by bus into New York.

He dispatched letters to Daniel C. Roper, secretary of commerce, and the federal trade commission charging six air lines serving New York through Newark with "flagrant violations of fair trade practice, unfair competition, and with consistently misleading the public as to the nature of their service.

JEWISH YOUTHS TO STUDY WHOLE LOVE PROBLEM

Leaders Offer Convention a Realistic Approach.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Youths participating in the convention of the United Synagogue of America [Conservative] today will begin a study of the whole question of love. From a perusal of agenda, which will also include divorce, the main question is whether lovers are rational enough to allow education for their successful guidance.

Leaders of the convention, which opened last night at the Morrison hotel and represents nearly 1,000 congregations of the country, have given the youths' meeting today a realistic approach to all problems of love education. All these problems, as well as age long objections to educational or other interference with love making, are to be dramatized in an imaginary row which supposedly has shaken a congregation. After the dramatic situation has been explained the youths then will have to settle the row.

Problem to Be Studied.

A furor starts when the rabbi announces that an institute on marriage is to be set up at the temple. The board is called into special session and the most ancient objection to such meddling with love is presented by a patriarchal member. He declares:

"Marriages are made in heaven. Therefore, what right have we poor mortals to dare think that we could help control in any way the happiness or unhappiness of the individuals concerned?"

Heads of many nod in approval. A youth arises to speak his piece:

"Education for love merely removes love," he contends. "Love is not something that can appear as result of cold, controled, calculating effort. Can marriage come as a result of education or as result of love?"

Opposition to the rabbi continues to gain headway as a soulful eyed matron harks exotically back to her own beautiful courtship and marriage. In love we lose ourselves, she says, adding that it is our heart that is involved and that it would be a pity to deprive young people of that mystic, sacred experience that no training can enhance.

Physician Takes Issue.

A middle aged physician then takes issue with the retreating rabbi. With stentorian confidence he asks:

"Is this congregation aware of the fact that this proposal involves full consideration of love's physiological processes? Is this congregation prepared to give all this information to our young people?"

The board becomes horrified, but the vote is delayed. The chairman of the adult education committee of the congregation tries to turn the tide. He points to the many who are unhappily married, and to crowded divorce courts. He cites the many little love affairs that have unhappy results, asserting that education would prevent a good deal of such unhappiness.

Youth to Reopen Meeting.

But he is interrupted by the president of the Women's sisterhood, who angrily snaps:

"Yes, and in all probability those young folks anticipate a sensuous experience and that's why they want it."

Seeing that the fight is about to get out of hand, the president of the congregation adjourns the meeting. Youths and youth leaders of the thousand synagogues today will reopen the meeting and try to settle the dispute.

Included also in discussions will be the proposal of Rabbi Solomon Goldman of Temple Anshe Emet that a Jewish divorce court be set up. The work of this proposed court, which was approved in principle by Rabbi George Fox, president of the Chicago Rabbinical association, would be similar to annulment courts of Catholic and Episcopal churches.

SUIT ASKS COURT TO HOLD APRIL 12 PRIMARY INVALID

May Result in First Ruling on Party Switching.

BY PARKE BROWN.

A primary nomination contest which may be one of the most important political lawsuits in the history of Illinois was filed yesterday in the Circuit court of Cook county. It may result in judicial determination of the controversy over the provision of the general primary law prohibiting the voter from changing parties within two years.

The action was begun by State Representative John G. Ryan, a Democrat from the 13th [south shore] senatorial district. The official canvass showed he lost in the nomination of two Democratic candidates for the house to Representative William W. Powers and Adam S. Mioduski. According to the canvass Ryan fell 140 votes behind Mioduski in the totals.

Asks Usual Recount.

His bill contained the usual prayer for a recount on charges of error and fraud in the county, listing forty-two precincts in which it is contended that he was credited with fewer votes than were cast for him and that Mioduski was given more votes than he received, but from that point the petition entered new fields for contests of this kind.

It charged that in violation of the primary law thousands of Republicans were allowed to vote in the Democratic primary, and that in similar disregard of the statute affidavits of qualification were not required from voters challenged as to party membership. As a climax, it asked if the court cannot separate the legal votes from the illegal votes that it hold the Democratic nominations for state representative from the 13th district null and void.

Expect Judicial Decision.

Attorneys familiar with election law predicted that the case will bring about the first decision establishing a judicial interpretation of the two year limitation on changing party affiliations. Although the present primary law was passed in 1927 there has been no decision in the state court on this point. It was the subject of the most heated controversy at the close of the April 12 primary campaign, and County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki ruled that the bars were down for party switching.

Added importance was given to the Ryan case by his selection of counsel. His principal attorney is John F. Tyrrell, who has been counsel for the Cook county Republican committee for more than ten years and is chairman of the present Republican state committee. Associated with Tyrrell is the law firm of Hass, Leffman & Moss.

Ruling May Be Important.

If Ryan should win his case on a mere recount of the ballots, the effect of the decision would not be far reaching, but if his prayer is granted for the invalidation of the legislative nominations in his district, the regular Democratic committee, it is said, would have the legal power to fill the two nominations for representative. The district senatorial committee, it is reported, then would name Ryan and Powers, who were backed by the Nash-Kelly organization while Mioduski was a Horner candidate.

The case is to come before Judge Stanley H. Klarkowski next Friday. The primary law provides that the decision of the Circuit court in cases of this kind is final since there is not sufficient time between the primary and the November election for carrying cases to the Appellate and Supreme courts.

TRIMS FOOT CALLOUS; DIES.

Belvidere, Ill., May 7.—[Special.]—Poisoning which developed after he trimmed a callous on his foot caused the death today in St. Joseph's hospital of John W. Rowe, 60 years old, for many years engaged in the tobacco business here.

Night Shirt Pursuer

[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

Frank Gale, Maryland grocer, as he was dressed for chase.

Patuxent, Md., May 7.—(AP)—Night shirt flapping bravely about his ankles, shotgun clutched in his determined hands, Frank Gale, a grocer, led a posse in a three hour, fifteen mile chase today after four men suspected of robbing Gale's store here.

Gale was awakened shortly after midnight by a neighbor who said burglars were rifling the store. Snatching his shotgun, the grocer took one shot at four men, who fled to a waiting automobile.

Patrolman Wilbur C. Wade of the county police drove by a minute or so later and picked up Gale and a hastily formed posse. The three suspects were caught in nearby woods.

Moline Boy Wins Illinois Air Mail Essay Contest

Erickson, a Moline, Ill., high school pupil, won the Illinois contest for the best essay on the air mail, conducted as part of National Air Mail week. Erickson's essay will be submitted in the national contest. For placing first in Illinois, Erickson will get a round trip plane ride between Chicago and Washington.

BIG SLUSH FUND CHARGED TO G.O.P. IN PENNSYLVANIA

Republican Lawyer Asks Borah to Investigate.

Harrisburg, Pa., May 7.—(AP)—Talk of a Borah-led senatorial investigation in Pennsylvania's Republican primary campaign broke today almost on the eve of a grand jury probe of charges and counter charges among Democrats.

Senator Borah divulged at Washington that Bertram G. Frazier, Philadelphia lawyer and former state senator, had charged a "huge slush fund" was in operation for certain Republican primary candidates.

Grundy Is Mentioned.

The veteran Idaho Republican promised to do what he could if supplied with positive facts.

Frazier, in a telegram, charged that Joseph Pew, Sun Oil company executive; former United States Senator Joseph F. Grundy, and Moses Annenberg, owner of the Philadelphia Inquirer, "are pouring a huge slush fund into the Republican primary fight to put over their candidates."

Pinchot Refers to Pew.

Pennsylvanians, turning ear to the Republican charges after weeks in which Democratic candidates have more than monopolized the spotlight with accusations of coercion, "bought" legislation and other irregularities, recalled that former Gov. Gifford Pinchot referred to Pew in recent speeches as the "contributor of huge sums to buy the nomination of his candidate for governor."

Pinchot and Judge Arthur H. James are rivals for the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

BANDITS HOLD UP COUPLE IN CAR; GET $550 LOOT

Two bandits obtained more than $550 in jewelry and cash early today when they held up Wendell H. Roquemore, 914 Judson avenue, Evanston, and his companion, Miss Ammeta Braun, 5741 Kenmore avenue.

Roquemore and Miss Braun were just stepping into their car in front of 1134 Balmoral avenue after leaving a tavern when the robbers appeared. They drove them to Western and Eastwood avenues, where they put them out and then drove away in Roquemore's car with a diamond ring valued at $200, belonging to Miss Braun, and a ring costing $250, a watch worth $65, and $42 in cash belonging to Roquemore.

CITY AND STATE MOTOR LICENSE SALES SHOW GAIN

Motor vehicle registrations in Chicago and Illinois are well ahead of last year's figures, it was shown yesterday by figures released by Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes and City Clerk Peter J. Brady. Since the first of the year 1,657,525 state licenses have been issued, 16,481 more than for the first four months of 1937. In the city 530,211 licenses have been issued, compared to 517,861 for the same period last year. Since Jan. 1 the state has collected, for its road fund, a total of $18,422,515 from the sale of all types of motor vehicle licenses, compared to $18,125,532 in the same period of 1937. The city collected $4,813,434 from license sales this year.

ASK RECREATION FACILITIES AS A CURB ON CRIME

More recreational facilities in Chicago as one means of removing causes of juvenile delinquency were urged last night at the first All-Chicago Youth congress in the Hotel La Salle.

The congress recommended that the city, churches, and schools coöperate to furnish more facilities such as playgrounds, athletic fields, and gymnasiums. Concentration on this, it was declared, would be more beneficial than attention to new penal institutions.

The congress will close today. Among the speakers will be Rabbi Mayer Lipman of the Palmer Square congregation, Dr. Charles O'Donnell of De Paul university, and Dr. James W. Ward of the Chicago Round Table of Jews and Christians.

Bund Leader Kunze Mauled After Police Block Meeting

Troy, N. Y., May 7.—(AP)—G. Wilhelm Kunze, national director of public relations for the German-American bund, and an unidentified companion were mauled tonight by a group of men after police blocked attempts of the bund to hold a meeting here because they failed to obtain a permit. Both were rescued by police and escorted from Troy.

Church Launches Special Early Service for Golfers

Los Angeles, Cal., May 7.—(AP)—The First Congregational church is going to inaugurate special early services Sunday for golfers and horseback riders. "I invite them to attend in knickers, slacks or jodhpurs," said Dr. J. W. Fifield Jr., pastor. "I won't keep them longer than a half hour and they can be at the first tee or bridle trail by 9 o'clock.

DRIVER IS KILLED WHEN CAR TURNS OVER INTO DITCH

Dr. James C. McCord, 35 years old, of Milwaukee, an osteopath, was killed yesterday when his automobile plunged into a ditch and overturned several times at Cicero avenue and 150th street in Oak Forest. Police believe he lost control of his car while trying to pass another. He was on the way to visit a patient.

William Spears, 62 years old, a brother of Dr. Clarence W. Spears, head football coach at the University of Toledo, was killed last night and his wife was seriously hurt when their automobile collided with another car near Walnut, Ill. The Spears home is in Chicago. H. E. Titney of Tampico, Ill., the driver of the other car, was shaken up. He was held for the coroner's inquest, to be held in Princeton, Ill. Mr. and Mrs. Spears were driving to Kewanee to visit his mother, Mrs. H. F. Spears, on Mother's day, at the time of the accident.

Up to 2 p. m. yesterday 300 persons had been killed by automobiles in Cook county since Jan. 1. Of these 235 were killed in Chicago where 5,915 were injured in the same period.

Cancer is Curable

Through Early Diagnosis and the Expert Use of X-Rays, Radium or Surgery the majority of beginning cancers can be effectively treated.

CANCER IS THE MOST SERIOUS DISEASE problem confronting this country today. Loss of life from its insidious onslaughts is appalling. More than 160,000 deaths annually are caused by its relentless and increasing development. According to health authorities the death rate has increased about 65 per cent since 1900. Despite this fact medical science has made notable advances during the past ten years in the early discovery and treatment of certain types of cancer. Those more easily diagnosed and treated are external cancers and include cancer of the skin, lip, mouth, cervix and of the throat. 80 to 90 per cent cures have been accomplished in early cases and 10 to 20 per cent cures in advanced cases.

INTERNAL CANCERS, SUCH AS CANCER of the stomach and bowel, liver, kidney, et cetera, present a more difficult problem. Owing to the absence of early symptoms diagnosis is usually delayed until the later stages. Early diagnosis is the most important factor in the successful treatment and cure of all cancers. However, there are symptoms, trifling as they may seem, which, if given prompt medical attention, will often provide an early diagnosis. These are:—

any strange growth under the skin—lumps in the breasts—moles, old scars, warts or birth marks that change in appearance or size—swellings—sores that refuse to heal—continuous stomach or rectal disturbance—blood in the urine—abnormal bleeding or discharge.

DON'T WAIT UNTIL YOU FEEL PAIN. There is rarely any pain in the early stage, when cancer is curable. Early diagnosis of cancer is possible only by the most searching and careful examination of every part of the body where cancer is likely to develop. An X-ray examination will very often show the presence of cancer in the stomach or other internal organs early enough to effect a cure.

THROUGH THE MORE FREQUENT USE OF the combined services and facilities of a UNITED MEDICAL SERVICE the mounting death rate from cancer and other ailments can be definitely checked. These services are as complete as medical knowledge, experience and modern facilities can make them, yet they are well within the scope of the most limited incomes.

POLICEMAN LETS BANDIT ROB, THEN KILLS HIM; CITED

Idles Till Gunman Leaves Crowd and Fires.

While a restaurant robber, half screened by a cluster of terrified woman customers, crammed coins and bills into his pockets it was not easy for Policeman William Armstrong, 32 years old, of Chicago's Woodlawn station, a man of five years' experience on the force, to saunter nonchalantly to a table and wait until bystanders got out of the line of fire.

William Armstrong.

But on page 34 of the police department regulations there is a paragraph which begins: "A patrolman in carrying out the functions of the department shall constantly direct his best efforts to act intelligently and efficiently. . . . The least that can be said is that Policeman Armstrong fulfilled these directions to the letter.

Approaches Cage to Pay.

He waited until only his own life was staked against that of the bandit and then drew his revolver and shot him down without wasting a bullet.

This event happened in the Merit café, 1113 East 63d street, shortly after 3:45 p. m. on March 23. Armstrong, off duty and in plain clothing, had just finished a late afternoon lunch. He was walking toward the cashier's desk where Miss Hazel Lamphier was on duty.

He saw several women standing there and started to walk around them, but his path was barred by the bandit, who with drawn automatic pistol was threatening Miss Lamphier and the others.

"Get back there, you," the man said roughly. "This is a stickup and if you move I'll kill you."

Glancing quickly around Armstrong saw that he had no choice if the safety of the others was to be preserved. He walked back and sat down at a table nearby.

Gets Gun Ready.

"I moved my gun up with my elbow so it would be handy when the time came," he said. "I couldn't do anything as long as those women were in my way, but when the robber started for the door I jumped up, pulled out my gun and fired twice, but he kept going, so I followed him to the street and shot him a third time. I aimed that one for his head."

The bandit—later identified through his finger prints as Sidney Law of Memphis, Tenn., a paroled convict—was dead when bystanders lifted him off the pavement.

Subsequently he was identified in six other robberies in the Woodlawn district. His record on file at the bureau of identification in Washington showed that he had served time in eastern and southern prisons for robbery, larceny, and forgery.

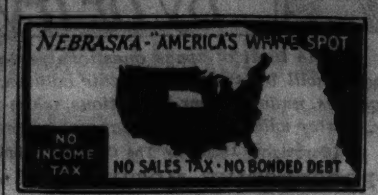
Policeman Armstrong is unmarried and lives at 6417 Kenwood avenue.

Receives Tribune Award.

Partly because he killed a dangerous criminal, but more because he remained calm under trying circumstances and courageously upheld the highest ideals of the police department, Policeman Armstrong received the Tribune Hero award for March.

Each month THE TRIBUNE awards $100 to the city or park district policeman or the fireman who displays the highest courage beyond the ordinary requirements of his service.

Boost Nebraska



Sticker used in Nebraska's campaign to popularize state as only one with no income tax, sales tax, or bonded debt.

Omaha, Neb., May 7.—[Special.]—To attract new industries, Nebraska is conducting a coöperative national advertising campaign to popularize the state as the nation's "white spot"—the only one of all the states with no income tax, sales tax, or other extra taxes, and no bonded debt.

Started last Dec. 15, the campaign is being waged by associated Nebraska industries, chiefly through advertisments in a national magazine which are then reproduced free, in full page size, in every daily newspaper in the state and many weeklies. Stickers attached to letters are another advertising medium.

Nebraskans argue that, with industry in many states burdened with labor troubles and taxation, Nebraska, with its "pay as you go" policy and economical state government, is in a very favorable situation. Nebraska's constitution prohibits state bonds. Seventy-seven of the ninety-three counties have no bonds, and municipal debts are low.

Aged and Adult Charities Hold Tag Day Tomorrow

Four thousand volunteer workers will take their stations on street corners at 5 a. m. tomorrow for the annual tag day of the Chicago Federation of Aged and Adult Charities. Mrs. Arthur Drumback, president of the federation, said it hopes to collect more than $100,000. Thirty-eight homes for aged and adult persons will benefit from the contributions.

MRS. PHILO ORTON GETS A DIVORCE, ENDING X. Y. CASE

The Orton marital wrangle drew toward a conclusion yesterday when Mrs. Marie M. Orton got her divorce, on the ground of desertion, from Philo A. Orton, president of the Orton Crane and Shovel company. Judge Philip J. Finnegan set next Saturday for a decision on alimony and counsel fees.

The divorce ended a long series of charges and countercharges which began when Mrs. Orton, who is 61 years old and lives at 5204 Greenwood avenue, filed a suit for separate maintenance. Orton, who is 64, filed a cross-bill accusing her of misconduct with a Mr. X and a Mr. Y. Mrs. Orton then amended her bill to charge him with adultery with Misses S. and R.

Yesterday Mrs. Orton undertook to clear the names of X and Y. The former, R. Bert Horner, wrote her letters jointly with his wife, Suzanne, Mrs. Orton testified. Mr. Y, identified as Schuyler Handy, was also described as a family friend.

THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AND THE NEWSPAPERS.

In the polecat patter of the New Deal speakers it is a favorite statement that 96 per cent of the press is against the administration. It happens not to be true; but it is the intent of its authors to have it appear as a grave reflection upon the honesty of publishers. The inference is that the newspapers are against the administration for no good reasons and that consequently their publications ought to be censored.

It is undeniably true that there has been an increasing newspaper opposition to the present federal government. In the spring of 1933 the new administration had nearly 100 per cent newspaper support. Even the partisan political opposition was withdrawn. The Republican minority in congress was not an obstruction, and it was generally felt that for the time being patriotism required common effort and the adjournment of factional differences.

That may have raised the expectation in Washington that there never should be any criticism of governmental programs and the thought that opposition would be a species of moral turpitude. No suggestion was then made that the newspapers were doing wrong or that they should be censored. It wasn't long before disquieting symptoms of revolutionary intent were to be discovered in the Washington turmoil of ideas and acts. Advantage was being taken of the country's docility and its apprehension to do a great deal more than had been indicated in the prospectus.

In truth there had been a definite assurance that some things would not be done and nevertheless they were found in the plans for a new type of government. When this trend away from constitutional government was made clear THE TRIBUNE was at first the only newspaper to raise its voice, and for a long time any newspaper which did so was in a lonesome position. Even the party of political opposition was quiet and Republican leaders didn't care to take what they thought were the considerable risks of saying that the new administration was in high gear and going in a most dangerous direction.

Opposition had good reason to grow and it did. But for the most part newspapers were reluctant to say what their editors thought and to risk the disapproval of people who were as yet unprepared to listen to warnings. The great personal popularity stood in the way as a deterrent and as a caution that if an editor expressed his opinions he might get in bad with a great many people who didn't want to be told plain truths. There was a verboten sign against free expression and a majority of the newspapers were not then very bold, even when in the framing of NRA codes their own independence was threatened and they were told they would accept a licensing system or get into trouble. The reluctance of many newspapers to make a fight was understandable in the terms of the tremendous force which was used against them.

There has been a change of attitude, and though it is not true that 96 per cent of the newspapers of the country are opposed to the New Deal, now it is true that a great many more of them are in opposition than were in the first two or three years, and a great many more are critical in 1938 than were in 1936.

There are reasons for these changes. It would be truly remarkable if the newspaper lineup of 1933 had continued unbroken into the sixth year. If that had been proved true it would, indeed, have been a strange thing and worthy of an investigation. Nothing but coercion or dumb acceptance could have brought any such thing about. The New Deal itself changed violently. In the first place, nearly all its extraordinary measures were labeled temporary—for emergency use only. That was written into the terms of the bills, which definitly stated how long they were to last. It was recognized that they were not suited for the normal affairs of the country or for its government. They were presented as abnormal laws, unsuited for normal times, and, by their own terms, they confessed their unsuitability. By specific statements in their own clauses they were to expire. Now the country could accept a thing of that sort—anyway it did—but never thereby consenting that what was presented as an undesirable departure from American forms of government should be made the foundation of what the government was to be in the future.

No one will deny that these were the facts. It was complete change of purpose to abandon the idea of emergency legislation and present this program as only the beginning of a complete remodeling and revolutionary change in government. There was another thing which made the New Deal appear as a matter of experiment and not of unassailable dogma and doctrin. That was a statement that these were experiments and if they failed, if truth disclosed mistake and error, that would be at once acknowledged. It never has been acknowledged. Not a single mistake is admitted in the theory of New Deal government. The road back is littered with the wreckage of these New Deal proposals and error is confessed as to none of them.

The American people could well rub their eyes and wonder what was the matter with the opposition, which is essential to any form of free government but which never appeared against the proposals of a federal system which had completely changed its own policies and which had deliberately undertaken to deceive all the people regarding its purposes. Where in the world would this country have been if there had been nothing but yes-men to indorse and applaud an administration which has never dealt frankly with the people, which has always said one thing and done another, and which from the beginning had ambitions and purposes which were concealed and denied?

Naturally, as the federal government has changed, opinion regarding it has changed. Who in 1936 would have believed that it was the intention to demand that the United States Supreme court be filled by men known in advance to be merely notarial stamps for any act of congress demanded by the executive department? If a Republican speaker in the campaign of 1936 had discovered that this was the purpose and had proclaimed it he would have been laughed off the platform.

In the development of the New Deal we have lived to see the rise of a new kind of political gangdom. It has nurtured and trained a species of character assassin who uses the dictionary of vituperation as a tommy gun and seeks to destroy the reputability of any person who questions the good sense and good intent of the New Deal. These character assassins are on the public pay roll and many of them hold important offices. They are ready at any hour of the day or night to gang on a citizen whose opposition might make him formidable if he were not immediately pictured as an agent of political turpitude and economic obliquity.

Newspapers have changed their opinions regarding the New Deal because the logic of events has made a change inevitable. They bring the New Deal gangdom down on them, of course. THE TRIBUNE would like to see a chronology of the changing newspaper opinion and a statement of the causes which led to it. We wish that every newspaper opposing the new dictatorship would print an editorial under the caption: "When We Parted from the New Deal, and Why." This much, in varying degree, may be said for all of them—they turned away from an overwhelmingly powerful administration which no longer seeks to disguise its purposes.

ANNAPOLIS AND THE NAVY.

One desirable result of the publicity given to the navy building program should be the liberalizing of the system of appointment to the commissioned personnel.

Under the traditional practice every commissioned officer in the navy must pass through the naval academy at Annapolis. There have been a very few cases of noncommissioned officers admitted to commissioned rank during the late war and for a few years after the war, but these exceptions are negligible. The system in practice thus denies to the navy the service of men of exceptional ability merely because in their early youth they did not have the required political influence for appointment to the naval academy. This ignores the fact that almost all the greatest seamen in our naval history entered the service before the naval academy was founded in 1845. Making all due allowance for the fact that the navy exacts a specialized training, we do not think it follows that education and training in this particular college are indispensable to competence in naval command. In the naval, as in other professions, the real education begins in the graduate schools.

The army, especially in modern conditions, is as specialized a profession as the navy, but it has not been found necessary or advisable to establish any such exclusive system. It is true that most of the high military commands have gone to West Point graduates, but the army has not been deprived of talent which has not received the accolade of the academy, men like Terry, Miles, Chaffee, Wood, and Harbord for a few examples.

The best spirit of the army was well expressed in 1917 by Lieut. Col., now Maj. Gen. George Van Horn Moseley, one of the ablest officers of the army, when he said: "If with all the advantages I have had of education at West Point and training in the school of the line, the war college, and the general staf college, and twenty years of military experience, I am not a more competent officer than one who has been denied these privileges, I should not stand in the way of such a one."

The navy should have recourse as far as practicable to all naval talent in the nation. It should not restrict itself in peace or war to the relatively narrow channel of academy instruction. It is, we believe, one of the major tasks of the authorities who make plans for the development of the nation's strength in war to draw freely upon the total resources of American ability. The army is trying to do this in various ways. The navy should follow its example, and both should be careful not to fall into the error, even unwittingly, of following foreign precedents which respect privilege or the model of their social order.

THE SYPHILIS PLANK COMES OUT.

It has been the practice of THE TRIBUNE to remove planks from the platforms carried at the head of the editorial page when the objective named has been attained or is safely on the way to attainment. In accordance with this rule the plank "Conquer the Syphilis Plague" has been removed from the Platform for America.

This does not mean we would have readers assume that the syphilis plague has been conquered in the United States. On the contrary, as we have said, the fight has just begun and THE TRIBUNE will keep fighting until it is won. There is the task of public education to carry on, necessary legislation must be obtained, administrative agencies must be set up with adequate provision for maintenance, competent personnel must be found, methods must be tested and improved. But all this proceeding is under way. The first essential was to wake the public to the gravity of the problem and the urgent need for action. On the threshold of the task was the great taboo, blocking all hope of progress. No other great reform had faced such a handicap. It had to be broken down. THE TRIBUNE thrust it aside. It printed the fatal word. It published article after article giving facts handled without gloves. In December, 1936, it put the plank, "Conquer the Syphilis Plague," on the Sunday page. It was a challenge and the challenge has served its purpose. The discussion of the venereal disease menace has spread through the daily press. Public meetings have undertaken it. The hush period has ended. State and city health departments are busy. The medical profession is beginning a more active participation. Civic organizations no longer ignore their responsibilities in this field. Most important of all, the press has shaken off the fatal taboo and the public is reading the truth. In short, the great campaign to abolish the venereal disease plague is assured of continuance and of victory. THE TRIBUNE has led it, but the leaders are everywhere today. It is with a great deal of pride and full confidence that THE TRIBUNE takes out its historic plank as no longer necessary. What was its objective is now the objective of the nation.

INSIDE MEXICO

[BY A STAF CORRESPONDENT.]
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[SEVENTH ARTICLE.]

MEXICO CITY.—There are 5,000 churches in Mexico. The population of Mexico, 16,000,000; some 3,200 persons to each church. Let it be assumed that there are some persons who attend churches of various denominations and some who attend none; the average per church still is high.

The reason for reporting the number of churches is that we may have heard that Mexico is church ridden. The average Mexican village has one church, if any. The average village in the United States has a half dozen.

Another reason for reporting on religion is that the Mexican government in recent years has been antagonizing it. This has affected all denominations. This has been in pursuance of uplift. Uplift of whom? The Indian-farmer-peasant.

The items we have been offering on the subject of the farm in Mexico have attempted to show that the farmer is an Indian. He is an Indian in the sense that he is descended from the native stock.

Perhaps it will help to clarify our Indian if we reflect that when the fifteenth and sixteenth century explorers went sailing they were trying for a short route to the East Indies. The East Indies meant wealth. When the explorers found the western hemisphere they thought they had found the East Indies. And so, ever since, the word Indian has meant the aborigine.

Remember, again, he is not the Indian of our northern lore. He is a gentle soul. If he is not exploding with enthusiasm you may charge it to the fact that for 400 years he has been plodding along the same path; and in terms of practical achievement he hasn't advanced one inch.

This, then, is the citizen for whom so many revolutions have been fought. He is the forgotten man for whom the farm lands have been divided. He is the mystified primitive in whose behalf the churches were built, in whose behalf they have been closed. He has been given land which he doesn't know how to cultivate. He has been deprived of the one thing he could understand: the supernatural.

Religion offers a supernatural reward. That is why the churches were built. The smart, sly, practical politician class predominates in the cities. The politician class is precisely practical, not leaning toward the supernatural. Its dogma is the bird in the hand: that hope of heaven is all very nice, but cash in the Bank of France is so solacing when revolution comes.

The politicians thought to quiet the Indians with land. And then they thought to convert the flow of holy revenue from religion to the state. The state is the political group in power. Some administrations have toyed with communism. Some have inquired into Fascism. All the radical theories have been given a trial run. The soil of Mexico is so fruitful that almost anything will grow; so down come all the dreamy futurists with their seeds of revolt, their bulbs of reform, their pots of experiment, and their sprays of hate.

And the net result of all this was to give the Indian something he doesn't know how to use and take from him something he does know how to use.

He does know how to use religion. If there is anything in religion it is faith. This is what the Indian has. You will see this in Guadalupe. Some day you should go there. Thousands of your neighbors have been there, and it is not a mere hazard that most of them have written books about it. This spares us repetition. Yet you may keep in mind just one man, any man, any one of the thousands of devoted worshipers who enter the church every month.

He will be a small man. His face is the color of rich walnut. His hair is the blackness of carbon; uncombed, it lies in a thatch. His features are etched by sadness and care, the features of a man who has carried a heavy burden from father to son down many weary centuries; and his head inclines forward as of one who deems himself unworthy. He wears two garments, a pitifully thin shirt, cotton trousers, shapeless, hardly reaching his ankles; and he is barefoot.

The eyes of this man are in the mood of faith. There is something haunting in them. There is something in the groping quality of his look which tells you that he knows there is a heaven and that he will keep his eager, hungry gaze forever on the dusky madonna lest he lose his path and stray to some damnation he dare not even contemplate.

When he enters the church he does not merely perform acts of devotion; he is devotion. When you see him prostrate before the glass cabinet which contains the symbol of the madonna he is not enacting humility; he is humility. And when you see him with swift, eager movements passing his hand, a hand gnarled and bent with labor, over the surface of the glass in order that he may take from it something of grace and hope, something of the promise of eternity, and then as eagerly pass this sanctified hand as swiftly over his face, over his anxious eyes, his furrowed cheeks, you are not seeing an act of faith; you are seeing faith.

Faith is ingrained in the Mexican Indian. It was not to destroy this faith that the Spanish conquerors built churches. It was to preserve it.

When the Spanish churchmen arrived in Mexico they found a religion. It was a terrible religion, a religion of human sacrifice; yet a religion which showed the lengths to which primitive man can be led in the hope of the hereafter.

The Spanish were in no sense disposed to destroy the urge to faith and sacrifice. They understood perfectly that the thousands of pagan pyramids and altars were the crude signs of a belief in the supernatural. They knew the pagan temples must be destroyed; they also knew they should, while destroying the one, compensate for it by planting Christianity. Thus it was that the Spaniards gave church for temple. No sooner was a pyramid with its tradition of human blood leveled to the ground than Christian religion took its place. There you have the beginnings of religion in Mexico.

The city of Cholula contains some 200 churches. It is customary for tourists to regard this statement with a twinge of the critical. But there is nothing remarkable about it. Cholula was regarded as a holy place centuries before the Spaniards came. Indeed, it was so highly regarded that the Aztecs had constructed in that small place 200 pagan pyramids. So with precise regard for the feelings of the Aztecs, coupled with an eagerness to give them a better religion, the Spaniards gave church for pyramid; two hundred of them.

It is true that the churches of Cholula are not large; rather, they are chapels, some of them suited to the worship of only a few communicants; but they are there. They are filled with the faithful like that one at Guadalupe. All of which explains that, although one political administration after another has tried to nail up the church doors, they still are open. And now President Cardenas is quietly forgetting the whole law of suppression. The churches are open. It has taken a good many years to discover that a Mexican peasant is not a Russian communist.

The communists are active. But that will be for next Sunday.

PROSPECTIVE MOTHER'S RESPONSIBILITY.

THERE is no malady in the entire gamut of medicine which carries with it greater tragedy than childbed fever. Oliver Wendell Holmes, the poet-physician, voiced his indignation against the ignorance and prejudices of his time. So forceful were his pronouncements that many listened, but had all followed his precepts tens of thousands of lives would have been saved in a single generation.

We have come a long way in our conception of cleanliness. In every maternity case not only must the physician's hands be scrupulously clean, but his instruments must be sterile and the sheets, towels, dressings—everything that comes in contact with the patient—must be free from microörganisms. Today trained medical men realize the importance of these factors. As a result the occurrence of childbed fever has been reduced materially.

An erroneous impression has arisen relative to maternal deaths during confinement. Infection from the outside is only one of the possible sources of trouble, and even though childbed fever develops, its origin may not be traceable to a mistake or neglect on the part of the obstetrician, the nurse, or the hospital. Streptococci in the throat, nasal passages, sinuses, etc., may at such a time manifest their vicious rôle. In fact, due to the peculiar circumstances surrounding confinement, the resistance may be lowered somewhat, with the result that organisms in the tonsils may find their way into the blood stream. If they are liberated in sufficient quantities the first indication may be a warning chill.

Then there are certain diseases that appear to come out of a clear sky. Chief among these is eclampsia, beginning signs of which are headache, puffiness of the tissues, disturbance of vision, and, if something is not done to prevent them, convulsions.

Safety requires that eternal vigilance shall be exercised by the physician and that the prospective mother shall offer complete coöperation. It would be an ideal state of affairs if, as soon as the fact of pregnancy is established, every woman would place herself in the care of an able obstetrician who would make it his business to assume charge of her health so that every possible hazard may be avoided. Surveys, while limited in scope, point out that in some communities less than half the women are following this rule. The first that the doctor may know about the case is the call that comes with the baby well on the way. If, during this interval, some complication ensues, the physician may be unable to save life. Could he have detected early signs of disaster, the chances are the incident would have been handled with perfect safety. Fully one-third of the preventable deaths are due to the neglect or indifference of mothers who have failed to recognize or to pay enough attention to such symptoms as bleeding, shortness of breath, persistent vomiting, dizziness, and pain.

Most women nowadays look to the hospital for aid during childbirth, as it is equipped to handle any emergency. But such institutions have great responsibilities, not only for the skill of their stafs but particularly for nursing care and perfect sanitation. The lives of two human beings are at stake, and while we may with complacency view the episode as natural and physiological, it demands kindly but highly trained hands before it will be robbed of its aforetime terrors.

Our present day safety, however, must not lull us into a sense of false security. Some deaths still take place and it is only through the close association and coöperation of good physicians, trained nurses, well managed hospitals, and the prospective mothers themselves that we can further reduce our losses. Every mother can find numerous sources of information as to her conduct. But first and foremost let her consult her regular physician. If he does not take obstetrical cases, let him recommend both the hospital and the doctor.

MAY AFFECT TEETH.

P. F. writes: I have heard that patients forced to take iron suffer a rapid decay of teeth. Is this true?

REPLY.

Research workers have found that some iron preparations produce no injury whatever. Others may exert a very mild caustic effect. Still others may bring about a marked decalcification of the teeth and cause a brown color. This is why iron—given as medicine—is prescribed in capsule form or is administered via a glass drinking tube.

ARTIFICIAL COLONIC OPENING.

H. D. F. writes: What is a colostomy? What is the usual length of the period of hospitalization on such a case?

REPLY.

Colostomy is the establishment of an artificial opening from the colon to the outside of the body. Hospitalization is usually two to three weeks.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY KIMPEI SHEBA.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO.—Japan is heading straight for Fascism—but it is Fascism of a peculiar character, different entirely in many respects from Italian and German Fascism. In most people's minds Fascism presupposes dictatorship. A dictator is one thing the Japanese cannot have.

The Japanese brand of Fascism still remains a very vague thing. Nobody is openly advocating it. There is not a peep from any quarter pleading or demanding that Japan go Fascist. The best explanation is that Fascism is creeping on the nation through the pressure of the prevailing internal and international situations.

The reasons are:

1. As a result of the war in China Japan is faced, according to the government, with the necessity of enforcing wartime economic control to avert a crash.

2. Japan detests communism above everything else. Germany and Italy also are foes of communism. Also, these countries are in the same position as Japan in their relations with the United States and England. As much as Japan would like to travel with the United States and England, it is unable to do so because these countries will not travel with Japan.

3. The claim of such men as Gen. Sadao Araki that the national spirit is waning, that frivolity is rampant, profit seeking has replaced the effort for social welfare, and that politicians have forgotten the state in their competition for party advantage, is being believed by more and more people.

4. The public is fed up with the political parties, which have no backbone.

Japan, however, is nowhere near in such dire straits as were Germany and Italy when they became Fascist.

The main strength of the so-called type of Japanese Fascism is in the army and the reservists or ex-soldiers. This powerful group lacks a dictatorial leader for the simple reason that the army bows and can bow to the dictates of only one leader, the emperor. The same applies to the people in general. That is why there can be no Mussolini or Hitler in Japan. And without such the type of Fascism that thrives in Italy and Germany is regarded as impossible.

Outside of the fact that Japan, Germany, and Italy are foes of communism and are "have not" countries, there is not much in common between the three. This is particularly the case with the national spirit of the Japanese.

The Kokumin-Domei, the nearest approach to a Fascist party in Japan, has practically no influence on the diet [parliament]. The present government is not Fascist and is not advocating Fascism. The premier, Prince Konoe, cannot be called a dictator, nor are the people Fascist-minded or clamoring for a change in government.

Most observers feel the movement will stop midway and end up in a semi-Fascist country.

This goal will be reached with the passage of the national mobilization bill which gives the government dictatorial powers in times of stress, such as at present, and which is now before the diet. It is generally felt the bill will be passed. It is also believed that the government, though invested with dictatorial powers, will not assume them unless conditions grow much more serious than they are at present.

FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

The volume of Legal Friend mail necessitates printed statements on common questions. No copies or records of the letters or answers are kept. Hence follow-up letters should be complete in themselves. If questions are based on some previously printed problem a clipping of the article should accompany. Most of the replies are mailed. Letters bearing no name and address are disregarded. A self-addressed envelope will expedite handling.

SIGNING OF LEGAL DOCUMENTS.

Chicago, April 28.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Four children are heirs in a will, two boys and two girls. We two girls do not know what the will contains except for the things that our brothers tell us.

1. We all signed a note soon after our father's death and do not know what for. One of the boys took this note and is handling all matters concerning the will, [2] leaving us two in the dark without knowledge of anything. It is fourteen months since his death and still we have no news about the will.

3. Has this brother who has taken everything in his own hands the power to charge us board or collect rents for his own benefit?

4. Have we the power to gain an equal share of the property or personal possessions which were acquired after the will was made?

5. Are we to receive a duplicate of the will and when?

6. Can a will be executed without our knowledge of its contents? H. A.

1. Obviously we cannot advise as to your legal rights if you have signed an instrument without knowing its contents. In general, an adult is presumed to have read and understood an instrument that he has signed.

2. You can insist that the will be filed in court.

3. Depends on the wording of the will and of the instrument that you signed.

4. See preceding answers.

5. No, but after it is filed in court you can obtain a certified copy by paying for it.

6. Yes. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

OLD AGE ASSISTANCE.

Chicago, April 29.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I am in my seventieth year and for fifteen months I have been receiving $14 per month from old age assistance. My son pays the rent for our flat and my wife rents three rooms to roomers when she can get them, and she and I use the back rooms. My daughter pays the premiums on my life insurance—$900—and helps in other ways when the rent from the three rooms is not sufficient for our needs. The case worker told me last week that after my death $400 of my insurance would be allowed for burial expenses, the balance reverting to the old age assistance board to apply on what they paid me during my life, and if that balance were not sufficient they would collect from my two children. Please advise me if they can do this. J. T.

In general, the accumulated pension payments are a charge against any estate left by the pensioner at the time of his death, but insurance money payable to a named beneficiary would not be a part of your estate. Hence the correctness of the case worker's statement would depend upon the wording of the insurance policy and on whether steps have been taken to subject it to the pension liability.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

LIABILITY FOR DAMAGES.

Chicago, April 29.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Your investigation of the following complaint will be appreciated, and advice on how to handle the matter is solicited. Gutters on the building next door are in such bad condition that water from the roof gushes onto the rear porches of our property. The 1838 building is in general bad repair, and because we do not know who the owner of the building is, we appeal to you. E. F.

The rule is stated as follows in 67 C. J. 886: "Where an easement has not been acquired by grant or prescription, the owner of a building is required to take care of rain water falling on the roof by providing and keeping in serviceable condition gutters and spouts sufficient to carry off such precipitation as may reasonably be expected, and if by reason of his neglect water is shed from his roof onto or against the wall or building of another, he is liable for any injury caused thereby." A WORD FOR BEN FRANKLIN.

New York, May 1.—Why is Benjamin Franklin's birthday overlooked by the government when Jefferson's was commemorated by presidential proclamation?

Instead of placing Lincoln's likeness on 5 cent pieces and Franklin's face on the pennies, as patriotically urged by many societies, the treasury department is putting Jefferson on the nickel. The post-office department is demoting Franklin to half cent stamps and featuring Jefferson on the much used three's.

Congress has also appropriated many millions for Jefferson memorials in Washington, St. Louis, and elsewhere. Jefferson is "proclaimed" as "author of the Declaration of Independence," which he merely wrote. Franklin was honored as "The Father of Our Liberty" last Constitution week at the Statue of Liberty. His Albany Plan of Union of 1754 foreshadowed independence. Franklin received more votes than Jefferson in the first Hall of Fame voting.

What has the present administration against Dr. Franklin? Is it because he is "America's Patron Saint of Thrift" and thrift is not very popular in Washington?

In the constitutional convention of 1787 it was Franklin's wise counsel and compromises that helped to make our constitution acceptable to the delegates and states and also later workable.

WEST SIDE TENNIS COURTS.

Chicago, May 3.—It is apparent that you must be a coward or afraid to publish a letter that affects all the people of the west side who like to play tennis. On March 31 I wrote a letter to THE TRIBUNE describing the terrible conditions that existed, and still exist, in Douglas park.

At present there are four tennis courts half completed, waiting for the cement or whatever material they intend to put on them. These four courts will not be completed until late in August or September. Does that make sense? The tennis courts the public are playing on [or rather attempting to] now are a disgrace to the west parks and to Chicago.

I hope THE TRIBUNE will get up enough courage to print this letter.

MAURICE KATZ.

SAYS HE'S BETTER OFF.

Genoa, Ill., April 28.—If every farmer will be truthful he is much better off now than back in the Hoover days. Franklin D. Roosevelt is the greatest farmer President we have had since Abraham Lincoln's time. We have a market both at home and abroad for every commodity produced on the farm. The farmer needed the last Frazier-Lemke bill and I cannot understand why the Supreme court was so slow in handing down its decision. Now the District courts are ignoring this law. Why? The two outstanding events which will go down in history from Roosevelt's administration are making the banks safe and the Federal Corn Loan, which took corn out of the speculators' hands. F. J. J.

STRAPHANGER WANTS TO KNOW.

Chicago, April 29.—Chicago's patient street car riding public, long having to contend with a none too adequate service, is now compelled to accept the results of drastic curtailment of service. Scores of runs are being taken off the street, thereby making it still more inadequate. I believe it to be axiomatic that the primary purpose of the surface lines is to give us proper service. We pay for it, but get less and less of it. The surface lines enjoy a virtual monopoly in public transportation and we must, presumably, accept what they give us, as most of us are unable to use any other means of transportation.

F. J. SOCHOR.

FINDS US REACTIONARY.

Chicago, May 2.—Your editorial on the "Federal Arts Bill Racket" is a worthy example of the constantly growing reactionary policies of your newspaper. The fight in congress for the passage of such a bill is distinctly one of the most progressive steps taken thus far to render culture to the masses through the efforts of the federal government. The sentiments of Dr. Damrosch do not convince the intelligent public of the fallacy of such a bill when scores of noteworthy musicians, actors, artists, and writers are heartily indorsing the idea. The medium of radio, mentioned in your editorial, advantageous as it may be in furnishing artistic expression to the people, is definitly not enough.

I wonder if your paper realizes the vast number of persons who are backing the bill, not friends of so-called "political burocrats" at Washington but persons honestly interested in promoting national culture.

Here is hoping for a permanent bureau of fine arts in the near future!

B. S.

BUT THOSE MONOPOLIES ARE DIFFERENT.

Wheaton, Ill., May 2.—Webster defines monopoly as: Any such control in a given market as enables the one having this control to raise the price of a commodity or service materially above the price fixed by free competition.

Would some good loyal New Dealer kindly explain to a former Democrat just what Mr. Roosevelt's objectives are? On the one hand he states emphatically that we need legislation to curb monopolies. On the other he declares himself as in favor of raising prices of labor above the competitive prices and also likewise advises the farmers to get together and curtail production in order to raise the prices of food products materially above their competitive levels.

Since when did politically subsidized monopolies become more honorable than private or corporate monopolies?

E. K. D.

OVERCOATS AND 82 DEGREES.

La Grange, May 2.—I was greatly interested in the recent letter in your column regarding overcoats in hot Chicago weather. I note that we fellows in the suburbs are a little more rugged than the Chicago gentry.

The other afternoon, with 82 degrees in the shade, there were numerous heavy coats being worn, and once in a while a muffler. Then there were others a bit more brave who faced the 82 degree weather by carrying the coat on the arm. Still more rugged individuals were not wearing vests, and a few were in shirt sleeves. As for me, I haven't felt the need of an overcoat for weeks. Some folks must be quite attached to them the way they hold on to them in hot weather.

F. R. FELTON.

IT WOULD BE A REMOTE SPOT.

Chicago, May 4.—I wonder if your travel department can advise me whether there is any place where a person does not have to read or hear about "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," J. Edgar Hoover, or Dizzy Dean. If there is such a place, however remote, I would like to know how to get there the quickest way.

FED UP.

IT'S A HABIT.

Chicago, May 4.—Even the most venomous dose of poison becomes impotent when followed by a cup of ambrosia such as your editorial of yesterday, "Hitler in Italy." The "Furor!"

Sometimes I curse you and sometimes I bless you, but THE TRIBUNE is THE TRIBUNE and I'm fool enough to have got the habit.

SCARE SENATORS BY PROPAGANDA ON SLUM AREAS

Housing Cult Pushes Act Through Congress.

BY JOSEPH ATOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 7.—[Special.]—An employé in one division of the widespread federal housing activities recently was asked how much credence he placed on the statistics quoted by some of the wilder members of the housing cult, attributing terrible conditions of health and delinquency, and high governmental costs, to the bad housing in slum areas.

"Well," he replied, "you must remember that those folk had a job to do. They had to sell the Wagner-Steagall bill to congress and the public. When any one has a selling job to do he uses scare propaganda. That's what that stuff was—scare propaganda."

Congress apparently was properly scared, for it passed the bill, but not until the propaganda methods used to put it over had been subjected to denunciation on the senate floor. The particular propaganda in question did not concern slum conditions, but was an attempt to defeat the cost limitations which the senate wrote into the bill.

Senators Get Propaganda.

Senator Robert F. Wagner [Dem., N. Y.], sponsor of the bill, had pages distributed to the senators' desks a letter from Langdon W. Post, president of the American Federation of Housing Authorities, opposing the cost limitation. Senator Bennett C. Clark [Dem., Mo.] protested against the action as one of the most dangerous precedents that could be set in connection with senate deliberations.

After Senator Wagner had accepted responsibility for the action, Senator Charles L. McNary [Rep., Ore.] said: "This is the boldest attempt to influence legislation I have seen in twenty years in the senate. Doubtless the responsibility lies with the organization that is opposing the limitation on the cost of housing.

"It is supposed to be a reputable institution with headquarters in Washington. I assume they inspired this propaganda for purposes of profit, because that is the line of business in which they are engaged."

Senator McNary made at least a shrewd guess in his reference to motives of profit. The American Federation of Housing Authorities' clique gathered during the drive for passage of the bill in a suite in the Hay-Adams House in Washington. Among those mentioned by newspaper reports at the time, last August, as frequenting these quarters were a number of officials of local housing authorities who hope to share in the spending of federal funds and several people who now hold fat salaried jobs in the United States Housing authority, which the bill established.

Production of the propaganda mills has been so copious that sometimes the bosses of the organizations which put it out are unable to keep pace with it. Administrator Harold L. Ickes, urging passage of the Wagner-Steagall act, asserted that elimination of "substandard" housing was necessary to increase physical fitness of army draftees in time of war.

Earlier his own PWA housing division had made an expensive statistical survey of this argument, comparing draft rejections for physical disability in a number of slum districts on New York's lower east side with those in another group in the then prosperous Riverside drive area. Rejections in the slum areas were only a half of one per cent greater and little was said of the investigation thereafter.

Fraud on Slum Dweller.

Portrayal of distressing conditions in the slums is, of course, a fraud on both the public and the slum dwellers if the money obtained on such representations is not used to remedy slum conditions. So far in the subsidized housing program all that the majority of slum dwellers affected by the program have gained has been the demolition of their homes, often admittedly inadequate, and their replacement by structures so costly that they cannot afford to live in them, even with the aid of generous subsidies.

But even were they honestly advanced, the slum cost arguments which were put out as scare propaganda for the Wagner-Steagall act, and are now being repeated in the propaganda releases of the USHA, would be subject to suspicion. There is a great deal of contrary evidence which the housing propagandists seek to obscure.

The typical slum cost argument cites statistics, valid or not, to the effect that high death rates, increased illness, crime, delinquency, and other undesirable conditions are prevalent in slum areas. These are also areas of bad housing. Therefore, the housing cult argues, bad housing is responsible for the other conditions, and society will abolish the slums by rebuilding them.

One of the most damning statistics cited against slums is high infant mortality rates. Yet in her PWA pamphlet on housing Dr. Edith Elmer Wood, one of the most respectable of the housing "experts," noted that infant mortality in the lower east side slums in New York was below the average for Manhattan. She attributed this to long activity through milk and infant welfare stations.

[This is the thirteenth of a series of stories on government housing projects. The fourteenth will appear in an early issue.]

Playing Hooky Declines in Chicago

Graph showing how truancies in Chicago public schools have been reduced gradually so that the number so far this year is substantially less than two-thirds of the total for the full year of 1924-1925.

Credits Bigger Staf

Since school opened last September the 135 truant officers in the board of education have made 52,159 investigations of absences, William L. Bodine, head of the department of compulsory education, reported yesterday to Superintendent of Schools William H. Johnson. Bodine also reported that so far this year 3,843 truants have been reported, as compared to 4,853 for the full school year last year.

"We have been reducing truancy steadily since 1925," Bodine reported. "Reduction is caused by a gradual increase in the staf of officers. The officers visit 400 public schools and branches and 60 private schools and cover 210 square miles," he said.

POLICE ARREST 2, SEIZE 3 LOADS OF MAGAZINES

Arthur J. Gontier, 75 years old, and his son, Robert, 34, magazine publishers, were arrested and three truck loads of magazines and printing equipment were seized by police yesterday in their offices at 529 South Clark street. The Gontiers operate under the name of the Sun Publications, Inc.

The raid was made by Detectives Dennis Parkerson and James Hackett of the Central station on a warant obtained by John Brown, investigator for the Rev. Philip Yarrow, head of the Illinois Vigilance association. The warant charged possession of obscene literature.

MAYOR ASKS WPA GRANT TO SURVEY CITY'S LAND USES

Would Employ 5,184; Cost $2,431,343.

Application for a $2,431,343 grant from the Works Progress administration for a complete survey of land uses in metropolitan Chicago was made yesterday by Mayor Kelly.

The project, submitted to H. K. Seltzer, district WPA supervisor, was prepared at the mayor's request by Oscar Hewitt, commissioner of public works, after a long study of the technique and purposes of such surveys.

Hewitt's plans call for employment of 5,184 persons to codify, map, chart, and publish a real estate inventory of the metropolitan area. The work will take a year.

All residential and industrial buildings will be classified according to type, construction, age, condition, and tenancy by blocks and economic areas. Age, race, and number of roomers and extra families would be included in the residential survey.

Under Hewitt's plan the city would pay $57,798 of the $2,431,343 estimated cost. It would contribute $32,208 for materials and equipment, the government $34,580. The rest would go for labor, 4,603 men to be enumerators working at from $65 a month.

The project would be controled and directed by the Chicago Plan commission, of which Col. A. A. Sprague is chairman.

Such a survey, aiming at a solution of housing, transportation, and other planning problems, has the approval of a large number of Chicago civic, housing, engineering, architectural, and business groups, said Hewitt.

He said the proposed project follows survey technique outlined by the coördinating committee of the central statistical board of the WPA.

ARCHDUKE WEDS SCHOOL TEACHER; HE IS 40, SHE IS 27

BUDAPEST, Hungary, May 7.—(AP)—Archduke Albrecht of Hapsburg was married in a civil ceremony today to Katherine Bocskay, a school teacher, in the archduke's palace here. He is 40 years old and she is 27.

Albrecht and his bride met two years ago when the archduke was hunting near the school in which she taught. His first marriage, to Irene von Lelbach in 1930, was annulled.

Chicago's Annual House and Garden Exposition Will Open at the Coliseum on Saturday

TWO FULL SIZE RESIDENCES WILL FEATURE EXHIBIT

Kelly Sets May 14-22 as 'Home Show Week.'

Chicago home owners and prospective owners will be given an opportunity to inspect the latest developments in home building and planning with the opening on Saturday of the annual National House and Garden exposition at the Coliseum. The exposition will extend through May 22.

Two completely equipped and furnished small houses will be among the many features of the exposition. There also will be a number of façades of homes, which will give prospective builders new ideas on construction. Many types of building materials and their applications to home construction will be displayed.

Mayor Issues Proclamation.

Mayor Edward J. Kelly in a proclamation designated the period of May 14 to 22 as "Chicago Home Show Week" and urged Chicagoans to attend. He described the exhibit "as a great exposition of home making products, home planning, home modernization, and home beautification which attracts the interest of home owners and prospective home builders in this area."

John A. Servas, general manager of the exposition, said information will be available for those planning remodeling and modernization, as well as those planning new construction. Information as to the purchase of sites and financing will be obtainable in the exhibits of the Federal Housing administration and the Metropolitan Housing council of Chicago.

Many Exhibitors to Attend.

More than 150 commercial exhibitors will display all the essentials for home convenience and comfort, such as heating and lighting equipment, air conditioning, refrigeration, ventilation, and other items.

One of the two small homes built inside the Coliseum is a four room house of brick construction to cost about $3,500, exclusive of the lot. Arthur Bohnen, its designer, said it will meet all the requirements of the city building ordinance. The other house is a Cape Cod cottage of wood construction to cost about $3,000, exclusive of the lot.

The Chicago Rapid Transit lines will show a number of models of gardens for back yards and flower boxes for porches to give ideas to those participating in the annual "L" line garden and flower box competition. Growing plants and flowers will be shown.

Educational Booth Planned.

The Junior Association of Commerce will have an educational booth, which will stress the high spots of the recent forum on housing conducted by William A. Rowan's aldermanic committee. Among the subjects to be covered will be housing, community organization, trafic, relationship between industrial and residential use of property, parks and playgrounds, zoning, and architectural harmony.

Pupils of 37 public and private high schools are drawing plans of homes in a contest sponsored by Mayor Kelly's keep Chicago safe committee which will be shown in the educational department of the exposition. Entries will close on Thursday. The rules provide that the contestants must show some safety feature in the home in detail.

Many Groups at Show.

Among the organizations that are coöperating in the exposition are: Architects' Small House Service bureau, Common Brick Manufacturers' association, Association of Chicago Painters and Sculptors, National Warm Air Heating and Air Conditioning association, the Mahogany association, Chicago Oil Heat committee, Burning Oil Distributors' association; Midwest Stockers' association, and others.

Numerous nationally known companies which manufacture home materials and supplies will have booths.

Walker said about $35,000 of the cost of the improvement will go for labor, which will provide employment for about 50 men for sixty days. Campbell-Lowrie-Lautermilch has the general contract. The work will be completed in about two months.

The Joslyn Manufacturing company is notable for its plan by which its employés may build substantial savings and retirement funds.

CHICAGO AREA BUILDING SHOWS GAIN IN MARCH

Total Construction Cost Put at $11,045,000.

A marked improvement in construction occurred in the Chicago area embracing eastern Wisconsin, eastern Iowa, northern Illinois, and northern Indiana at the end of March, T. O. Morgan, Chicago manager of the F. W. Dodge corporation, reported yesterday.

"Residential and nonresidential building in this area more than doubled in the number of contracts issued during March," Morgan said. "In the case of residential work it may be interpreted as a continued rise, as February contracts were well ahead of those for January."

Single Family Homes Lead.

The total of all the March contracts in the area was $11,045,000, Morgan said. Of that amount nonresidential building took $5,618,000 and residential work $5,427,000.

Morgan said that the largest single type of work was in the building of one-family houses to be occupied by the owners. Contracts for 419 residences were signed during March and their combined valuation was $3,428,000.

Next in volume was educational buildings. Eleven such buildings were put under contract, representing a total of $2,496,000. The largest of these was the Norwood Park High school, Chicago, to cost $1,200,000.

Build 22 Industrial Plants.

Twenty-two industrial buildings were placed under contract having a total floor area of 418,000 square feet. They were valued at $1,427,000. The largest in this group were a plant for the International Harvester company in Marion county, Indiana, valued at $500,000, and the Illinois Zinc company strip mill at Chicago, also valued at $500,000.

"During March we found good evidence of forthcoming building activity, which, it is estimated, will be valued at $21,000,000," Morgan said. "This is divided into $11,000,000 for nonresidential work and $10,000,000 for residential work."

B/G RESTAURANT ON DEARBORN ST. TO BE ENLARGED

B-G Foods, Inc., announced yesterday that it is doubling the size of its restaurant at 134 North Dearborn street. The restaurant will be air conditioned.

W. H. Ames of Aldis & Co. represented the lessee, and R. L. Eiger of the Eiger Realty company represented the lessors.

There is a full set of farm buildings on the land, but Agger proposes to build a new residence in which he will live during the summer. David W. Williams, Wauconda, was broker.

ACTS TO COLLECT $25,000 AWARDED TO MRS. LIGGETT

Widow of Publisher Wins Libel Judgment.

New York, May 7.—[Special.]—Morris D. Forkosch, attorney for Mrs. Edith Liggett, widow of Walter Liggett, Minneapolis editor who was assassinated in 1935, moved today to obtain execution of the $25,000 judgment awarded Mrs. Liggett in her libel suit against the Daily Worker, Clarence Hathaway, its editor, and Hyman Colodny, former business manager of the New York communist newspaper.

Attorney Forkosch formally entered the judgment in the office of the county clerk in Brooklyn. Justice Meier Steinbrink returned a verdict in Mrs. Liggett's favor on Tuesday in Brooklyn Supreme court, allowing claims for compensatory and punitive damages and granting a body execution against the two co-defendants.

Alleges Criminal Libel.

Mrs. Liggett charged the Daily Worker with criminally libeling herself and deceased husband in a series of articles published in the communist paper several months after Liggett's murder.

Walter Liggett was editor of the Midwest American, a weekly published in Minneapolis. Before he was shot to death in view of Mrs. Liggett and one of their children he had crusaded militantly against what he charged was an alliance existing between high public officials and organized criminals. He was assassinated on the eve of his announced publication of revelations involving ranking state officials of Minnesota.

In order to meet funeral and other incidental expenses Mrs. Liggett sold the article to a feature service. The Daily Worker referred to this action and to her subsequent attempts to obtain justice as "the widow of the slain publisher selling the corpse limb by limb to the highest bidder of the Republican party."

Property May Be Seized.

Attorney Forkosch declared today that there is little likelihood of the Daily Worker or its officials making payment to satisfy the judgment. Next week, he said, he will hand the sherif of New York county an order to seize the personal property of the defendants and any other assets they may possess.

Failing to obtain satisfaction, Mr. Forkosch will then act to bring about the arrest of Hathaway and Colodny in line with Justice Steinbrink's granted permission to exercise "body execution."

DAVID RUBINOFF IS SERIOUSLY ILL; GAINS REPORTED

Battle Creek, Mich., May 7.—[Special.]—The condition of David Rubinoff, the violinist, who underwent an emergency appendectomy at the Battle Creek sanitarium yesterday, was described as "serious, but improving" today. His attending physician, Dr. Walter F. Martin, revealed the appendix burst during the operation and that peritonitis had set in.

"Mr. Rubinoff is seriously ill," Dr. Martin said. "However, he has been improving and I believe he will recover." Phil Rubinoff, brother and manager, said he feared the effect of the news of the violinist's illness might have on their mother, herself seriously ill at her home in Pittsburgh. The Rubinoffs' father died in Pittsburgh April 20.

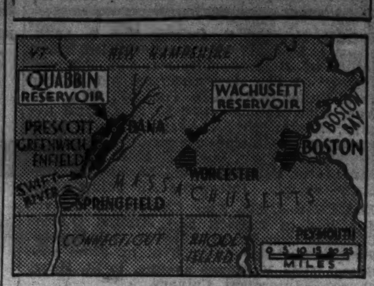
Wife of Department Store Official Granted Divorce

Mrs. Frances Madigan, 31 years old, of 4000 Washington boulevard, won an uncontested divorce yesterday on a charge of cruelty from George P. Madigan, head of Madigan Brothers department store, 4030 Madison street. Mrs. Madigan waived alimony. Her attorney, Samuel A. Rinella, informed Judge John J. Lupe she will receive a $46,000 settlement. The couple were married Jan. 5, 1937. Madigan was not in court, but was represented by Attorney Howard Brundage.

DIES AFTER FALL AT WORK.

Ignazio Cremona, 63 years old, 910 Miller street, died in the Alexian Brothers hospital yesterday of a skull fracture suffered when he fell at work on April 22.

Four Towns Doomed



Black indicates area, including sites of four towns, that will be occupied by the new Quabbin reservoir, which is to be hooked up with Wachusett reservoir to assure Boston of adequate water supply.

Boston, Mass., May 7.—[Special.]—Some time this summer a lake eighteen miles long and three to five miles wide will begin growing in the Swift river valley of western Massachusetts. Its purpose will be to assure Boston of an adequate water supply. The lake will be known as the Quabbin reservoir and when completed will have cost some $65,000,000, obtained through state bond issues.

Four complete towns, comprising several thousand population, will be blotted out by the rising waters of the lake. They are Enfield, Dana, Prescott, and Greenwich. Their main streets will be under 50 to 200 feet of water.

July 1 is the deadline for residents to leave, but the migration already is well under way. Residents of Enfield held their final civic gathering ten days ago. Bodies and gravestones have been moved from the cemeteries.

Three dikes have been constructed to impound the lake, which drains a watershed of 160 square miles. Otherwise the natural bowl of hills in the river valley will form the sides of the huge reservoir. Engineers expect that it will take from five to seven years for the reservoir to fill. A recurrence of the 1936 floods, however, would do the job in a year.

NEW FT. SHERIDAN BUILDINGS WILL COST $2,000,000

PWA Grant Now Pending in Congress.

Details of a proposed $2,000,000 building program at Fort Sheridan were made public yesterday at 6th corps area headquarters in Chicago. The money is to come from $450,000,000 in direct grants of the Public Works administration, requested by President Roosevelt, in an appropriation bill now pending before the house appropriations committee.

The war department, supported by the house military affairs committee, has asked that $123,000,000 of the $450,000,000 be earmarked for army housing and technical construction. Fort Sheridan's projects are on the priority list.

Barracks for Coast Artillery.

These include $656,900 to build barracks for the 61st coast artillery, which has never had its own quarters; $1,229,800 for a new hospital, school for cooks, garages and a chapel, and $157,440 for noncommissioned officers' quarters.

Fort Sheridan now has 2,000 enlisted men and 90 officers, who, with their families, make the post's total population more than 3,000 persons. Many men are now required to sleep in cramped double decked bunks.

The present hospital, officers said, has beds for only 180, and is not considered worth repairing or enlarging. The proposed hospital would provide beds for 200, with all modern medical and surgical facilities.

Posts Use 1917 Buildings.

The crowded conditions at Fort Sheridan are typical of those at nearly all the United States army posts, officers said. In many places the army is using world war structures, built in 1917, and intended to last only five years. Housing conditions have been acute since the army was expanded from 125,000 to 165,000 men a year ago.

Other building projects in the 6th corps area, which would be provided by the WPA grants, are the following: Scot field, Belleville, Ill., $4,472,450; Chanute field, Rantoul, Ill., $3,000,000; Jefferson barracks, St. Louis, Mo., $450,000; Fort Brady, Sault Ste. CHICAGO BOASTS AN ART TREASURE 3,300 YEARS OLD

Bronze Vase Stealthily Eased Out of China.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Chicago is the possessor of a new treasure — the kind of thing that makes a city the objective of artists and connoisseurs.

It is a recent purchase by the Art Institute, and this week it is for the first time placed on view in the occident.

Under the institute's new scheme of "isolated exhibits" it is this month's "Masterpiece of the Month"—and it was a masterpiece 3,300 years ago.

Connoisseurs of Chinese bronze are in raptures over it. They declare it to be not only one of the finest Chinese bronzes in America but also the only one of its type that has ever reached this country.

Mystery in Source.

Just how it reached us the authorities of the institute are not telling, nor do they exactly know. The methods by which such treasures are eased out of China are often difficult and devious, and sometimes dangerous.

What can be told here is that about the year 1400 B. C. a Chinese grandee, dwelling near the now ruined city of An-Yang, died. His heirs, with a lively concern for their future status in the hereafter to which the grandee had gone, summoned the best artificers in bronze in that region—the An-Yangers were experts in that kind of work—and commissioned them to make a propitiatory vase or jar which should be filled with grain and placed in the chapel-tomb of the deceased.

The artificers worked with crude furnaces, hand bellows, and other tools that we would call hopelessly primitive. But they turned out a beautiful job—their designing and adjusting and calculating being so perfect that the delicate decorations covering every inch of the propitiatory jar required no finishing with chisels.

In Tomb for 33 Centuries.

With ornate ceremonial the vase was filled with grain—storage cereal, so to speak, for the nourishment of the departed spirit—and into the tomb the masterpiece went.

Thirty-three centuries pass and the city of An-Yang vanishes, a city that once was the capital of the powerful clan of Shang-Yin.

Five years ago some excavating was done in that region. Whether it was done in an accidental way by plowmen or by a small organized group of men who, not to mince words, were grave robbers, the Art institute does not know. In any case, one of the finds was the noble vase—the power of Gibraltar in its austere lines—which now reposes safely in the institute.

From the hands of the excavators, whoever they were, our bronze passed into other hands.

Negotiations Are Opened.

Two months ago a trustworthy Chinese dealer into whose hands the masterpiece of thirty-three centuries ago had come, opened negotiations with the institute's trustees. His home had been destroyed in the current hostilities and he had been more or less a fugitive. But he had gotten out of China with a whole skin, plus the precious bronze. That object he did not remove from China through either a Chinese or a Japanese controled port. He tried the British owned port of Hongkong and he was successful.

Then came the deal with the institute and the end of a drama that began—if you accept Dr. Vizetelly's biblical chronology—about half a century after Moses ceased laying down the law to the Israelites.

At first those who are neither connoisseurs of Chinese bronze nor artists who work in metal may gaze with lack lustre eyes on the new acquisition, which measures less than a foot and a half in height, but, as they linger before it, its massive power takes hold of them. "And yet," said Dean Kelley, "with all its strength there is nothing sluggish about the design. Here you have a noble simplicity of form and a wealth of decoration, but the decoration never interferes with the simplicity of the form. And so the long gone Chinese artists in bronze still are teaching us goodly lessons."

OXFORD BIBLE DESIGNER TALKS OF RARE BOOKS

Rogers Reminisces with McCutcheon.

Bruce Rogers, considered one of the world's greatest book designers, shrugged out of his coat in John T. McCutcheon's studio on the thirty-first floor of Tribune Tower yesterday. Sitting back in his shirt sleeves the designer and printer of the latest edition of the great Oxford folio Bible that became a collector's item before it was off the presses grinned because he had been told his visit fell on the day after Mr. McCutcheon's sixty-eighth birthday.

"John is just eight days older than I am," he said, and turned in a burst of exuberance to McCutcheon: "John, we ought to celebrate this. I'll be 68 on May 14."

Friends Since College Days.

The two men, friends since college days at Purdue university, Lafayette, Ind., which was Rogers' birthplace, exchanged glances of understanding. Then McCutcheon began to tell how Rogers designed and printed a memorial book for David E. Ross, Lafayette manufacturer, who is president of the board of trustees of the university and one of the co-donors of the Ross-Ade stadium there.

"It's the only volume of its kind," McCutcheon said. "It contained letters from alumni groups the world over. And it was a perfectly beautiful work of the printers' and book designers' art. It was priceless because it was something money couldn't buy. We presented it to Mr. Ross at a banquet Tuesday night."

Shakespeare for Shakespeare.

Rogers said he is now preparing a series of volumes for a book collector's association in Boston.

"It's to be a sort of Shakespeare's edition of Shakespeare," he said. "One play to a volume, in a type nearly contemporary with Shakespeare and paper and covers in materials similar to those at hand in his time."

Most of Rogers' 400 books, printed during his 48 year career as a book designer, have been rare and precious editions. His fame is such that he was immortalized by being chosen as one of six printers whose personal marks were engraved on the bronze doors of the rare book room of the library of congress.

OCTAVIAN GOGA, OUSTED PREMIER OF RUMANIA, DIES

BUCHAREST, Rumania, May 7.—(AP)—Octavian Goga, who headed a Nationalist, anti-Semitic Rumanian government for a few turbulent weeks early this year, died today. He was 57 years old.

Goga, who suffered a heart ailment after his resignation as premier, Feb. 10, had a stroke this week.

King Carol commissioned Goga, thrice previously a cabinet minister, to form a new government Dec. 28, 1937. In the six weeks that it lasted his administration imposed drastic strictures on Jews and laid the basis for a broad anti-Semitic and Fascist program.

The country was sharply divided and business suffered heavily. In the end, with the nation's economy endangered, King Carol summoned Dr. Miron Cristea to form another government.

MOSES GINZBURG, PIONEER JEWISH PUBLISHER, DIES

Leader of His People for Half a Century.

Moses Phillip Ginzburg, founder and publisher of the Daily Jewish Courier and a leader in Chicago's Jewish community for more than half a century, died yesterday in his home at 1214 South Halsted street. He was 75 years old.

Moses Ginzburg.

A month ago Mr. Ginzburg and his wife were guests of honor at a dinner attended by 1,500 persons to celebrate their golden wedding and his jubilee as publisher of the Courier, the first Yiddish journal to be published in the United States.

Born in a ghetto in old Russian Poland, Mr. Ginzburg came to Chicago in 1883, when with Moses Dulsky and Nathan B. Grossberg he assisted in organizing the Hebrew Literature society. Five years later he founded the Daily Jewish Courier.

Founds Hebrew School.

Mr. Ginzburg and his associates in the Hebrew Literature society also founded the Moses Montefiore Hebrew Free school, and later he led in the formation of the Gomle Chesed Shel Emes, a free burial society for the needy, and the Beth Moshev Z'Keinin, a home for the aged.

In most of his enterprises Mr. Ginzburg was aided by his wife. Among several fostered or aided by the Ginzburgs were the Moes Chittim committees, which raised funds for the purchase of matzos and other foods of the Passover for the indigent, and the order of the Knights of Zion, the first such organization in America.

Other Institutions Aided.

A list of other institutions which owe their origin to the inspiration of Mr. Ginzburg includes the Marks Nathan orphan home, opened in 1904; the Jewish People's institute, whose charter was obtained in 1903; the Hebrew Theological college, opened in 1920; Mount Sinai hospital, the Federated Jewish charities, the Daughters of Zion day and night nursery and infant home, and the organization of the union of orthodox Hebrew congregations in Chicago.

Surviving Mr. Ginzburg besides his widow are a son, Israel Eli Ginzburg, and three daughters, Mrs. Harry A. Lipsky, Mrs. Jacob Goodman, and Mrs. Leo Silberman.

COLBY BLAMES ROOSEVELT FOR BUSINESS SLUMP

Buffalo, N. Y., May 7.—[Special.]—Bainbridge Colby, secretary of state under President Wilson, speaking tonight at the annual dinner of the New York State Bankers' association, laid the causes of the recession directly at President Roosevelt's doorstep.

"The present depression is no mystery," he said, "but the inevitable result of the fallacies and blunders of the administration. It is the President's contribution to history, and will bear his name.

"The country is fed up with the pretentious little men who regale us on the radio and through other media, with the ill digested, half understood, mistakenly applied knowledge—a very different thing from that true and serviceable knowledge which has been tested by experience and which we call wisdom.

"Perhaps Frederick the Great was right when he said that, if he wished to punish a province, he would put a professor to govern it."

SIX SHARE $100,000 FOR PICKING TIME OF ICE BREAKUP

NENANA, Alaska, May 7.—[U. P.]—Six winners today shared in prize money of nearly $100,000, awarded annually to the person or persons estimating closest the time of the breakup of ice in the Tanana river.

Fire bells and steam whistles summoned hundreds of participants in the pool to the banks of the river last night when the thick ice began to crumble at 8:14 p. m.

Unusually warm weather of the last few days fooled many persons on the movement of the ice. It had been melting rapidly. The ice jams cut through the channel and piled the ice high as it moved near the tripod in the center of the river. Then it moved in a mass to the line attached to a clock on the store, by which the first movement was judged.

LAWRIN WINS KENTUCKY DERBY; DAUBER 2D

CUBS BEAT BEES, 5-4; SOX LOSE, 5-4; BOTH IN TENTH

MARTY SCORES HERMAN TO WIN FOR CARLETON

Demaree Recovers Batting Eye.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The Boston Bees, who the day previous had been kicked around ingloriously by the Cubs, developed into admirably ambitious athletes yesterday, but their industry netted them nothing. The Cubs, apparently equal to the unexpected sturdiness of the enemy, reeled off another triumph by way of getting themselves in the proper mental state for the pace making Giants with whom they have their season's first date this afternoon. All that the stubbornness of the Bees did was to force the battle into ten innings before the home troops gathered in the winning run of a 5 to 4 count.

Although passes weren't exactly plentiful for the Cubs, they made use of gratuities off Jim Turner, who went the route, to fashion the decisive tally. The 31 year old gentleman, who in the first nine innings had walked only two, opened the tenth with a pass to Billy Herman. Rip Collins supplied the usual sacrifice, Frank Demaree was purposely passed and with a 2 and 1 count Joe Marty hoisted himself into a hero rôle by sending Herman home on a single to left.

Cubs Encounter Complications.

The extra inning was forced on the Cubs after they had good reason to expect they could romp to victory in regulation time. They started off with three runs, and in the fourth nicked Turner for another, thus establishing a 4 to 0 edge. But eventually there were complications. Clay Bryant experienced a violent attack of wildness in the fifth and before Tex Carleton, charley horse and all, could effect a rescue the Bees had compiled three runs. Then they tied it in the seventh and in the three subsequent innings made such serious gestures that it took brilliant fielding as well as pitching to stop them.

The Cubs picked off their three run first inning lead against the 1937 winner of twenty decisions mainly because of a sudden revival by Demaree. The man who has been hitting down with the goats instead of in the classy circles to which he is accustomed came up with one of his best afternoons of the season. Two of the first three runs were due to a triple of which he was the author. Subsequently he exploded two singles, and, while these went to waste, they at least promoted him to the free tenth inning ride which brought Marty up to deliver the decisive punch.

Three Run Start.

The Cubs got six men to base before any one was retired in the first inning, but even with this there were only three runs. Hack singled and so did Herman on a hit and 'un play, Hack taking third. Collins' short fly dropped in center for a single, Hack scoring. Herman and Collins registered on a triple which Demaree drove against the right center field brick barrier. The bases were loaded when Marty was hit on the trousers by a wild pitch and Galan walked. The gayety ended on O'Dea's three strikes and a double play into which Jurges grounded.

After his stormy first inning Turner began to act like the Turner of 1937. He handed a pass to Hack with one out in the second inning, but Her-

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 7.—The White Sox made a spirited effort to help Ted Lyons win his 200th victory today, but for the second successive day they proved inadequate in extra innings. Against the relief efforts of Johnny Rigney and Bill Cox the Washington Senators scored two runs in the tenth inning, thus accomplishing a 5 to 4 victory to sweep the two game series.

The first two Sox hits of their day's total of five drove in three runs to give them a 3 to 1 lead in the fourth. This advantage prevailed until the seventh inning, when Lyons fought off a big rally to hold the Senators to one run, which set the score at Sox, 3; Senators, 2. In the eighth Lyons made another great stand, but the Senators made an unearned run and tied the score.

Kids Fold Up.

In the ninth the Senators had the bases full with one out, but Lyons made still another heroic stand and the tie went on.

In the first of the tenth a walk to Jimmy Dykes and a double by Boze Berger put the Sox ahead, 4 to 3, but in the process Lyons gave way to a pinch batter. Rigney sought to pitch the tenth and put on one of his historical shows, which included a hit, a walk and a wild pitch. The Senators had the score tied and Zeke Bonura on second with the winning run when Cox went in. Cecil Travis banged his first pitch into center field to send Zeke home with the winning run.

The unhappy, though exciting, visit here dropped the Sox two games below the .500 mark as they moved on to New York to vie with the world champion Yankees in three games.

Sox Score First.

Both sides scored in the second, each after two outs had been accomplished. In the Sox half Walker flied out, Kuhel walked, and after Owen had grounded out Dykes also drew a pass. Sewell then singled to left center, Kuhel scoring and Dykes reaching third. When the throw was made to third Sewell sneaked to second. Lyons bounced out to Bonura. After Travis and Myer had supplied infield outs in the Senators' half, R. Ferrell doubled to center and scored on De Shong's single to center. Almada also singled, but Lewis struck out.

With one out in the fourth, Kuhel drew his second walk and stole second. Owen bounced to Travis, and Travis' throw to third apparently had Kuhel sunk. Joe, however, executed a beautiful hook slide to get under Lewis. So Kuhel was safe at third and Owen at first on the fielder's choice. Dykes then pulled a slicker play he had outlined yesterday in a lobby fanning bee. Seeing Case playing him in right center, Jimmy half bunted the ball over Bonura's head into unpatroled territory. It went for a double—the second Sox hit—and scored Kuhel and Owen. Sewell then lined to De Shong and Dykes was doubled off second.

Mr. Quinn Goes Guessing.

Both teams had been yelling at the work of Umpire Quinn for two days and Lyons and De Shong had been particularly vociferous in the early stages of today's contest. The matter reached a more or less violent stage in the Sox fifth. Lyons, whose earlier complaints had been aimed at Mr. Quinn's persistence in calling balls while Ted was pitching, turned to a squawk of another kind when a

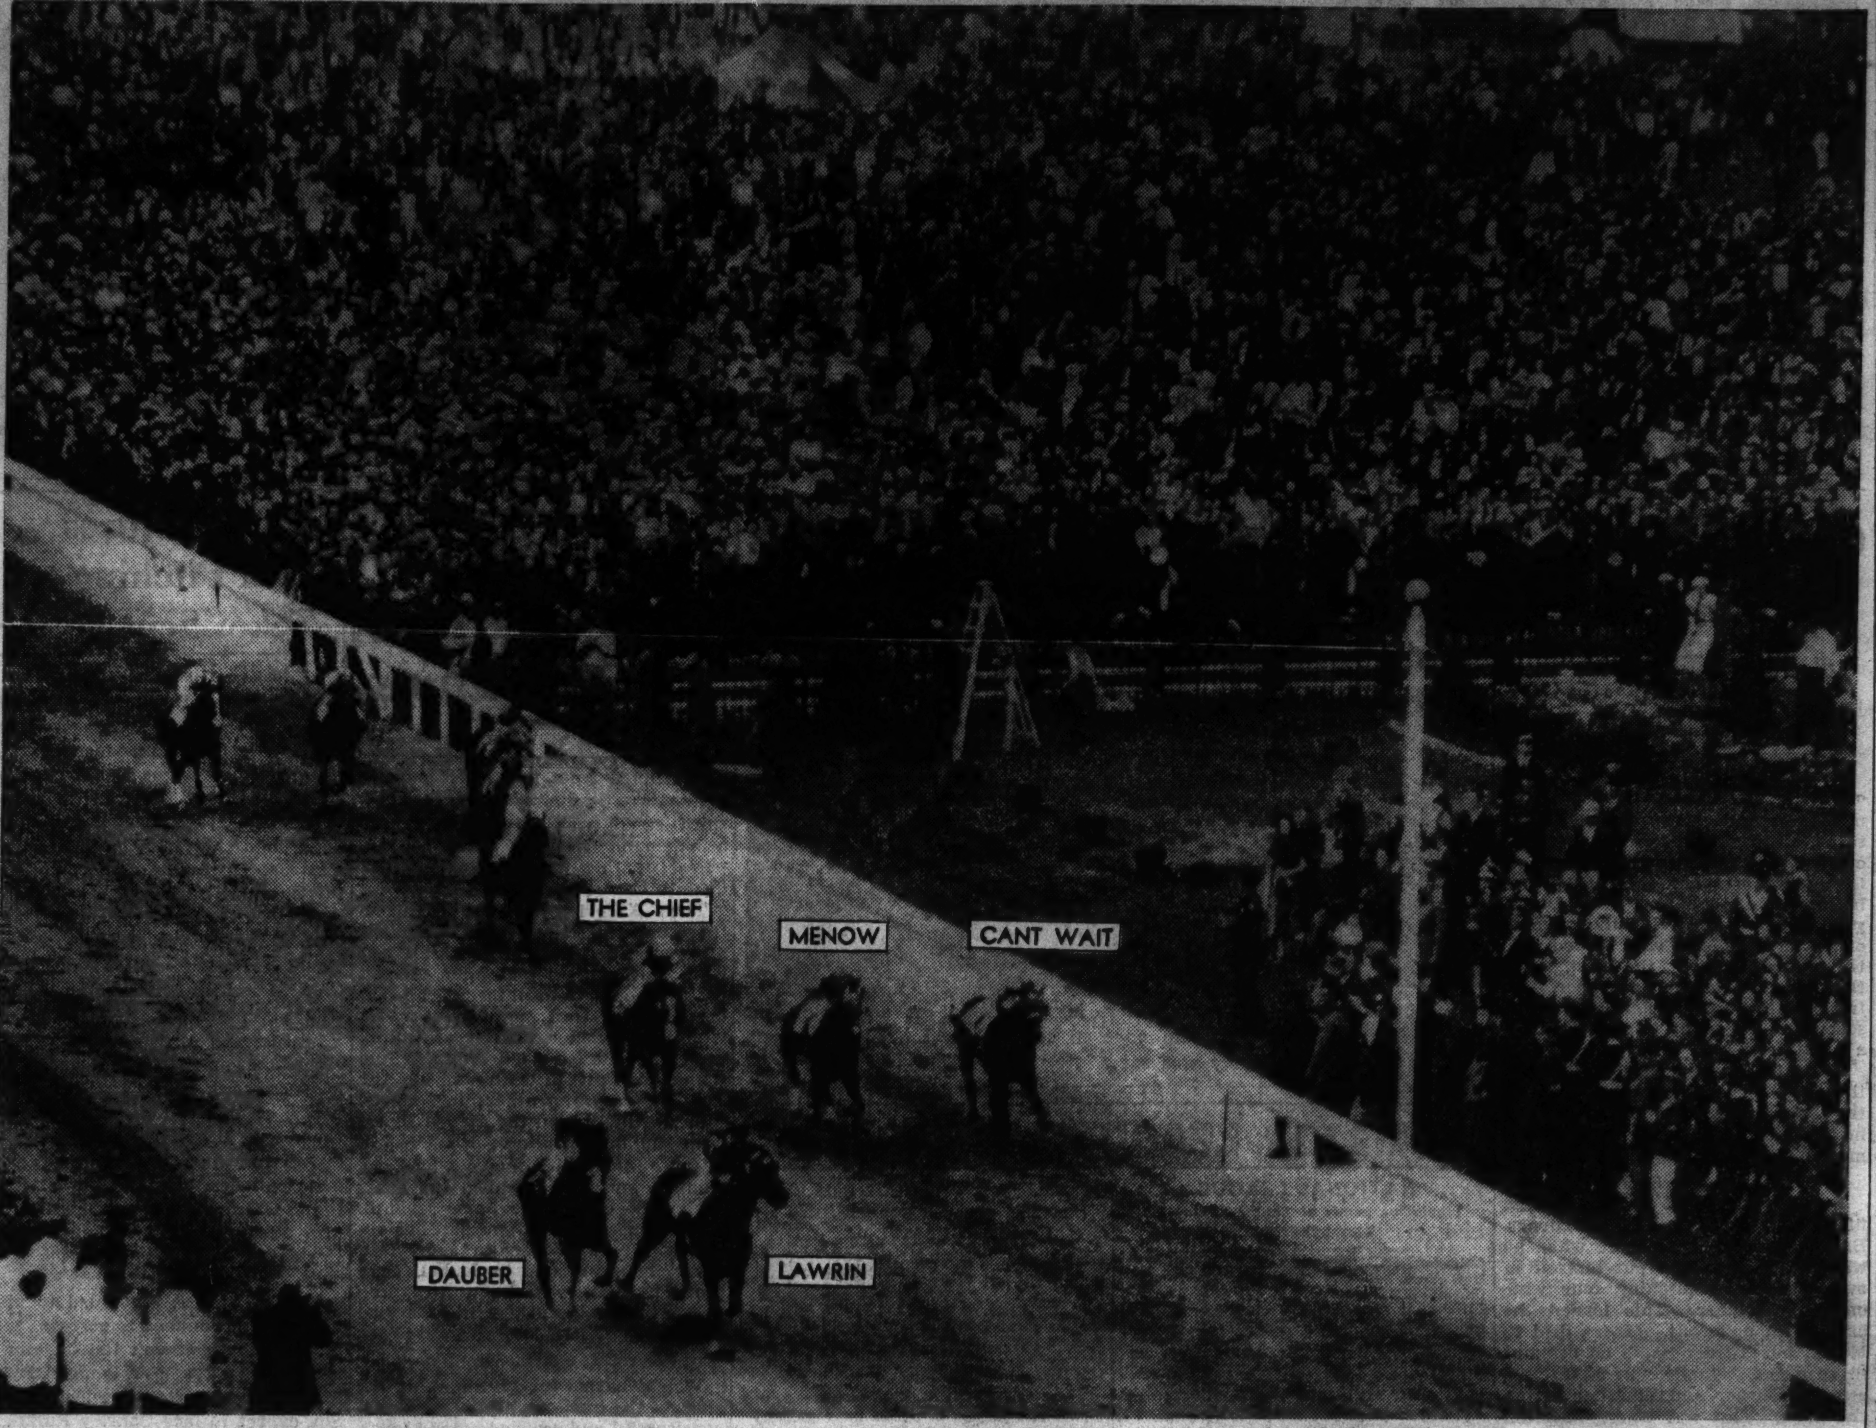
SURPRISE! AN 8 TO 1 SHOT TAKES KENTUCKY'S BIG STAKE



Lawrin leads the country's fastest 3 year olds across the finish line to win the Kentucky Derby. A crowd of 65,000 gathered at Churchill Downs yesterday to see this historic turf event. Lawrin, ridden by Eddie Arcaro, raced in fifth position for the first half mile, moved up to second at the three quarters and then went to the front. He led the way into the stretch by three lengths. Then he withstood Dauber's closing rush. Can't Wait passed Menow in the closing strides to take third.

An Irishman Defies Chicago GoldenGlovers

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ABOARD THE QUEEN MARY, May 7.—The Atlantic ocean, over which Europe's amateur boxing champions are sailing on their way to Chicago, began to get playful this afternoon and was rolling about quite friskily as the athletes stepped through their daily grind in preparation for bouts with the Golden Gloves winners in the Chicago Stadium on May 18.

The fighters have acquired their sea legs, however, and are rolling with the ship. Even Herbert Nurnberg of Germany, European lightweight champion who was confined to his room yesterday by a condition described as internal uneasiness, was up and about today.

Rain Halts Drill.

Sparring drill on the sun deck, which attracted a goodly share of the ship's passengers, was interrupted during the second bout by rain and spray that endangered the boxers' footing. Ollie Lehtinen of Finland and Guido Nardecchia of Italy were performing with great gusto at the time. Competition between these two is extremely heated;

PICK EIGHT FOR BRITISH WALKER CUP GOLF TEAM

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, May 7.—(AP)—Eight players, including the 17 year old Irishman, Jim Bruen, were named today to Great Britain's Walker cup golf team, which meets the United States here June 3-4.

Named with Bruen were Harry Bentley, Leonard Crawley, A. T. Kyle, Frank Pennink, and Charles Stowe, all of England, and Hector Thomson and Gordon Peters of Scotland. J. B. Beck was named captain of the team. One more place will be filled after the British amateur tourney is played late this month.

Thomson, British amateur champion of 1936; Bentley, Peters, and Crawley all are veterans of Walker cup play, but the others will be making their debut in the international series.

Crawley, Bentley, and Pennink all have won the English amateur title, Pennink the last two years in succession. Bruen, star of the Walker cup trials, held here Thursday and Friday, holds the Irish closed amateur championship.

LAWRIN'S NEXT IMPORTANT RACE WILL BE CLASSIC

Louisville, Ky., May 7.—[Special.]—The next important 3 year old engagement for Lawrin, the Kentucky Derby winner, will be the Arlington Classic. He is not eligible for the Preakness Stakes next Saturday nor for the Belmont Stakes. Trainer Ben Jones plans to bring the colt to Chicago soon to prepare him for the Classic, which will be run in July. First, however, he will be taken to Aqueduct.

In addition to 10 per cent of the $47,050 Derby purse, Jocky Eddie Arcaro is said to have received $2,500 from Owner Herbert G. Woolf for his winning ride. Arcaro, under contract to Mrs. Payne Whitney's Green Tree stable, originally was scheduled to ride Red Breast in the Derby.

When that colt was withdrawn by Mrs. Whitney he was permitted to accept the mount on Lawrin.

Tribune Golf School Faculty of High Caliber

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

The sixth annual free golf school conducted by THE TRIBUNE, which opens Tuesday night on the four courses of the Chicago park district, is assured of one of the ablest teaching faculties in the game today—the Illinois section of the Professional Golfers' association.

The Illinois P. G. A., long rated the strongest teaching unit in the national organization and a pioneer in the principles of group instruction, has constituted the teaching staf of the school since it was founded in 1933. These men, who have devoted their lives to advancement of the game, realized the potentialities of the school as a stimulus to golf at its outset and they have donated their services to it enthusiastically ever since.

They're Top Flight Teachers.

All of the four head instructors for the course of four lessons are well versed in the mechanics of the school, in addition to being top flight teachers. They are Jock Anderson of Techny Fields, Tom Walsh of Westgate Valley, Lew Waldron of Columbus, and Harry Adams of Elgin. An-

Bet $1,511,000

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 7.—[Special.]—Betting on the nine races on the Kentucky Derby day card at Churchill Downs today totaled $1,511,000. This is approximately $50,000 less than on Derby day a year ago. Wagering on the Derby today totaled $525,000.

BY FRENCH LANE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Louisville, Ky., May 7.—Lawrin, a bay colt from Missouri owned by Herbert G. Woolf of Kansas City, carried on with his great speed for a mile and a quarter this afternoon, finally drove up from behind in the stretch, and became the sixty-fourth winner of the $50,000 Kentucky Derby.

He scored his victory by a length over Dauber, owned by William du Pont of Delaware. Back five lengths more was Can't Wait, color bearer of Myron Selznick of Hollywood, Cal., in third place.

It was the masterful ride Lawrin received at the hands of Eddie Arcaro that made his triumph possible. Sixty-five thousand dazed spectators watched him guide Lawrin safely around the course, always in the thick of a battle that found the two heavily backed choices, Fighting Fox and Bull Lea, eliminated when the breaks of racing luck went against them. Both were caught in jams from which neither recovered.

Glory Is All Lawrin's.

Their misfortune, however, does not take from Lawrin any of the glory he has won nor does it take any of the brilliance away from the ride Arcaro gave him. They wheeled up from behind on the last turn, drove to the lead on the outside, then with a strong wind blowing into his teeth Lawrin went on to withstand a mighty challenge made by Dauber in the final half furlong.

Lawrin ran the mile and a quarter in 2:04 4-5, slow time compared with most recent Derby performances over a fast track. But speedsters such as Twenty Grand, Bold Venture, and War Admiral had no such a gale blowing into their eyes when they started their run down the home stretch as did the field today.

The wind was blowing so stoutly that Lawrin appeared to be running sideways. He might have been trying to run out, which easily could have been the case had the hoof he injured last winter in Florida been hurting him.

Pace Never Really Fast.

The pace wasn't particularly fast at any time in the race. The first quarter was run in :23 1-5, the half in :47 2-5, the three-quarters in 1:12 2-5, and the mile in 1:38 1-5. It required 26 3-5 seconds for Lawrin to run the last quarter of a mile.

That slow last quarter left an argument open that never will be settled. How would Lawrin have fared had the sick stretch runner Stagehand been in the battle? Stagehand, it will be remembered, ran the last quarter of a mile of the Santa Anita handicap in time that was two seconds faster.

With the bulk of the betting support going to Fighting Fox and Bull Lea, the Missouri colt became a long shot in the final minutes of the wagering. The winner paid $19.20 to win, $8.80 to place, and $4.80 to show. Dauber paid $12 to place and $6 to show. Can't Wait's show price was $8.20.

Menow Is Fourth.

In fourth place came Menow, the early pace maker. The Chief was fifth. Fighting Fox finished sixth and Bull Lea was eighth in the ten horse field.

Lawrin scored his victory in a Derby that was held amid all the pomp and splendor that has become its tradition. The day dawned bright and clear, but LAWRIN, saving much ground and reserved off the pace, responded willingly when called upon; came through on the inside when easily wearing MENOW down; was under severe pressure to open up a commanding advantage approaching the final eighth; bore out through the last sixteenth but held DAUBER safe. Latter, badly outrun early and slow to respond, began to improve his position when racing wide on the stretch turn, continued near the middle of the track while closing with fine belated speed and determination and was getting to the winner. CAN'T WAIT, close to the pace from the start and rated under steady reserve for about three quarters, was under strong riding thereafter; dropped back as if through soon after entering the stretch but came again mildly, outfinishing MENOW in the last stride. Latter made a good pace under steady rating; swerved out on the stretch turn and weakened under pressure thereafter. THE CHIEF ran an even race. FIGHTING FOX followed the early pacemaker under a strong hold; was in close quarters for a brief time leaving the backstretch but did not respond when urged and gave way badly after a mile. CO-SPORT was outrun. BULL LEA, away fast, could not hold a contending place and labored badly in the final half mile. MOUNTAIN RIDGE had early speed and was inclined to swerve when tiring.

YANKS BATTER TIGERS, 12 TO 8, BEFORE 41,070

Di Maggio, Gehrig Lead 17 Hit Assault.

New York, May 7.—(AP)—The Yankees collected 17 hits for 22 bases today and trampled the Detroit Tigers, 12 to 8, in the season's first meeting of the two clubs before 41,070 at Yankee stadium. It was the Yanks' fifth straight victory.

Joe Di Maggio and Lou Gehrig collected three hits apiece; Myril Hoag drove in four runs with a double and single, and Bill Dickey sent two across. The only sour note from a Yankee viewpoint was that Lefty Gomez, after a fine pitching effort for six innings, was belted out under a five run assault in the seventh. He tok credit for the victory, however.

Bill Terry Saves Hubbell; He'll Face Cubs Today

After all, Bill Terry who manages the Giants has some respect for the Cubs. He has saved Carl Hubbell, the noted left hander, for today's opener of the three game series in Wrigley field. Larry French will oppose the league champions.

The 4,226 spectators yesterday not only had to contend with a cold breeze but a drizzle as well.

Vince Di Maggio, brother of the greater Joe, nicked Carleton for a double, but nevertheless had a terrible afternoon at bat. Bryant fanned him twice in the first four innings and Carleton did the same to him in the fifth. Di Maggio was charged with a fourth strikeout in the tenth when he bunted foul with a two strike count.

Carleton's five and two-thirds innings of work yesterday may mean that he can't be used in the Giant series. Bill Lee will be used tomorrow.

SOME OF INGREDIENTS IN CUBS' OVERTIME VICTORY

Vince Di Maggio, brother of the Yankees' noted Joe, swings at the ball in the second inning, but strikes out. Ken O'Dea is behind the plate for the Cubs.

Cubs Battle 10 Innings for 5 to 4 Decision

man's grounder to Warstler was turned into a double play. Collins opened the third with a single through short, but the next three batters didn't even get the ball beyond the infield. With the opening of the fourth O'Dea, who fanned with the bases filled in the first, came through with a run producer. He tripled into the right field corner and scored on Jurges' fly to give the Cubs a 4 to 0 lead.

Prior to his sudden departure in the fifth, Bryant was able to keep the Bees away from the plate, but he wasn't exactly a wizard in the matter of keeping them off the bases.

Bees Tie Score.

Bryant's downfall in the trying fifth started with a pass to Turner. Bryant tumbled some more when he walked Warstler and put himself in even deeper by pitching four wide ones to Fletcher. This loaded the bases with none out. Moore flied to Marty, but Turner made no attempt to score. Cuccinello singled to left, sending Turner and Warstler across the plate. This was where Carleton appeared. He followed the Bryant scheme by passing West, thus reloading the bases. Mayo's fly to Marty let Fletcher score. Carleton then fanned Di Maggio.

Carleton continued to operate on a strikeout basis in the sixth. He fanned Lopez and did the same to Warstler and Fletcher after Turner had singled. In the seventh, however, Tex lost his strikeout ball and also his one run lead. For a starter he walked Moore, and it proved costly. Moore went to second on Cuccinello's infield out and home on West's single, which did a billiard off Hack's foot.

Senators Beat Sox, 5 to 4, in Tenth Inning

third strike was called on him as a batsman. Nothing but sass happened at this juncture and Berger flied to Case.

Then Kreevich ran the count to three balls and two strikes. The final pitch appeared to be a couple of feet wide of the plate and Mike started for first, only to be informed he had been called out on strikes. He whirled, howled a protest at Quinn, then gave him a good bump as the umpire sought to turn and do the familiar umpire strut. Quinn bounced Mike forthwith and threatened Dykes with similar discipline.

Three infield hits in a row, by Case, Bonura, and Stone, loaded the bases with none out in the home seventh. The runners held their stations on Travis' fly to Walker in short left. Myer bounced out to Kuhel, Case scoring. Berger made a nice stop and Kuhel a great catch of a bad throw to get R. Ferrell.

Wright Starts Trouble.

Wright batted for De Shong at the start of the home eighth. He singled over second and reached second when Dykes dropped Rosenthal's throw after tagging him. It was tough scoring on Dykes for Wright hit his arm full force just as Jim received the ball for a lightning tag play. Almada doubled off the right field sign board, scoring Wright with the tying run.

After Stone had fouled to Owen to get the Senator ninth under way, Travis doubled to center, his first hit of the game. Myer was given an intentional pass and R. Ferrell walked on four pitches, filling the bases. Goslin batted for Kelley and fouled to Kuhel after a three and two count. Almada forced R. Ferrell.

Kohlman, third Senator pitcher, walked Dykes on four pitches to start the tenth and Dykes moved up on Sewell's sacrifice. Thompson batted for Lyons and grounded out to Myer, Dykes reaching third. Berger doubled along the third base line, scoring Dykes. Kohlman pitched one strike to Rosenthal, then was replaced by Chase, who slipped a third strike past Rosy.

That Big Swoon.

Rigney was the Sox pitcher at the start of the home tenth. Lewis singled to right and advanced on Case's sacrifice. Rigney bounced a wild pitch four feet in front of the plate, Lewis reaching third. Bonura walked. Stone singled to center, scoring Lewis with the tying run and Bonura stopping at second. Rigney was yanked and Cox went in. Whereupon Travis singled to center on Cox's first pitch and Bonura galloped home dramatically with the winning run.

Brown Injures Arm Pitching to Zeke; Sent Home

Washington, D. C., May 7.—The White Sox departed here for New York without the presence of their all-time major league champion game finisher, Clint Brown. Inevitable Clint is en route to Chicago, suffering from a chipped bone in his pitching arm. Discovery of the chip came this morning following an X-ray examination. It was said no estimates of the duration of Brown's absence would be made until specialists in Chicago decided whether an operation would be necessary.

Last season Brown finished forty-eight Sox games, to set a new major league record. This year he was far ahead of that ratio. Yesterday was the Sox's fifteenth game and the eighth in which Brown was the finishing pitcher. He said before departing to Chicago today that he hurt the arm pitching to Zeke Bonura in the thirteenth inning.

Bill Deitrich is scheduled to pitch against the Yankees tomorrow, "provided a house doesn't fall on him or something," as Manager Dykes moaned in making the selection. The Sox expect to face Charley Ruffing.

Lu Blue, former star American league first baseman with the Detroit Tigers, the St. Louis Browns, and the White Sox, was a press box visitor today. Lu has been working in Washington on a project to develop ball players in the prep ranks.

The Sox will be among the first Chicagoans to greet Arch Ward, sports editor of THE TRIBUNE, and his party of European boxing champions in New York, Monday. They will be housed at Hotel New Yorker, which also will be New York headquarters of the invaders.

Maroon Nine Loses First Big 10 Game

Lafayette, Ind., May 7.—[Special.]—Purdue's baseball team handed Chicago its first Big Ten defeat of the season this afternoon, 7 to 4, in a game played amid frequent showers.

Arnold Bredewater, Boilermaker pitcher, held the Maroons to five hits in turning in his third straight conference triumph. Purdue touched Amundsen, Chicago starter, for nine hits and seven runs in six innings.

Sivesind hit a home run for Chicago in the eighth. Bredewater fanned thirteen and issued only two passes. Score:

Chicago .... 200 000 110—4 5 2
Purdue .... 202 030 00*—7 10 3

N. U. BEATS OHIO, 11-3.

Northwestern scored eleven runs on eight hits yesterday to win its first Big Ten game in six starts, 11 to 3, from Ohio State on Roycemore field.

Harry Skidmore went the route for Northwestern and allowed only five hits. Jack Woy was the most effective batter for Northwestern, getting three hits in five times at bat. Score:

Ohio State .... 000 000 003— 3 5 4
Northwestern .... 430 001 03*—11 8 2

INDIANA BEATS MICHIGAN.

Ann Arbor, Mich., May 7.—[Special.]—Indiana university's baseball team handed Michigan its fifth Big Ten defeat today, 4 to 1.

Herman Fishman held the Hoosiers to six hits while Michigan was collecting seven off Bill Smith, but three of the Indiana hits came in the third inning, and, combined with Don Brewer's error, resulted in three runs.

Michigan scored in the second when Dan Smick took two bases on a dropped fly and came home on Elmer Gedeon's single. Score:

Indiana .... 003 100 000—4 6 1
Michigan .... 010 000 000—1 7 2

HAL SCHUMACHER HURT, BUT GIANTS BEAT PIRATES, 6-5

Pitcher Is Hit by Suhr's Drive in Sixth.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 7.—(AP)—The New York Giants made it two straight over their favorite cousins, the Pirates, today with a 6 to 5 victory, but the victory cost them the services of their top right-hander, Hal Schumacher.

A line smash off Gus Suhr's bat in the sixth inning struck Schumacher on the chest. He fielded the ball for the putout, but then collapsed and had to be helped to the dressing room. Dr. J. Huber sent him to the hospital after diagnosing the injury as severe chest contusions and possible broken ribs.

Up to that point, Schumacher held the upper hand, sporting a 4 to 2 lead on the strength of a three run Giant rally in the fifth. His relief, Dick Coffman and Harry Gumbert, collapsed, however, and the Pirates went in front in the seventh on a three run splurge, but the league champions pushed over a pair in the eighth to win.

DODGERS WHIP REDS.

Cincinnati, O., May 7.—(AP)—Max Butcher made his 1938 debut as a starting pitcher today and hurled a steady game to give the Brooklyn Dodgers a 7 to 4 victory over the Reds. The triumph ended a three game Brooklyn losing streak.

The Dodgers knocked Paul Derringer off the mound in the fifth during a rally in which they bunched four hits for three runs to assure victory. Butcher yielded ten hits, one of them a homer by Harry Craft.

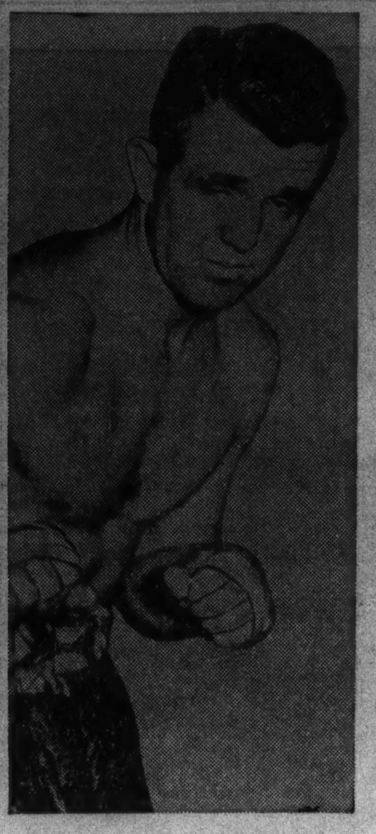
WORK AND PLAY PUT GOLDEN GLOVERS IN SHAPE FOR INVADERS

The lunch hour is an enjoyable one in a boxer's working day and Chicago's Golden Gloves squad, which is in training in the Illinois Athletic club for the seventh international bouts with the champions of Europe in the Stadium the night of May 18, is not slow to answer the call. Clockwise, this training table group includes: Kenny Lottman, Peoria, Ill.; Jesse Salzar, Omaha, Neb.; Frank Kainrath, C. Y. O., Chicago; Walter Cavalieri, C. Y. O., Chicago; Lloyd Montgomery, Beauxite, Ark.; Joe Benna, Valparaiso, Ind.; Eddie Dempsey, Moline, Ill.; Bill Eddy, Flint, Mich., and Jimmy O'Malley, Chicago C. Y. O.



One of the most heated training battles in progress on the Chicago squad is that between Lloyd Montgomery (above) and Dan Merritt of Cleveland for the right to meet the German heavyweight champion, Herbert Runge.

Dan Merritt is Chicago's Golden Gloves champion. He lost a disputed decision in the intercity bouts with New York, but is training rigorously to beat out Montgomery for the assignment in the international bouts.

RUNGE RECALLS 1937 KNOCKOUT; WANTS REVENGE

Meets Puncher in Merritt or Montgomery.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

"Was ist los?"

Herbert Runge, Europameister, opened his eyes, his numbed senses still unable to comprehend why he was partially reclining on the white stool in the corner of the Stadium ring. The buzzing in his head sounded as loud as the roaring thunder from 20,000 throats which rose to a crescendo against the high flung Stadium dome and bounded back to meet another salvo of applause even as the foam of the surf drains from the sand to be engulfed by succeeding waves.

"What's wrong?" Runge asked, bewildered.

You Were Knocked Out.

"Du bist ausgeschlagen," Hans Hieronimus shouted in Runge's ear as the German champion struggled vainly to regain his feet.

"You were knocked out," Herr Hieronimus bellowed again. He might have added that Runge and his European teammates were well on the way to an international Golden Gloves title when Runge stepped into Lem Franklin's hard, fast, overhand right. Then, the timer might as well have thrown away his stop watch for Runge had been ausgeschlagen and Chicago had gained a tie in the most thrilling amateur bouts since the French champions came to our city seven years ago.

Never Before Off Feet.

Never before had Runge been knocked off his feet. Never had an official swung his arm in measured cadence over him. Champion of Europe in the 1934 tournament which was held in Budapest, Olympic champion in 1936, and possessor of four German titles, Runge was regarded as the greatest heavyweight in amateur history. And Runge believed it.

Runge had been warned. He was told during his training on the Berengaria as the European squad steamed steadily toward United States that Lem Franklin had a right hand punch which carried as much authority as that which Joe Louis swings.

"If you don't watch out," we cautioned Runge, "you're going to listen to the birdies sing. Verstehen? Right on the chin. Boom. Eins, zwei, drei, out."

What a Joke!

Runge laughed. Knocked out? What a joke. But there was the champion of all Europe stretched out unconscious in the Stadium ring.

Runge took his defeat like a sportsman. He went to the foot of the class and then, in the year that has elapsed, he proved to Europe that he still was its master.

Either Dan Merritt of Cleveland, or Lloyd Montgomery of Bauxite, Ark., will face Runge in the Stadium May 18. The choice depends on condition and the day by day comparison of these young giants as they toil in the I. A. C. gymnasium. It may be Merritt, winner of the Golden Gloves championship and best of all heavyweights in the national A. A. U. tournament in Boston. It may be Montgomery, who won the intercity bout against New York that gave Chicago its first victory in a foreign ring in the history of the series with Manhattan.

And Each Has a Wallop.

Certainly this country has no better candidates for the task of defending the international heavyweight supremacy. Each weighs 185 pounds. Each has the wallop of a Missouri mule concealed in his glove. Each has proved his courage in scores of battles.

Runge may be the superior boxer. Europe seems agreed that the German is a master technician. And Runge has learned that the penalty of carelessness leads to the canvas. The task of Merritt or of Montgomery unquestionably will be more difficult than that which was Franklin's one year ago as Runge advanced confidently to clinch the team championship.

Chicago Supreme Since 1932.

There have been many great Golden Gloves heavyweight contests. Fernand Laudrin of France, 1931, and Hans Kohlhaas the following year, defeated Chicago's champions although their teams were defeated. Not since 1932, however, has a Chicago heavyweight been whipped in international competition.

Johnny Pacek [he hit Pat Mulligan so hard the Irishman broke his ankle falling], Otis Thomas, Lorenzo Pack, and Lem Franklin. All victorious. Can Runge stop the parade of power? Or will he once more stumble on rubber legs to his corner to query plaintively, "Was ist los?"

EUROPE'S BOXERS GAIN CONFIDENCE AS THEY NEAR U.S.

both are hopeful of earning flyweight assignment in Chicago.

This undoubtedly is the most confident team of European fighting men that ever has invaded America. Even Herbert Runge, heavyweight champion who was knocked out in the first round by Lem Franklin in Chicago last spring, is talking of scoring a knockout victory this year.

"I never was knocked out before and do not intend to be again," Runge said today before entering the ring for a three round drill with Richard Vogt, European light heavyweight title holder. "I hope Chicago uses Dan Merritt as my opponent because I want to whip a colored fighter to make up for that flukey victory Franklin scored last year. Furthermore, Merritt comes from Cleveland, which is Franklin's home town, and I don't like people from Cleveland."

Now Its Unanimous.

Even soft spoken John Saunders from Ireland, Europe's featherweight champion, has caught the spirit of the squad. He moved around the deck today muttering something about evening up for the trimming the Chicago Golden Gloves team gave Ireland at Soldiers' field in 1933.

Many famous boxers have fought under Irish names when in realty they were members of some less pugnacious stock. But Saunders, a 20 year old Dublin factory worker, is a genuine Irishman ready to show the world what a son of Erin can do with his fists in a fair fight.

Saunders whipped Jakob Schoenberger, German champion, to win his place on the European squad. He has been boxing five years, during which span he has won eighty-three of his ninety bouts. His father is a soldier in the Free State army and he has four brothers and one sister. His international record includes victories over champions of England, Wales, Hungary, and Germany.

Saunders Is Puzzled.

Saunders is the only English speaking member of the team. Like Antoni Kolczynski of Poland, Miholy Bondi of Hungary, and Lehtinin of Finland, he is unable to speak to any other boy on the squad.

"I don't understand it at all," Saunders remarked today while trying to converse with Nardecchia of Italy by signs and diagrams," I never knew there were so many in the world who do not speak English."

There will be no letup in the training program tomorrow. A workout is scheduled for the gymnasium in the morning. Boxers will be excused from sparring on Monday and Tuesday while in New York, but they will be taken on long hikes both days. Beginning Wednesday shortly after their arrival in Chicago there will come a week of intensive preparations calculated to fit the team for Europe's first victory over Chicago Golden Glovers.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Golfing history strode the fairways of the Skokie Country club once more yesterday when Gene Sarazen, who won the national open championship at Skokie in 1922, returned to the scene of his first big time success.

It will be sixteen years come July 15 that the 20 year old Sarazen, then a cocky ex-caddy new to the professional union, strutted off the seventy-second green with a final round of 68. That 68, topped off with a birdie four on the last hole, gave him a one stroke edge on Bobby Jones and John Black and made him the youngest champion in open history.

Two weeks ago the writer suggested that Sarazen return to Skokie for a sentimental encore and the sturdy Connecticut squire enthusiastically agreed. There was no 68 in yesterday morning's braw weather, but there was a 71, one under par, and Gene, forgetting the imminence of such chores as the American and British opens of 1938, was once more the happy Sarazen of 1922 whose pictures hang on the walls of Skokie's grill.

That Eighteenth Again!

Most enjoyable hole of Sarazen's return to yesteryear was the 470 yard eighteenth. Here it was sixteen years ago that he scored the birdie four which eventually won him the championship. Gene said yesterday that he had wanted to play the hole safe for a par five, which would give him 289 and a one shot edge over Bill Mehlhorn, who had already finished and appeared to be the only man he had to beat.

Tony Dominick, his caddy, counseled him that this was no time for caution, and he used his driver twice to reach the green for the two putts and the birdie which was to help him beat Jones and Black, playing back of him.

Yesterday the stocky Italian stood on the eighteenth tee about noon. Throughout the preceding seventeen holes it had been obvious to the little gallery which followed him that a repetition of that 1922 finishing bird was uppermost in his mind. He played a deliberate hook about 240 yards down the fairway to a spot which he identified as the same wherein his championship drive had landed. Unfortunately the lie was such that it left him no chance to use a driver, so he drew a brassie and whipped the ball up just short of the green. His chip was timid, leaving him a difficult uphill eighteen foot putt. It looked like a par 5 and 72, but Gene must have wanted that final four, for he rolled it up and into the cup.

Course Is Changed.

Mathematically, Skokie's course had been changed somewhat since 1922, but on the whole Sarazen found it pretty much the same lot. The par in 1922 was 34—36—70. It is now 35—37—72. Since Sarazen's championship the third and eleventh holes have been lengthened to par 5 holes, and a lake and new traps were added to the ninth in 1929. Gene pointed out that a number of greens, flat and therefore harder to hold in 1922, have since been built up.

Par—In	444	344	445—36—70
Sarazen—Out	443	364	243—33
Sarazen—In	543	344	444—35—68
1938.
Par—Out	435	454	343—35
Par—In	454	344	445—37—72
Sarazen—Out	455	454	342—36
Sarazen—In	444	343	454—35—71

Sarazen will compete in the national open tournament in Denver next month, and will then head for the British open championship. He plans to return to defend his Chicago open title in the second annual meet at Olympia Fields on July 22, 23, and 24. After yesterday's round Gene signed his entry blank for the Chicago open, presented by M. G. Fessenden, executive chairman of the tournament committee.

YACHT YARDS BUSY AS LAKE MICHIGAN SEASON NEARS

Chicago yachtsmen, with the help of professional boat builders, are polishing up and refitting their craft for the opening of the cruising and racing season on Memorial day. This scene presents five of the motor powered cruisers which are being overhauled at the yards of the Great Lakes Boat Building corporation, 3250 Washtenaw avenue. The fourth boat from the left is the Zenith, owned by State Representative Charles H. Weber.

Yachtsmen Polish Up Craft; Harbor Facilities Improved

Chicago yachtsmen are hastening preparations for a season that may see boating reach a new height of popularity.

The rap of hammers and the flash of paint brushes are livening up boat yards and harbors as owners, aided by their amateur and professional crews, get the fleet of sail and power craft ready for an early start.

The Lake Michigan Yachting association reports an increase in the memberships of all its affiliated clubs and there is a parallel increase in the applications for mooring space in the eight harbors of the Chicago district.

The owners of Chicago's 2,500 yachts will find these harbors deeper this season. They also will note improvement in the service. Capt. Henry Michiels, Chicago yacht harbormaster, announced yesterday that the park district had received bids for dredging the entrance to Jackson park harbor to a depth of 12 feet and for construction of 35 new slips to accommodate 35 additional yachts at the north end of Belmont harbor. The latter anchorage will shelter 265 boats—the largest in its history. Improvements are scheduled for Diversey harbor also.

Space Shortage a Handicap.

Despite improvements, the shortage of harbor space may continue to handicap yachtsmen this season. Last year there were 208 more applications than there were spaces available. Already, one harbor is reported to be oversubscribed by 40 boats for the 1938 season.

Frank Heyes, secretary of the Central Marine Chamber of Commerce, has pointed out that the Burnham park lagoon could accommodate 300 yachts if it were thrown open for this purpose. He said that no expenditure would be required to adapt it as an anchorage.

Much of the work done on Chicago's yacht fleet each spring is carried on by skippers and their crews, but carpenters, cabinetmakers, metal workers, painters, sailmakers, mechanics, riggers, and shipbuilders figure prominently in the operations.

Carries $1,000 in Food Supplies.

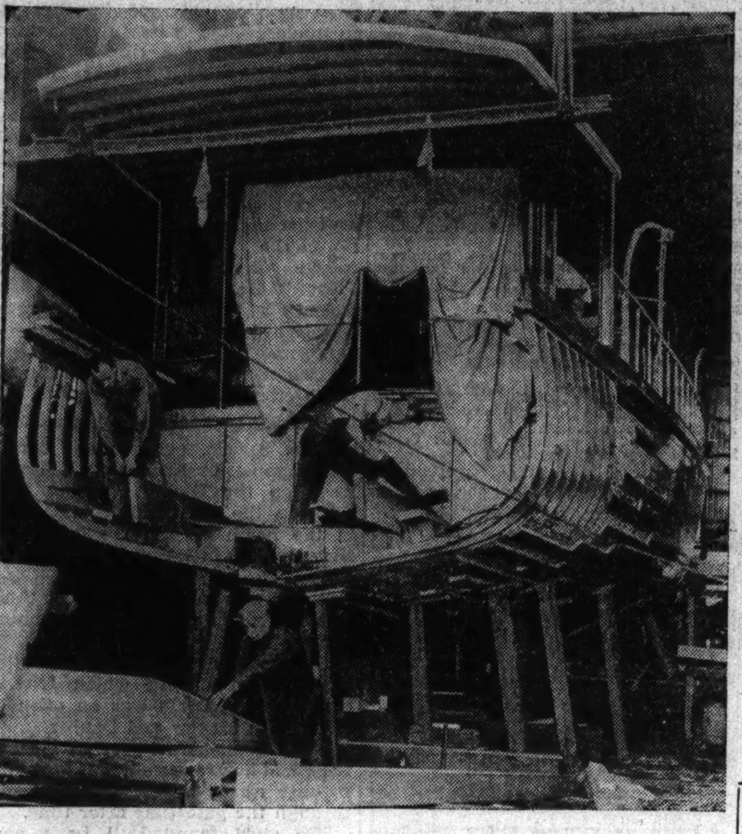
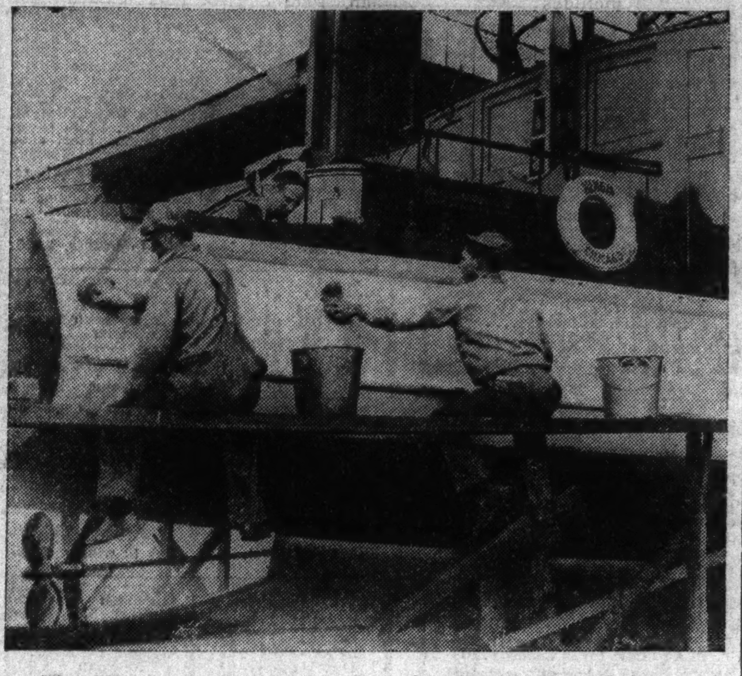
The boats of the Chicago fleet range from 10 foot sailing dinghies to 191 foot Diesel powered ocean going yachts. Officials of the various yacht clubs are now working out schedules for regattas in the various classes such as Stars, Snipes, Eagles, R's, and cruisers.

Many precautions have been taken to increase the safety of boating on the lake. In addition to the storm warning signals run up by the coast guard, a system of radio communications has been developed by which amateur operators send out weather reports from 30 stations in 20 Lake Michigan ports. This organization, known as the Lake Michigan Amateur Radio reserve, plans to keep a day and night watch for emergency calls all summer.



Workmen are adding seven feet to the length of Philip K. Wrigley's Wasp, a power cruiser, at the Great Lakes yards.



The Mingin gets a thorough cleaning at the Great Lakes yards. Membership in the Lake Michigan Yachting association has increased this year and yachtsmen will find improved mooring conditions in Chicago harbors. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

RETRIEVERS GET SPRING TRIALS NEXT WEEK-END

Hold Midwest Club Event Near Barrington.

BY BOB BECKER.

A broad marsh on the edge of Grassy lake, which is about three miles north of Barrington, becomes the center of interest for retriever owners and sportsmen in the central states next week-end, May 14 and 15, as in this lowland surrounded by low hills the Midwest Field Trial club of Chicago will hold its first licensed spring trial for Chesapeake Bay retrievers, Labradors, Irish water spaniels, golden retrievers, and other retriever breeds eligible to run in this event.

Officers of the club state that the entry list for this exciting outdoor event includes some of the best trained retrievers not only from Chicagoland, but from Omaha, Neb.; St. Louis, Mo.; Iowa, Wisconsin, and New York. The American Kennel club has issued a license for the trial so a victory in the open all age stake means championship points to the top notch dog which carries off the first place ribbon and the trophy.

Train Dogs in Spring.

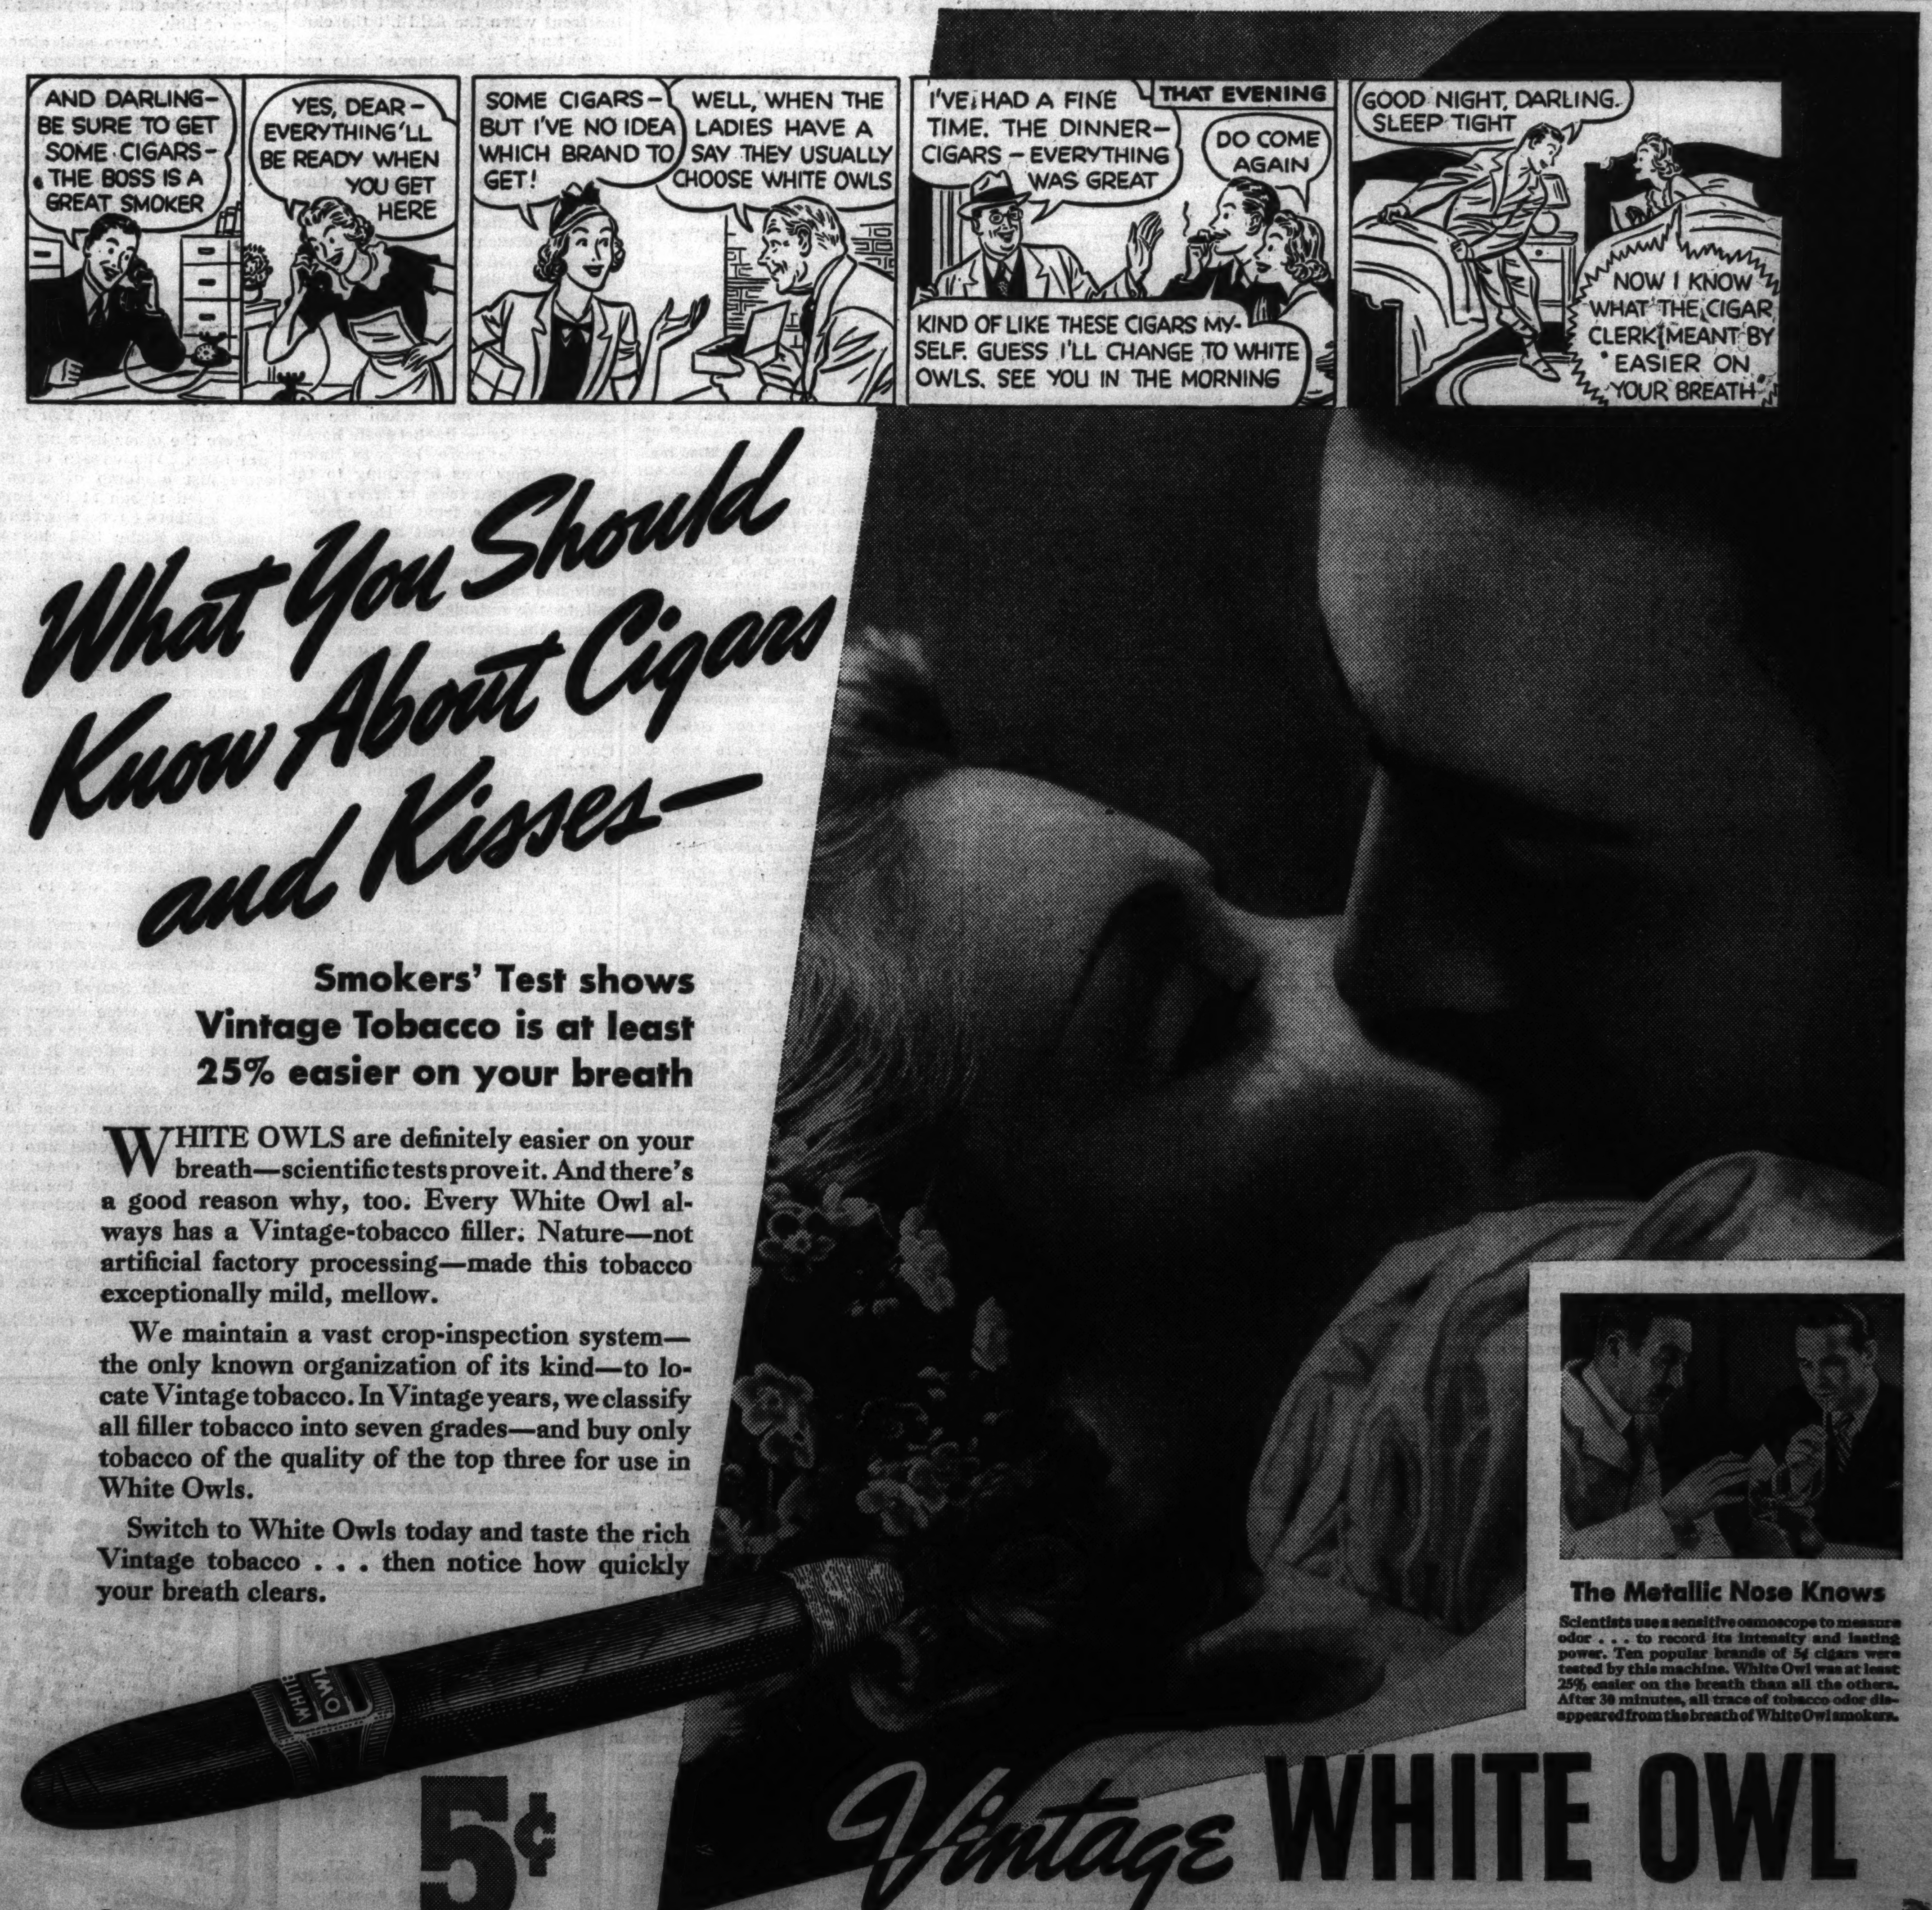
This first spring retriever trial for Chicagoland is a reminder that there is no open and closed season in the field trial game. It also is a reminder to the duck hunter and upland game shooter of two important points about their sports:

First, the time to pick out a hunting dog and start getting him ready for field work is in the spring. The sportsman who waits until the week before the fall shooting season to obtain a hunting dog is not giving either himself or the new dog much of a chance to do a real job in the hunting field. It takes time to get acquainted with a new hunting partner.

Secondly, the use of a good retriever is a conservation measure. The sportsman who uses a trained dog which knows how to find and pick up cripples is not a waster of game birds. Hunters without dogs may lose more than half the birds they shoot. This is especially true of marsh shooting for ducks and hunting pheasants in heavy cover.

Public Invited to Trial.

The trial starting next Saturday morning will be held in the marsh on the grounds of the Biltmore Country club north of Barrington. The public is invited to attend the trial and watch the work of the retrievers both on land and in the water.



PRINCE ARGO IS HOME FIRST IN ELGIN HANDICAP

Wins by Half Length from Lucky Ducky.

Prince Argo, the only 3 year old in the field, showed his older rivals five and a half furlongs of terrific speed at Aurora yesterday afternoon in winning the featured Elgin handicap. Prince Argo, racing for Butsy Hernandez, ran the distance in 1:04 3-5 to win by half a length from Lucky Ducky, with Faust third.

A crowd of 12,000 wagered in excess of $150,000. It made the Creech entry of Miss Dolphin and Grey Streak the favorite for the Elgin and overlooked Prince Argo. The fans only got a run for their money on Miss Dolphin until the turn was reached, where Jocky Jack Richard lost the stirrups as his mount ran wide. From then on Miss Dolphin cantered and finished last.

Takes Lead at Start.

Prince Argo returned $29.80 for his victory. Apprentice Willie McCadden had the son of Happy Argo-Georgia Rose off on top, closely followed by Transmutable. Miss Dolphin came up fast on the outside into third place to challenge before Richard's feet became misplaced.

Lucky Ducky and Faust, with Transmutable fading fast, gained rapidly but made their moves too late to catch the leader. The time was only two-fifths of a second off Transmutable's track mark. Prince Argo paid $29.80, $14, and $8. Tickets on Lucky Ducky were worth $10.80 and $6, with Faust $4.40 to show.

First Double Winner.

Sister Polly, a consistent filly which races for A. McKnight, became the first double winner of the meeting in the first race yesterday. The crowd made Sister Polly a favorite to repeat her opening day victory. She did not disappoint, although she had to battle all the way down the stretch to defeat Sun Victor.

Jocky Bobby Conley again rode the daughter of Bookbinder and had her away fast, as usual, with Mount Kala keeping her company. Low Cuts was third. Sister Polly, saving ground on the rail, held a slight lead as they turned for home, with Sun Victor coming up with a rush. Though wearing down Sister Polly, Sun Victor could not catch her and was still a head back at the wire. Low Cuts took third money. The race was run in 1:13. Sister Polly paid $6.60.

Ostend last year won for his owner the first leg on the $1,000 gold cup trophy, and was the favorite this year because of impressive showings at Camden, Middleburg, and in the Maryland cup races.

RED TREE, stoutly restrained early, and kept on the outside throughout, closed with a rush. JEWELRY, well up from the start and saving ground throughout, suffered when the winner bore in, held on gamely.

Went to post at 4:18. At post 6 minutes. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same.

WEE EMMA, fractious at the gate but away fast, was taken back off the pace and rated well, came around SARACEN in the stretch and wore him down in the last seventy yards. Latter was rushed into a commanding lead soon after the break, saved much ground throughout, but was unable to withstand the winner. RITZ BROTHERS broke slowly, worked his way up on the inside and continued gamely to finish on even terms with GEOLOGIST for the show. GEOLOGIST was far out of it for three-quarters and finished with a rush to dead heat RITZ BROTHERS.

LAWRIN TAKES KENTUCKY DERBY BEFORE 65,000

a few hours later clouds that served warning of light showers had hidden away the sun.

These clouds and the sun played hide and seek throughout the day. An hour before Derby time a sprinkle of rain fell. But at post time the clouds had been routed. The sun was shining when four bands that had blared forth martial music all afternoon joined and played "My Old Kentucky Home." The track was lightning fast.

Crowd Difficult to Estimate.

There were various estimates of the attendance. Some ran as low as 50,000, others as high as 100,000. For the first time the infield was opened to a public that got in through an underground passageway which passed beneath the track. It was the infield crowd that was difficult to estimate. On the grand stand side the attendance was as large as usual with a hysterical crowd milling about from noon until after the Derby had been run.

A cosmopolitan throng, as usual, watched the running of the race. A son of the President was there. Patronage Dispenser James Farley cheered Lawrin, although he had picked Fighting Fox to win the race. Nearly a dozen governors were present, some of them out in the open making bows to their constituents while others remained incognito.

Delay at Post 4½ Minutes.

Stage, sports, political and industrial luminaries from far off Hollywood on the Pacific coast to New York on the east, and from Canada in the north to Texas, Florida and New Orleans in the south were present.

It was a reunion for most of them who make this pilgrimage an annual affair.

There was a delay of 4½ minutes at the post during which Lawrin was lucky. Lawrin was an offender along with Menow and Dauber.

Jocky Sonny Workman on Menow, the speed horse, was anxious to get his mount away, but Menow broke through the gate time after time.

The start found Bull Lea's nose showing in front with the long shot Elooto second, Mountain Ridge third and Can't Wait fourth. Menow was away in seventh place, but raced to the front when the field hit the clubhouse turn.

Fighting Fox had moved into second place. He was under a strong pull, because Jocky Jimmy Stout evidently did not care to make the pace with him.

Bull Lea Gets Into Jam.

In the drive to the clubhouse turn Bull Lea got into his first jam. In an effort to find racing room Jocky Irving Anderson was caught between horses. He had to take his mount up. Mountain Ridge rounded the first turn in third place, Can't Wait was fourth, Lawrin fifth, and The Chief sixth, a half length in front of Bull Lea.

Positions changed little going down the back stretch. Bull Lea ran into another tight spot when he attempted to drive up between horses again. Once more he was taken back. Menow was beginning to falter. Jocky Stout tried to drive Fighting Fox to the front. He chose a path next to the rail and was cut off.

Then it was that Arcaro, who gradually had taken Lawrin out from the rail to the outside, sent his charge toward the leaders.

Lawrin Responds Quickly.

In long strides—and they were quickly negotiated strides—the Missourian answered Arcaro's call. He raced past Menow, Fighting Fox, Can't Wait, and Mountain Ridge.

Moving rapidly up behind him was Dauber. With all the others slowing up, Lawrin and Dauber went on to wage a stretch duel all by themselves. Fighting Fox and Bull Lea, after the troubles they had suffered either had nothing left or didn't care about taking up the chase again. The Chief, last hope of Earl Sande, after becoming frightened by the music the musicians were tooting in the infield while he was being taken to the paddock, ran an even race, but never was within striking distance of the leaders.

Earns $47,050 for Owner.

Lawrin is a son of Insco-Margaret Lawrence and a grandson of Sir Gallahad III. His sire, Insco, was an excellent race horse, but suffered leg injuries early in his career. Woolf, who owns a string of ready to wear stores in Missouri and Kansas, paid $500 for the crippled Insco. He sent him to the Ben Jones farm near Purcell, Mo., where the son of Sir Gallahad III. was established as the sultan of the thoroughbred nursery.

Lawrin's victory netted Owner Woolf $47,050 along with a gold trophy valued at $5,000. Dauber added $6,00 to the du Pont bank roll by finishing second. Can't Wait earned $3,000 and Menow $1,000.

ARCARO ALLOWS 'TWAS ONE 'HELL' OF A HORSE RACE

Louisville, Ky., May 7.—(AP)—It was a Kentucky boy they helped down from the Kentucky Derby winner today—a shyly grinning, happy little fellow named Eddie Arcaro.

There was a wad of mud in the corner of his eye, but nothing but praise on his lips, praise for the big bay horse that did everything he had asked of him.

As news reel cameras hummed and newspaper photographers strained at the cordon of National Guardsmen surrounding Lawrin, the 22 year old son of Pasquale and Josephine Arcaro of Newport, Ky., shook hands time and again with his two bosses, Owner Herbert Woolf and Trainer Ben Jones.

Kentucky Gov. A. B. [Happy] Chandler presented to Woolf the cup symbolic of turf's most prized victory, and then Eddie made his way—with the help of the Kentucky National Guard—back through the paddock to the jockies' room.

Thrilled? Well, You Bet!

There the other boys nearly pulled him apart. His wreath of roses became just a clump of green stalks with a red ribbon at the bottom as they grabbed for souvenirs. To these boys Eddie told the story of his victory in jocky room language:

"That Derby," he said, "was one hell of a horse race!"

Did he get a thrill out of the race? An inevitable question and it brought the inevitable answer:

"Man, I guess I'm supposed to say it gave me the biggest bang I ever had. Well, I won't disappoint anybody, because it sure was.

"I've been riding eight years, and I've never felt this way. It was a thrill, all right, when I rode my first winner at Agua Caliente, but" . . . Words failed Eddie.

One of the first to congratulate Eddie was Jackie Westrope, the boy Earl Sande sent out to ride The Chief.

"It was a clean race," Eddie said, "and how that Lawrin did run! We must have been seventh at the half.

Trifle Scared Once.

"Then we were lucky enough—lucky's the word—to get through, and I don't believe it took more than a quarter of a mile to pass those other six horses.

"The nearest we came to having what you would call any trouble was when we were going into the turn. Everybody worked clean, but they were all heading for the rail, and for just a minute they had me scared of my position."

Eddie's parents, over at Newport, promised they'd listen to his race on the radio. So did his wife, Ruth, in New York City.

"I sure wish she could have seen it," Eddie said, "but she couldn't get a plane reservation."

DERBY ATTRACTS TURF NOTABLES; STAY FOR SALE

Winter Book Operators Admit Mistake.

Louisville, Ky., May 7.—[Special.]—Among the former owners of Kentucky Derby winners in the crowd at Churchill Downs today were Mrs. Payne Whitney, who owned Twenty Grand; Mrs. John Hertz, who sent Reigh Count to the post; Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloan, owner of Cavalcade; Col. Edward R. Bradley, whose silks have been carried to victory four times, and Samuel D. Riddle, whose War Admiral captured the prize last year.

Riddle is confident War Admiral will defeat Seabiscuit in their match race in New York on Memorial day. He reported that War Admiral was coming up to the $100,000 match in a splendid way.

Operators of future books were the most panicky spectators in the crowd. Even though Stagehand, the favorite, was withdrawn, all of them claimed they lost money this year. They confessed that their own stinginess in refusing to offer better than 7 to 2 on Stagehand at any stage of the wagering caused the public to dodge the choice.

The hard luck horse of the Derby was The Chief, stable mate of the ill fated Stagehand. Trainer Earl Sande said The Chief emerged with two cuts on his right hind leg, but he didn't know just where the mishap occurred. The Chief was upset even before the race started, Sande added. He referred to the fact that the colt struggled and nearly broke loose as the Indiana university band started its pre-race performance. The boy leading The Chief was kicked and bruised.

There was a reunion of governors in the crowd. Among those present were A. B. Chandler of Kentucky, Robert E. Quinn, Rhode Island; M. Clifford Townsend of Indiana, and Olin D. Johnson of South Carolina. Among the mayors present were Joseph D. Scholtz of Louisvile, B. F. Dickman of St. Louis, and Reed Wilson of Lexington.

C. S. Howard, owner of Seabiscuit, was another Derby spectator. No one dared try to tell him War Admiral will trim the Biscuit.

Many leading thoroughbred breeders of the nation, here for the Derby, will remain for the sale at auction on Monday of Hartland farm near Versailles. It is one of the most famous thoroughbred nurseries in the country and at one time was owned by former Senator Johnson N. Camden. It is being sold by the Silas Mason company, which purchased it from Camden a few years ago.

Those old time enemies of the prize ring, Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney, were in the crowd. They had but a single thought in mind. It was to bet on Fighting Fox.

DERBY FASHION PARADE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Louisville, Ky., May 7.—Churchill Downs with its many Kentucky Derby throngs presented a fashion parade today worthy of Longchamps in Paris.

Among the most attractively costumed women from Chicago and suburbs was Mrs. Farwell Winston of Lake Forest, who wore a gray tailored suit with sables. Mrs. Winston and her husband were the guests of Dr. and Mrs. Phillip Noland.

Other costumes of Chicagoans were:

Mrs. Warren Wright, black and white outfit with white accessories; Mrs. John Hertz, black with silver fox furs; Mrs. Reuben Lewis, brown and white print, brown sailor; Mrs. John Hogan, gray tailored suit, sable furs; Mrs. Francis C. Waller, navy blue, Hattie Carnegie ensemble; Mrs. George Miller, Bermuda tweed sport suit, matching hat.

Mrs. C. P. Kendall, imported print of chartreuse and black; Mrs. O. W. Kunche, black and white striped suit with white hat; Mrs. Stuyvesant Peabody, chartreuse and black print ensemble; Mrs. W. K. Edmunds, brown and white print dress, large brown hat; Miss Frances Hamill, brown print suit, large natural hat with wheat.

'PUMP PRIMING' ALWAYS FUTILE, RECORDS SHOW

Urged by Coxey, '94, Now by Roosevelt.

BY REUBEN D. CAHN.

On May 2, 1894, a man was arrested in Washington for stepping on the grass in front of the capitol. He was fined and sentenced to jail for twenty days. This man had come to Washington to impress upon congress the necessity of giving immediate relief to the four millions of people then unemployed, and to petition for legislation which he said would transform a depression into universal prosperity.

To do this, it was his idea that the government should spend $500,000,000 in the construction of good country roads. In addition, the government should advance cash to the states, counties, and cities on their noninterest bearing bonds for the construction of streets, roads, schools, sewers, courthouses, and other public improvements.

The man was Jacob Coxey, leader of the famous Coxey's army. When he got out of jail, he found that his followers had deserted him, and disheartened, he returned to his home in Ohio, the laughing stock of the country.

Advocated by Roosevelt.

Forty-four years later we have conditions resembling those which prevailed when Coxey made his famous march. Again there is a depression. Eleven million are said to be out of work. Eighteen million are receiving public aid in one form or another. Again, there is the proposal that the government advance funds to the states for public improvements. Again the loans to the states and cities for local public works are to be on their noninterest bearing bonds. But this time the proponent of the measure is not pushed around by the police. He is not thrown into jail for stepping on the grass. He is not the laughing stock of the country. The advocate in 1938 of Coxey's 1894 plan to prime the pump is the President of the United States.

It would be possible to have confidence in the effectiveness of more public spending as a means of escape from depression, if there were any evidence at hand of any country which had got out of a depression that way. There have, of course, been countries which tried. Most conspicuously we did. Twice, in fact.

Predicted Early Prosperity.

In February, 1931, congress authorized the payment of a bonus to world war veterans as a pump primer. Here is one of the arguments which was offered in congress to obtain the passage of the soldiers' bonus:

"Within ten days' time after the payment of the money to the world war veterans for their service certificates, prosperity will commence to return the same as grass starts growing after a warm rain in the month of April.

"Upon receipt of the money by the veterans, it will be used in paying the debts owed grocers, merchants, landlords, druggists, undertakers, and banks. Veterans out of debt will deposit their money in banks.

"In turn, banks will have money to loan and replace bank credit which is now in a state of collapse. Under this plan 'unparalleled prosperity' will be a fact in ninety days' time."

It should be noted that this was not President Hoover's idea, for he protested that it would have no such result. But the pump priming argument enabled the advocates of the bonus to override the President's veto.

Fails to Prime Pump.

The bonus money in 1931 failed utterly to prime the pump. With a total of a billion and a quarter dollars of fresh spending money coming into the hands of the veterans, a new decline in business got under way. On February 28, 1931, the day after the President's veto was overriden, stock prices began to fall. The averages have never since been as high as they were seven years ago when the pump priming measure became a law.

The index of industrial employment in Chicago stood at 90 the month when the first priming of the pump was authorized. The number at work immediately began to decline, and did not cease dropping until the index was down to 56.

The soldiers' bonus was, of course, not the cause of the business decline following the spring of 1931. Many veterans were out of work then, and the payments as far as the unemployed were concerned took the place of relief. But as a pump priming measure it failed. It did not start business upward.

This experience with pump priming showed the futility of it. Trade and industry fell persistently after it was put into effect, but that did not deter the present national administration from trying it a second time. Business declined sharply late in 1933

Oil Companies Demand Cut in Freight Rates

Oil companies yesterday threatened to abandon rail shipments of outgoing refined products in a 100 mile radius of Chicago, and to haul the goods by truck unless rail rates are cut. It is expected they will meet stiff resistance in their effort to force the reduction.

The large oil refineries, reportedly led by the Standard Oil company of Indiana, have notified the railroads of their plan to resort to truck shipments, and the western trafic executive committee of the railroads will meet Wednesday to consider the threat. The rate attacked by the refineries is the 10 per cent increase imposed on oil products in March as a result of the interstate commerce commission's ruling on the carriers' plea for a blanket 15 per cent increase in all freight rates. The commission granted increases on some products, but not on others, and the average increase was about 5 per cent.

Roads Changing Attitude.

Although no railroad officials would say what action individual lines would take, it was said that the roads, with their backs to the wall financially in most cases, are beginning to change their attitude and to take the view that they do not want trafic which does not yield a profit. Heretofore, it was said, railroads have made every possible concession in the hope that large volume would show a profit somehow.

Their new stand is that every type of freight service must "pay its own way." Whether this is the position which rail officials have taken in current discussions with the oil trafic executives is not known, but observers said that the carriers' changing view on the freight problem in general may affect the oil rate situation. Also, it was indicated the carriers are anxious to avoid a rate cut in any one field for fear it would lead to demands for reductions in other freight charges.

Say Rail Service Is Higher.

The oil companies assert the rate for a railroad car is sometimes as much as $8 in excess of charges for similar truck capacity to a given point. Even if the 10 per cent increase recently applied is removed, the refineries say, railroad rates still will be $1 to $2 a car higher.

The amount of freight paid by oil companies shipped to points in the Chicago area is said to be several million dollars annually. Refineries have used rail facilities extensively in shipments to points such as Evanston when heavy volume is involved.

C. & O.'S PROXY FIGHT CONFUSES STOCKHOLDERS

Cleveland, O., May 7.—(AP)—Some stockholders have become confused in the battle of proxies between Robert Y. Young and the Guaranty Trust company for control of the Chesapeake & Ohio railway, it was disclosed today in letters made public by H. F. Lohmeyer, secretary and treasurer of Chesapeake.

The proxy committee representing the management of the C. & O., recently telegraphed the Guaranty Trust company complaining that Guaranty's letter soliciting proxies was "seriously misleading in that it printed the words 'committee for the C. & O. Railway company' in bold type" and that letter "had confused many stockholders by creating the impression that you are in fact a committee for the C. & O. Railway company which of course is not the fact."

Company officials announced there had been instances in which proxies in favor of Guaranty Trust company had been mailed to the company's office by stockholders who, they said, were under the impression they were voting in support of the management.

LAKE CORN SHIPMENTS SET ALL-TIME RECORD AT 8,706,000 BUSHELS

An all-time record clearance of corn for the first month of lake navigation was set by freight boats which have moved 8,706,000 bushels of the grain to St. Lawrence ports and Europe since April 10, date of the first shipment, Lyman C. West, statistician of the Chicago Board of Trade, said yesterday.

Approximately 1,074,000 bushels of wheat also have been moved, West said. Heavy bookings for clearance from Chicago at an early date indicate a continued active grain shipping season.

West stated that at the end of the first week of May last year only about one million bushels of wheat had been cleared from Chicago. In the last three months of 1937 about seven million bushels of corn were shipped from the city. Lake shipments of all grain last year totaled 33,076,000 bushels, the largest since 1934.

Principal buyers of United States corn this year, according to trade reports, have been the United Kingdom, Ireland, the Netherlands, Germany, and Belgium.

USE OF CHECKS INCREASES, BUT RUNS BELOW 1937

Debits to individual deposit accounts [checks cashed] at 160 banks in the Chicago federal reserve district increased in the week ended Wednesday, the Chicago reserve bank said yesterday. However, they still were considerably less than a year ago.

Forty-one cities reported debits of $1,096,733,000, an increase of 13 per cent from the $970,419,000 reported a week earlier, but a decline of 19.9 per cent from the $1,368,416,000 of the corresponding 1937 week. Chicago debits were $637,937,000 against $558,968,000 in the preceding week and $766,897,000 a year ago.

Bank debits for the whole country in the week ended Wednesday were $8,536,301,000, compared with $7,962,133,000 in the preceding week and $9,855,629,000 in the week ended May 5, 1937.

Bank clearings in Chicago in the week ended yesterday were $272,600,000 compared with $265,400,000 in the preceding week and $327,800,000 a year ago. The daily record of clearings in Chicago follows:

Date.	Clearings.	Balances.
Monday	$ 46,800,000	$ 6,500,000
Tuesday	51,200,000	3,900,000
Wednesday	47,500,000	3,500,000

Total for week	$272,600,000	$26,300,000
Corresponding last year	$327,800,000	$30,900,000

The New York Clearing House association reported member clearings for the week ended yesterday were $3,504,493,480 compared with $3,353,503,598 in the preceding week.

Meat Packing Slump Worse than in 1930

BY LAURENCE BURD.

The current recession has hit the billion dollar meat packing industry more heavily since last September than even the hard hitting depression of 1929-'30 for a comparable period, according to available indices of packers' operations.

Price declines of meat and live stock from September, 1937, to March of this year have been steeper than from September, 1929, to March, 1930, with resulting heavier inventory losses. Hog slaughterings, an important factor in packers' prosperity, have fallen to a lower level than at any time in the 1929-'33 period, with the result that packers have been forced to make layoffs of employés.

April receipts of live stock in Chicago, reported last week, were the lowest in fifty-one years for that month.

A Multiplicity of Evils.

Add to these troubles those that are common to all business at the present time—declining demand because of reduced consumer purchasing power, higher taxes, increased wage costs, and decreased reserves because the federal surtax on undistributed profits has forced paying out nearly all earnings in dividends, and permitted little addition to surpluses.

The dividend actions of big packing companies in recent months indicate the alarm with which they view the business outlook. Of the "Big Four" packers, only one, Swift & Co., has continued in 1938 to pay dividends on both its preferred and common stocks. The Cudahy Packing company last fall stopped payments on the common for the first time in thirteen years, and omitted the November payment on the preferred.

Faster Than Last Time.

Armour & Co., which made regular common and preferred payments last year, found prospects so uncertain that dividends on the common and some of the preferred stocks were omitted for the first quarter of this year. In the old depression of the early '30s, Armour did not suspend preferred payments until January, 1931—nearly a year and a half after the downturn began. Wilson & Co. cut the preferred dividend payable this month to one-half the regular rate.

It was the dive of prices for nearly all kinds of meat [the finished product], beginning in mid-September, which started the packers on the rocky road, and in some cases brought large enough inventory losses to turn previous profits into losses for their fiscal years ended Oct. 30. Drops of from 8 to 35 per cent in beef prices [varying with the grade and weight], 29 to 49 per cent in pork, 27 per cent in veal and 13 per cent in lamb were suffered in the first three months after the middle of September.

These rapid changes in the prices of meats were reflected back in the live stock prices—what the packer must pay for his raw materials—which are determined by prices for meat and by-products such as hides and wool.

Inventory Out of Control.

Now, when meat prices drop, packers inevitably must take a loss on their inventories, which contain stocks bought when prices of live stock were at higher levels. A peculiarity of the packing industry, which makes inventory losses almost impossible to avoid, is that packers have little control over quantities of live stock which they purchase.

Purchases are determined largely

SLUMP CHECKED IN SOME LINES, INDICES REVEAL

Business Hopes for Federal Truce.

The recent downturn in industrial activity was checked in some lines last week and several of the major indices, including car loadings, electric power output, and automobile production, made advances. In the stock market utility issues led the widest and sharpest advance on the New York exchange in the last month.

The strength in utility issues appeared to be based on reports from Washington of a closer approach to an agreement between the government and the private utilities in the TVA controversy. The question centers on the basis for sale of properties affected by the TVA activity, which will affect the whole utility industry.

Hanes Urges Teamwork.

Teamwork and peace between the government and utilities, as well as other business, were called for by John W. Hanes, Securities and Exchange commissioner, in a speech Friday before the Pennsylvania investment bankers' group. It was Hanes who the week before had induced sixteen business and banking leaders to pledge coöperation with the government to promote recovery.

Earlier in the week one of the sixteen signers, Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the board of the Chase National Bank of New York, asserted that business needs a "breathing spell" during which the government would stop tinkering, and both government and business would "consolidate, modify, and assimilate what already has been done."

Broad Upturn Still Doubtful.

Although government and business were talking of "getting together," and the industrial rate was picking up a little, the basis for an immediate broad upturn still was not in sight last week. Steel output was one of the major indices which went down rather than up during the week, and cotton mill activity also declined.

The Associated Press composite index of industrial activity advanced last week to 67.5 per cent of the 1929-'30 average from the four year low of 66.8 the week before. In the corresponding 1937 week, the index stood at 108.3.

The index, with its seasonally adjusted components, based on the latest available data, compared as follows:

	Latest week.	Prev. week.	Year ago.
Composite index	67.5	66.8	108.3
Auto production	41.5	40.9	108.1
Steel activity	41.3	42.9	122.1
Cotton Mfg.	78.3	83.9	131.5
Power output	103.2	102.8	118.9
Residential building	47.4	45.5	69.4
Total car loadings	56.7	56.6	81.8

Finds Upturn Lacks Vigor.

Standard Statistics company in its weekly business review commented:

"While numerous industries have experienced some seasonal improvement this spring, there has certainly been no vigor in the improvement. Moreover, there is increasing evidence that operations in several major industries have already passed their spring peak. For example, steel activity has been sagging for about a month, following the brief and moderate upturn earlier in the year."

The company's estimates of production for May indicated that business activity has not struck bottom and will be lower this month than in April. Industrial production in April, according to the federal reserve board, slipped below that for the first three months, to 78 per cent of the 1923-'25 average.

Stock brokers continued their trading famine in April, with volume of only 17,000,000 shares on the New York exchange, the smallest for any April in the last sixteen years.

ADDRESS A 365, TRIBUNE

A Girl "Makes Conversation"

A group typical of the 17,600 persons who last week visited the Western Electric company's "telephone open house" watch Anne Bergman finishing coils used in telephones. More than 45,000 tickets have been requested by employes and the public for the exhibit, which will continue through this week.

West. Electric Phone Exhibit Draws Crowd

The Western Electric company's "telephone open house," originally planned as a modest one week party for employés and their friends as an experiment in public relations, has turned into a full house every night. The company yesterday announced that in the first week the exhibit drew 17,600 visitors and requests for a total of more than 45,000 tickets from employés and the public.

C. L. Rice, works manager of Western Electric.

Taken by surprise by the unexpected popularity of the show, officials yesterday were considering its extension even beyond the second week, which starts tomorrow.

How Telephones Are Made.

Visitors to the house party, given at the Hawthorne works, have been invited to take a look at the actual operations in making the modern handset telephone and equipment such as copper rod and cable. The company is a manufacturing subsidiary of American Telephone and Telegraph company.

C. L. Rice, vice president and works manager, said yesterday that the main reason for holding "open house" was to meet the requests of employés to show their friends and relatives through typical Hawthorne departments. Another reason was to give employés on one job a chance to see what the man on the next job does and to find out what happens to an assembly piece before and after it reaches them. The punch press operator can find out how the wire cutter works.

Extend Show Another Week.

Planned as a public relations trial balloon, it was to be a telephone education for the "insiders," and for any outsiders that wanted to look in. Estimating that perhaps half of the 15,000 employés would like to bring friends to the exhibit, "Dad" Rice and other officials planned a one week show to handle 15,000. Shortly after the first announcement, requests began to pour in so heavily that a second week was added and adjustments made to handle up to 40,000. But that quota has been passed and telephones are still ringing.

In conducting its party, which runs from 6 to 11 p. m. [Monday through Friday], the company made a temporary shift in the working hours of 1,700 involved, and thus was able to maintain its production schedule without working any one overtime. The exhibit represents the operation of about 10 per cent of the works' facilities.

Employés taking part in the show have proved that they thrive on an audience by actually keeping ahead of the regular production schedule while "on exhibit," according to company officials.

DOLLAR'S VALUE RISES; FRENCH FRANC STEADY

Devaluation Affects Belgian Currency.

The dollar rose in value in relation to most foreign currencies on exchange transactions yesterday. The French franc held at its preceding day's quotation, but Netherlands, Swiss, and Belgian currencies were weak. The British pound declined moderately.

The repatriation of French capital which has been underway since stabilization of the franc, served to increase the pressure on the currencies of other continental countries where French capital has sought haven in recent months.

Belgian Currency Weak.

Cable dispatches reported that the Belgian cabinet is in a weakened position as a result of the French devaluation and it is believed that Belgium may be forced to resort to currency revaluation. The belga dropped 0.06 cent, closing at 16.79 cents, the Netherlands guilder lost 0.04 cent to 55.54, and the Swiss franc fell 0.05 cent, closing at 22.87.

Exchange dealers reported that the French stabilization fund was operating actively in the market, presumably to prevent the franc from rising too rapidly. The unit has held just above the new peg of 2.79 cents since the government effected stabilization, closing yesterday at 2.8025 cents.

Lifts Gold Restrictions.

Dispatches reported that the restrictions on future transactions in gold and lending on gold collateral in the London market have been lifted by the British government. The restrictions had been in effect for the last three years. Selling of gold bars and coin in the London market by French hoarders, indicating a return of confidence, led the government to rescind the restrictions, it was said.

The informal restrictions were imposed in the London market to check excessive speculation in foreign exchange as an aid to countries that were trying to avoid suspension of gold payments. Because the countries that the restrictions were intended to aid have all revalued their currencies the need for the curb has disappeared, it was said.

OHIO OIL VOTES SENIOR DIVIDEND, OMITS COMMON

The Ohio Oil company yesterday declared the usual quarterly dividend on the preferred stock, but decided against any payment on common stock at this time. The company paid two dividends of 50 cents each last year, the last payment on Dec. 15, but has not paid anything thus far in 1938.

Regular Payments.
E. J. Brach, 30c q.	July 1	June 15
Ohio Oil pfd, $1.50 q.	June 15	May 31
Sherwood Swan A, 15c q.	June 15	June 4

In the table, the letter "q" refers to regular quarterly dividends.

AM. TELEPHONE NET OPERATING INCOME FALLS

National Candy Co. Earns More.

American Telephone and Telegraph company yesterday reported a sharp drop in net operating income for March, compared with that of March, 1937.

Higher earnings for the first quarter of this year were shown by National Candy company and American Investment company of Illinois, automobile financing company. Several reported losses.

Net operating income of American Telephone, the parent company only, in March totaled $1,202,703, against $2,166,608 a year ago. The figures cover chiefly the operating activities of the company's long line business, and exclude nonoperating income, such as interest, dividends and other revenues, and nonoperating charges, such as interest and rents paid.

Gross Income Lower.

Gross revenues for March dipped to $9,047,634, from $9,860,088 in the corresponding 1937 month. For the first three months, net operating income declined to $3,020,385 from $5,996,401 in 1937.

National Candy's net income rose in the first quarter to $153,653 from $10,857 in the like 1937 period.

American Investment company's net earnings in the first three months amounted to $160,756, excluding operations of Ideal Financing Association, Inc., which was acquired this year. Ideal's net profit was $91,094 against $85,000 a year ago. In the March, 1937, quarter, the parent company earned $144,427.

United Drug's loss of $319,545 for the quarter compared with net income in 1937 of $580,640. The loss reduced net income for the twelve months ended March 31 to $412,129.

The quarterly report of Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc., showed that operating revenues amounted to $1,161,822, an increase of $88,407 over the March, 1937, quarter. An increase of $308,492, in expenses, however, boosted net loss, as previously reported, to $590,079 against loss of $359,933 in the 1937 quarter.

STOCKS STRONG, BUT LUSTER OF UTILITIES DIMS

List Resists Profit Taking Early in Session.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 7.—Leading stock issues moved in a narrow range today but closed firm after early realizing sales. Minor irregularity was displayed by the list, although net price changes generally were unimportant.

Trading continued at a fairly active pace, the total volume for the session amounting to 556,240 shares, compared to last Saturday's small figure of 147,770. Of the 585 issues that changed hands 295 advanced, 168 declined, and 122 remained at the previous closing levels.

Utilities, which led the market higher yesterday, relinquished leadership today. Despite heavy profit taking, the power and light group maintained a steady undertone.

Expect Federal Overtures.

Gossip that Washington would soon make an overture to the utilities, which permeated brokerage offices yesterday, quieted today for lack of anything concrete to base it upon. Some hope remained, however, that the administration might take some constructive action soon.

Some of the initial selling was traced to the action of the house, which late yesterday brought the wages and hour bill to the floor by petition.

Steel stocks slipped a bit on the news that operations in the Pittsburgh district would decline next week. Bethlehem lost a fraction after opening higher. United States Steel started unchanged, but worked lower and finished 1⅛ points lower.

Aviation Issues Favored.

Aviation issues were again favorites. Douglas spurted more than a point and Curtiss Wright A worked forward to a new high. United Aircraft and Glenn L. Martin each were up a point at one time, but were forced to give up a large part of their gains.

General Motors and Chrysler each recovered from their lows of the day, but finished with fractional losses. Quotations for copper stocks showed insignificant changes.

Some of the so-called blue chip issues made good showings. Allied Chemical moved up 3 points, and American Can rose 1¼. Other stocks to score gains of a point or more included Coca Cola, Commercial Credit, American Tobacco, Loew's, Skelley Oil, and Timken Roller Bearings.

Bank Stocks Quiet but Prices Advance in Week

Chicago bank stocks were quiet yesterday. City National firmed $2 a share in bid price and Continental Illinois National was bid $1.50 higher, but other leading issues were about steady. Price changes from a week ago were mostly upward. Continental Illinois, First National, and Chicago Title and Trust each were $4 above their close last Saturday, and several others were $1 to $3 higher for the week.

Home Furnishings Show Draws 2,452 Buyers

A total of 2,452 buyers visited the mid-season national home furnishings show which ended yesterday at the American Furniture Mart, Lawrence H. Whiting, Mart president, announced yesterday. The total was more than 20 per cent ahead of 1936 and only 9 per cent below the 1937 total.

Studebaker Reports Four Months' Car Sales Lower

The Studebaker corporation yesterday reported its sales in the first four months of this year were 14,127 passenger cars and trucks, compared with 37,922 in the corresponding months of 1937.

PUMP PRIMING ALWAYS FUTILE, RECORDS SHOW

Urged by Coxey in 1894, Now by Roosevelt.

and early in 1934, after the first bloom of the New Deal had withered.

Pump priming with a John Maynard Keynes slant on it became the policy of the nation. Dr. Keynes, an English economist, had figured that if the government would find a way to spend 400 million dollars a month more than was necessary, business in the United States would begin an upward spiral. Previously the administration had been following its campaign promise. Pledged to balance the budget it had made some progress in reducing expenditures. But now that industry was in a slump the administration decided that obviously whatever had been done before was wrong. And so the endeavour to make expenditures smaller was stopped and the effort was directed toward making them bigger. But it wouldn't be enough just to spend as much as was spent before. The deficit must be raised to 400 million dollars a month. Doctor's orders!

President Sold on Scheme.

President Roosevelt in the fall of 1933 and early 1934 was completely sold on pump priming. It would increase business, he said, and that meant more income for the people. Bigger incomes for the people meant bigger income tax receipts. With revival the expenditures could be reduced again. The pump was going to work so well after priming that with expenditures going down and revenues going up, the budget would be in balance in the fiscal year 1935-1936. Thereafter there would be a surplus out of which debt incurred in priming could be paid off.

If pump priming had worked as claimed, business would have been thriving and the amount of expenditures of the government could have been reduced in succeeding years. Unfortunately, it did not work out that way. Fifty leading stocks sold for an average price of $97 as the priming money started flowing in the second pour. Seven months later the average was $76, down 22 per cent.

Result Is Unsatisfactory.

From the standpoint of business volume, the result was no more satisfactory. The index of industrial production stood at 86 in April, 1934, having declined from 100 reached at the peak of 1933. But from April, 1934, industrial output receded, and in the autumn the index fell off to 71, a decline of 17 per cent in a half year's prime. Although a modest recovery then eventuated, vigorous and sustained business revival did not get under way until the middle of 1935 when the voiding of the NRA and several other New Deal measures brought about a widespread return of confidence.

Consider the forecast and the outcome in national finance. In the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1934, 7 billion 105 million dollars was paid out of the treasury. That was a new high peace time record. But in the twelve months which ended June 30, 1936, expenditures totaled 8 billion 324 million dollars. In addition, the second soldiers' bonus was paid. There has been no reduction of expenditures since that time.

Waste Is Habit Forming.

We have it clearly established that pump priming is futile as far as producing better business volume. Moreover the waste of money is habit forming. Whatever is spent in priming is added permanently.

What will be the effect of the newest infusion of pump money? Experience suggests that the result will not be that which is desired. The money is to be paid out to people for doing things which would not otherwise be done. Postoffices will be constructed that otherwise would not be built, and we will have roads and streets that would not have been made.

This may conceivably add to the national income reckoned in terms of dollars. But the national income which counts is the flow of goods. In spending money for new postoffices, etc., we are adding nothing to the stock of goods.

Pump priming money has a temporarily stimulating effect when the waste of money becomes so prodigal that it arouses fears of inflation. Advance spending of money then occurs. There is a boom in store sales, but a slump is sure to follow—when ordinary current requirements do not sustain sales.

Causes Frightened Buying.

Advance buying from fright also manifests itself in purchases of equipment by manufacturing establishments. In the inflation scare of recent years many manufacturers converted their cash into equipment and thus anticipated their requirements for many years. That was one of the sources of the increased business volume in 1935, 1936, and early 1937. When purchases are moved forward and concentrated by consumers, retail dealers, and manufacturers, a temporary boom can be created. But that is followed by a subsequent decline in which business drops down to a lower level than would have been reached if nothing had been done.

This provides a basis for appraising the effect of the pump priming measures if congress authorizes them. Some of the retailers who lost money by loading up before the last price rise suffered losses which they have not forgotten. Manufacturers have already anticipated their requirements for several years as to equipment, and with substantial inventories, are not going to plunge heavily on raw materials. Thus it is quite possible that we won't even have as much of a boom as came in the last inflation scare.

Pump priming will probably turn out to be a waste of public funds. It has no sound economic justification.

U. S. LABOR BOARD FIGHTS COURT BAN IN REPUBLIC CASE

Seeks to Reopen Hearing on Worker Dismissals.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 7.—(AP)—The National Labor Relations board announced today it would ask the United States Circuit Court of Appeals Monday to dismiss a temporary injunction restraining the board from proceeding in its case against the Republic Steel corporation.

Charles Fahy.

Charles Fahy, general counsel for the board, said if the Circuit court refuses the board would go immediately to the Supreme court and ask an order that the court here grant the request.

Restrained Until Friday.

Under the Circuit court order, the board was restrained until next Friday from taking any "steps or proceedings whatever" against the steel corporation, pending a hearing on a motion by the company that the board be ordered to certify to the court for review the records on which the board ordered reinstatement of 5,000 Republic employés who had struck in five Ohio plants.

The board has announced it wishes to withdraw the order against the corporation and reopen the case as a result of a recent Supreme court decision requiring governmental administrative bodies to give "full, fair, and open hearings" to all parties in proceedings before them.

Board's Plan Checkmated.

The restraining order issued to Republic checkmated this plan, however, by requiring the board to leave the record untouched until the hearing Friday.

The board asserted that the court's restraining order was unauthorized by law, that the court had no jurisdiction to issue it, and that under the Wagner act the board could modify, or even set aside an order, at any time before the record is filed in court.

CHICAGO STOCKS MIXED BUT CLOSE HIGHER ON WEEK

Chicago stocks were irregular yesterday, but finished the week higher, compared with the preceding Saturday. Volume for the week was 120,000 shares, against 81,000 in the preceding week and 199,000 in the corresponding 1937 week.

Commonwealth Edison, the most actively traded stock yesterday, closed at 26½, unchanged for the day, but up 4½ points for the week, reflecting the broad rise in utilities. Cities Service moved up ¾ yesterday to close at 10¼. Middle West, however, slipped ⅜ to 6¼, and Central Southwest was off ⅛ at 1⅞. Chicago Corporation closed down ⅛ at 2. Of the forty-eight issues traded, twenty-one advanced, twelve were lower and fifteen unchanged.

A membership was sold yesterday at $1,700.

CHICAGO STEEL OUTPUT TO DROP A POINT TO 32 PCT.

Operations in the steel industry will be lower this week in both the Chicago and Pittsburgh areas, according to preliminary mill schedules announced yesterday. The Chicago district will operate at about 32 per cent of theoretical ingot capacity, off 1.1 point from last Monday but 3½ points higher than a month ago.

Ingot production is scheduled to start tomorrow in Pittsburgh at 25½ per cent of capacity, according to a report by Dow-Jones & Co. This represents a drop of 1 point from last week's beginning schedule.

MEAT, LIVE STOCK SLUMP AS WOMEN TIGHTEN PURSES

Unemployment, Business Recession Blamed.

Tightening of purse strings by Chicago housewives has become the outstanding factor in the declining markets for meats and live stock. Reduced consumer buying power, the result of spreading unemployment and the business recession, was blamed for last week's low prices at the stockyards. The three principal classes, steers, hogs, and lambs, averaged $8.30 per hundred pounds, the lowest in more than two months. This was below any corresponding week in four years.

In her trips to the neighborhood butcher shop the lady of the house dictates indirectly by her purchases the wholesale price of meats, as well as the price of live animals shipped from the farm.

Meat Price Range Narrows.

Her attempt to hold down the family food bill by buying the lower priced cuts has done much to upset the normal spread in prices during recent weeks. Best grades of meats and live animals sold unusually close to the "cheaper" grades.

For economy this week live stock men at the stockyards advise consumers to favor the better grades of beef, as well as most cuts of pork, which they believe will give the purchaser more food per dollar than the relatively high priced "cheap" meat.

Although declines ranging upward to 40 per cent are cited in some of the top grades of beef, compared with a year ago, advances up to 8 per cent are shown in some of the lower priced cuts. Top grades of beef sold late in the week as much as 28 cents per pound wholesale lower than at the peak of last October's trade, whereas some cheaper cuts were 2½ cents higher than in October.

Farmers Receive Less.

Farmers for several weeks have been feeling the effects of the attempt that city consumers are making to economize. The department of agriculture disclosed yesterday that packers under federal inspection paid farmers a total of 122 million dollars for cattle, calves, hogs, and sheep during March, the smallest outlay for that month in three years. This was a reduction of 23 million dollars or 15 per cent from the March payments last year.

Prices of all classes of live stock at Chicago toboganned last week. Beef steers finished 25 to 40 cents lower than a week earlier. Yearlings fell 25 cents. Cows, heifers, calves, stockers and feeders ruled weak to 25 cents lower. The week's steer average was off 20 cents at $8.45. Slaughter lambs slumped 25 to 35 cents, and old mutton sheep sold off 75 cents to $1.00 in the sharpest downturn of the season. Hogs declined 15 to 25 cents.

There was practically no live stock sold on the Chicago market yesterday.

WHEAT FIRMER; FROST FORECAST FOR SOUTHWEST

Unfavorable weather conditions in the southwest with frost predicted over night as far south as the Texas "panhandle," led to fairly general buying of wheat futures yesterday which carried prices up 1½ cent a bushel at the extreme. Although profit taking and week-end evening up shaded the best prices, closing trades were at net gains of ⅞ to 1⅛ cents.

Expectation of a marked revival in the European demand for American cash wheat in the immediate future also was a factor in helping the advance in the market. However, there was no evidence yesterday of larger sales, only 200,000 bushels being reported sold, largely hard winter grain for shipment from gulf ports to the continent.

Reports that South Africa had bought Australian wheat was partly responsible for an advance of 1 to 1⅜ cents a bushel in Liverpool futures.

Corn showed a firm undertone from the start. Although the country sold cash grain freely, the offerings were absorbed by shorts and export interests, and closing trades were at net gains of ¼ to ⅜ cent a bushel. Export sales in all positions were placed at 200,000 bushels.

Debenture Stock.

Debenture stock is a type of securities used frequently in English corporation financing but seldom issued in this country. It is the same as an ordinary debenture except that it has no maturity date, but is a perpetual obligation of the issuing company. The interest on debenture stock is a fixed expense of the company which must be met before dividends can be paid on any other classes of stock.

An example of debenture stock is the 4 per cent perpetual debentures which the Canadian Pacific railway has outstanding. Such issues are usually employed when it is desired to obtain additional capital without either borrowing through bond issues or increasing the capital stock through creation of another class or issuance of more of an existing class.

Debenture stock is considered preferable from the investors' standpoint to nonvoting preferred stock because of the real liability which the issuing company has to pay the interest. For the same reason, it is not as desirable from the company's standpoint and is seldom issued unless other types of securities are considered less feasible at the time.

SLUMP IN MEAT PACKING WORSE THAN IN 1929-30

by the quantities of live stock coming to market. When live stock receipts are large, a meat packer is obliged to increase purchases, even when they may not prove profitable. The only other available course would be to stand by while competitors increased their business and reduced their overhead cost at the expense of the packer's trade.

Obviously, he cannot afford to lose customers, and so he must buy live animals when they are brought to market, and similarly, must curtail purchases when live stock receipts decline.

A look at prices for live stock in the Chicago market in this recession, compared with the old depression, shows how much more severe the packers' problem of inventory losses must be now than in 1929-'30.

The March average this year for beef steers was $8.46 per hundred pounds, a drop of 38 per cent in the last six months. From September, 1929, to March, 1930, the downturn was only 11 per cent to $12.33.

It took another year—a total of eighteen months—in the previous depression to equal the percentage decline of the last six months in beef steers [figures from the department of agriculture].

Seasonal Rise Is Omitted.

From September, 1929, to March, 1930, there was actually a seasonal rise in the price of hogs in spite of the depression, but in the present setback, quotations at Chicago fell 19 per cent—from $11.37 last September to $9.12 in March.

And, of course, the declining live stock market hurts not the packer alone—it means a falling off in the income to the farmer. Revenue from live stock normally make up nearly 30 per cent of the total farm income.

The decline in hog slaughtering has reduced the volume of packers' operations and been a large factor in forcing layoffs of employés.

Hog slaughtering in March of this year was only 2,610,000 head at all federally inspected plants throughout the country. This was the smallest volume on record for any month except 1935, and compared with 3,033,000 in March, 1937, and 3,392,000 head in the first March [1930] of the depression.

In April, hog receipts at Chicago slumped to the second lowest volume in fifty-five years for that month.

Employment Declines.

Hog slaughtering is an important factor in packing house employment, chiefly because hogs require more processing than other live stock.

The packing industry's employment index, compiled by the bureau of labor statistics, dropped in March to 84.2 per cent of the 1923-'25 average. At the recovery peak in December, 1936, the index stood at 98.7, and in January of this year at 92.2. In March, 1930, it was 93.4 or 11 per cent higher than March of this year.

The lower levels of prices existing now on all meats, compared with the spring of 1930, make it difficult to make a profit, unless a high volume of business can be done. The decline in the volume of business handled in the hog department, which has increased the unit cost of operating, has added a difficulty which the packers did not have in the 1929 collapse. Overhead costs now must be distributed over a lesser output.

Wisconsin Fight Will Go Before Federal Board.

BY THORNTON SMITH.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 7.—[Special.]—A farmers' coöperative society and a labor union, both gently nurtured favorites of the politicians of this state and the federal administration, are at grips in Richland county. The Richland Coöperative Creamery company is resisting an effort of the American Federation of Labor teamsters' union to organize its plant in Richmond Center. The dispute, in which 1,000 farmer members of the coöperative have unofficially defined their position as "let the labor board start something," has progressed to a point where a hearing before Regional Director N. S. Clark of the national labor board is imminent.

For the politicians it is a family fight between two favorite children. The coöperatives, like the unions, have been exempted from many laws and their growth has been encouraged by numerous state agencies.

La Follette "Steps Aside."

The state labor relations act specifically exempts agricultural enterprises, but when the coöperative appealed to Gov. La Follette he stepped aside and let the decision go to the labor board on the theory that the coöperative was engaged in interstate business.

The resistance of the farmer group as it comes into direct contact with organized labor is viewed by politicians as proving the inherent difference in their interests and justifying predictions that farm and labor can not unite permanently in a political organization. In this instance the farmers have coöperated to increase their returns for their product and labor has united in the same way to get a larger share of the milk returns.

Three farm organizations in Wisconsin have united with the state Federation of Labor in La Follette's political organization. They are the Equity union, the Milk Pool, and the Farm Holiday association. The coöperatives have formed no political alliance.

The present clash, as the diverging interests appear, indicates that there is a sharp and exact limitation to the extent the two classes can agree politically.

Board Hearing Likely.

The union has filed charges against the coöperative. The labor board has outlined the course the coöperative must follow, and the coöperative has refused in part. Edward J. Brophy, field examiner for the labor board, said this week it seems a hearing before the board is inevitable.

The teamsters' union started to organize the employés of the coöperative last December and, according to Brophy, enrolled a majority of them. In February three men were discharged and the coöperative decided that it would have no trafic with the union, Brophy said. Farmer patrons of the coöperative who are not members voted to back up the directors in refusing to sign a contract with the union or to accept its wage scale.

The union is demanding reinstatement of the three employés, compensation for their lost time, and an expression from the company that the men are free to join any union. The board has notified the coöperative it must reinstate the men with pay and cease interfering with their organizing activities.

Refuse to Rehire Employé.

The coöperative replied it would rehire two of the men but not the third man. Assemblyman Vernon W. Thomson, attorney for the coöperative, said this man was the night engineer who went to sleep and let the boiler go dry. He was discharged for inefficiency, Thomson said.

Regional Director Clark said the coöperative has introduced an angle that is new in the experience of the labor board. He said it is undertaking to enroll the employés in the Butter Makers' association which he said was a combination of trade association and butter makers' guild. He regards it as an independent union and it would be a great blow to the federated unions if the coöperative "got away with it."

Director Clark makes a distinction between consumers' coöperatives which are encouraged by the county agents and by the state department of markets and agriculture, and the producers' coöps.

"A producers' coöp," Clark said, "is just the same as any other capitalistic setup."

"Most Favored Children."

Thomson said the law recognizes no distinction between the kinds of coöperatives. He pointed out that the Rural Electrification administration had poured millions into promoting farmers' electrical coöperatives and that marketing coöperatives were the most favored children of the department of markets.

The butter maker is paid $200 a month. Clark said there is only one butter maker in a unit and the other employés are paid as low as $80 a month. Some of the farmer stock holders and patrons offered to trade jobs with the $80 a month men. They said it was more than they received each month.

Aside from their unwillingness to let the union dictate the employment policies, the farmers, both members and patrons, Thomson said, have an instinctive reluctance to yield any of the control of their enterprise to an outside group.

Department Store Sales in Week 15% Under 1937

The federal reserve board yesterday announced that reports of sales by approximately 250 department stores located throughout the United States averaged approximately 15 per cent lower in the week ending April 30, 1938, than in the corresponding week of 1937. Sales for the four weeks ended April 30 were 7 per cent below a year ago.

EDISON'S BOARD TO DRAFT FINAL FINANCING PLAN

Issues Totaling 70 Million Are Expected.

Final plans for the Commonwealth Edison company's seventy million dollar new financing program are expected to be made tomorrow morning at the directors' meeting. The company, it is anticipated, will file registration statements this week for $33,000,000 of first mortgage bonds and $35,000,000 to $40,000,000 of convertible debentures.

Edison's projected financing, announced last week, was one of several signs of activity in the new capital market which has been practically stagnant in recent months, with the exception of the $60,000,000 debenture issue of the Consolidated Edison company of New York floated in April.

Expect to Reduce Interest.

Stockholders of Commonwealth Edison will meet May 20 to authorize the new mortgage bonds which will be used to retire $30,000,000 of 5 per cent bonds that would mature in 1953 and 1954. With present low money rates, it is expected the company will be able to refinance at a considerable saving in interest charges.

The current rates of interest may help bring a further revival in utility financing, in the opinion of underwriters, if the utilities get assurances of a truce with the government. John W. Hanes, member of the Securities and Exchange commission, estimated Friday that peace between the utilities and government would bring an annual flow of several hundred millions of new capital into investments for new construction and replacement.

U. S. Steel Plans Big Issue.

The United States Steel corporation entered the new capital outlook last week with the announcement that $100,000,000 of ten year convertible debentures would be registered soon with the SEC. The issue, which will probably be offered in June, will be used to retire $50,000,000 of bank loans and provide additional capital.

Actual new financing last week amounted to nearly $32,000,000, compared with $10,850,000 the week before, according to Poor's Publishing company compilations. For the first time in many months a large industrial stock issue was included in the issues floated. This was a block of $15,000,000 of General Foods corporation $4.50 preferred stock, which was immediately oversubscribed at $101 a share. An issue of 8,000 shares of Anheuser-Busch, Inc., stock also was sold entirely last week at $51 a share.

Unnecessary.

The Hoagland & Allum and Richard Whitney scandals proved that most of the investors who lose in such failures are those who leave their securities in the custody of others when there is no need for doing so. The wise investor does not take unnecessary chances of loss. One of the unnecessary chances is leaving fully paid for securities in the custody of others.

The best investment houses prefer not to retain paid for securities. Such securities are not and cannot legitimately be used in conducting the firm's business and risk of loss is involved. Some firms refuse to keep securities a moment longer than necessary. Others charge a fee for custodianship.

This, of course, does not apply to stocks held in a brokerage account for trading purposes. It does apply to securities bought solely for investment purposes. The purchaser should accept delivery and place investment securities in a lock box. That is what lock boxes are for.

"A public service could be rendered if it could be pounded into the mind of the average investor that there is only one place for securities which he owns and that is in his own possession. The careless handling of securities by corporations and individuals is amazing."

Officers of another large firm recently notified its customers that all securities being held for safekeeping or for sale at prices out of line with the existing market would be returned. As a result, the firm now holds only a very small amount of paid for securities belonging to others.

There are few professions, if any, with higher standards than the investment banking and brokerage business. Black sheep, however, are found in every business, including the securities business. One of the ways black sheep in the investment business go astray is by making unethical use of securities entrusted to their care by investors.

Leaders in the securities business agree that removal of temptation to use of customers' securities unfairly is one way to avoid such scandals as those disclosed in Hoagland & Allum and Whitney failures. Investors can help remove the temptation by retaining possession of their own investments.

If a person feels it wise to leave his investments in the care of others he should make use of facilities offered by trust companies. Fees are charged for such services, but the investor has the assurance that trust companies are carefully supervised by state or national banking officials.

COMMODITIES MOVE UNEVENLY IN LAST WEEK

Futures Average Rises; Cash Staples Lower.

Commodity futures last week failed to move in sympathy with the advancing stock market, and closed yesterday with some gains and some losses from the preceding Saturday.

The Dow-Jones index of commodity futures finished at 48.72, compared with 48.48 a week earlier and 48.71 on Friday [1924-'26 average equals 100]. Cash prices, on the whole, continued to slump during the week.

Tin contracts showed the largest change for the week, rising 1.70 cents after losing more than 2 cents a pound in the preceding week. Spot prices showed a corresponding change. Prospects of a referendum this week by Malayan tin producers, on the question of a pool to stabilize tin prices, brought speculative buying in the contracts. The Malayan government had rejected the pooling program the week before.

Other Staples Irregular.

Some advance was also shown for the week in cottonseed oil, rubber and hide futures, but cocoa, wool tops, lead and zinc declined. A shade higher were contracts for copper and coffee. Sugar futures were little changed for the week, but the spot price of raw sugar dropped 0.08 cent a pound yesterday to 2.75 cents, from 2.81 cents a week earlier.

Activity in cash hide market picked up moderately during the week. On Friday, about 25,000 hides were sold by packers to tanners at prices unchanged from the preceding sale. Hide futures, off 0.03 to 0.06 yesterday, were still 0.14 to 0.40 cent higher than a week ago.

Silk Futures Advance.

Silk futures, which are not traded on Saturdays, gained 5 to 6 cents a pound last week, closing Friday at $1.58 for the May contract.

Rubber contracts, which had dipped 1 to 1½ cents a pound in the preceding week, last week regained about ½ cent a pound, although they slipped 0.04 to 0.08 cent in yesterday's trading.

Metals, aside from tin, showed no decisive change. Copper contracts, closing 0.01 cent lower to 0.04 cent higher yesterday, were up 0.05 cent for the week.

SECONDARY RAIL LIENS STRONG IN BOND MARKET

New York, May 7.—(AP)—Continued strength in secondary rails featured today's bond market. All groups were higher, although the carriers led the other major corporate divisions by a substantial margin.

Industrials also did well and the foreign list was firm. United States government loans were irregular, closing 6-32ds higher to 3-32ds lower.

Erie refunding 5s moved up 2 points and Great Northern railway G 4s rose 2¼. American Foreign Power 5s rose 1⅞.

Turnover was $3,786,675, against $2,187,000 last Saturday.

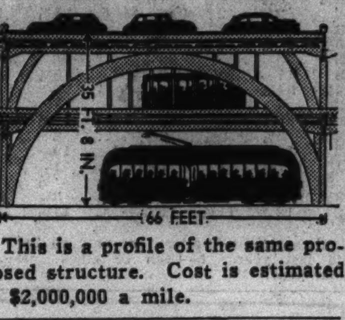
MOTORS—TRAFIC—HIGHWAYS

How Three Level Street Would Look

This is a cross section of a three level street as suggested for part of a west side superhighway system. The ground level usage would be little changed by the addition of the upper decks.



This is a profile of the same proposed structure. Cost is estimated at $2,000,000 a mile.

SUBMITS PLAN FOR THREE LEVEL SUPERHIGHWAYS

Sanitary Engineer Gives Idea as Citizen.

A plan for a three level highway was presented yesterday by Ralph R. Leffler for consideration by Mayor Kelly's and Gov. Horner's engineers as part of a superhighway system for Chicago. Mr. Leffler is engineer of design for the Chicago sanitary district, but it was as a private citizen that he contributed this transportation study.

"With two decks above the normal street level," he said yesterday, "the top deck can be used for through trafic of private automobiles, the middle level for express buses, and the normal street level for local trafic. In separating buses from private automobiles, this plan is different from other recent elevated highway proposals.

Provides Eight Lanes.

"This suggestion of mine also provides more capacity than is found on previous elevated highway proposals with a single level above existing pavement. The three layer street provides for eight trafic lanes free of cross trafic.

"The height of the structure has been held to 36 feet and 2 inches by suspending the middle deck from above rather than supporting it from below. It can be built in existing 66 foot streets without acquiring any additional right of way, except for approach ramps at intervals of about two miles.

"The cost would approximate $2,000,000 a mile. For this price the public would obtain four one-way pavements each 22 feet wide. The use of the surface street at grade would not be disturbed. This cost figure, it will be recognized, is only a fraction of the cost to obtain the same additional trafic capacity by means of surface street widening."

Architectural Treatment Airy.

"The architectural treatment is light and airy, suitable for either narrow or wide streets in neighborhoods either beautiful or not so beautiful."

Mr. Leffler said that such a structure could be built from the loop to beyond the city limits for less than would be paid to property owners for right of way for a parkway that would close cross streets.

"Unlike some of the previously published elevated highway plans," he concluded, "I haven't made any attempt to salvage elevated railroads whose trafic would go to the express buses. I think it would be better to scrap the elevated tracks after the buses are in service."

MOTORISTS GET ASSURANCE OF NO SHAKEDOWNS

BY HAL FOUST.

F. Lynden Smith, state director of public works, and Sherif John Toman joined yesterday in promising protection to the motorists from shakedowns during the ensuing touring season.

"The moral and the discipline of the state highway police are at their best," said Mr. Smith. "Of course, any complaint against a member of this force will receive prompt, thorough investigation.

"In addition, this year we'll undertake to safeguard the public from any shakedown on the state highway system. We will investigate and prosecute any speed trap shakedowns on the state roads regardless of the offending constabulary and regardless of politics."

Sherif Toman promised the same vigilance and the same protection on the Cook county roads policed by the county's patrolmen. Both officials requested motorists to report to them any abuse received on the highway by anyone wearing a star. Both asked that abused drivers furnish a description of the offender.

In previous years, village constables, depending upon court fees for their sustenance, have caused most of the grief to motorists. A favorite trick was to arrest a driver on an open highway between corn fields for violating a village speed limit of 25 miles an hour. Some Cook county towns include much open country.

The Illinois highway department a couple of years ago put a damper on this type of official shakedown by posting 45 miles an hour speed limit on the state highways traversing unpopulated but incorporated territories. With both the director of public works and the sherif threatening prosecutions, there should be a still further reduction in the number of arrests motivated not to prevent accidents but to profit the arresting officer and possibly a conniving justice of the peace.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Put that spare automobile tire to use, don't make a museum piece out of it, the Fisk Tire company advises motor car owners. Tires are made for wear, the company pointed out. "The rubber deteriorates, becomes flabby, and sidewalls crack when the tire is stored in fender wells and tire racks for any length of time," the company explained. "Often the air is left unchecked and the driver is caught on the road with two flats, the punctured one and his spare."

Buick's metallurgical department in its new laboratories in Flint, Mich., is carrying on research work which enables the manufacturer each year to produce better automobiles at relatively lower cost, R. B. Schenck, head of the department, stated yesterday. Schenck explained that in the new laboratories metallurgists and chemists are carrying on constant physical, chemical, and other scientific tests of materials specified for production, of parts after they have entered into production, and of manufacturing processes.

In order to maintain the engine at the proper temperature water is pumped through the cooling system of a Packard 12 at the rate of more than 12 tons an hour when the car is traveling at 40 miles an hour, the Packard engineers state. Water is pumped through the cooling system at the rate of 48.3 gallons per minute, or 2,898 gallons an hour.

With warm spring weather definitly here, motorists will save money if they will make a number of routine checks, Ed Hedner, service and mechanical director for Chevrolet, said yesterday. Foremost on the list, he said, is the change-over from winter to summer oil and grease. The radiator should be cleaned of scale so the cooling system will operate well and the battery should be checked.

CHICAGOLAND TRIBUNE MAP GOES ON SALE

3 MORE DRIVERS SIGN FOR FIRST HAMMOND RACE

Three more drivers yesterday signed entry blanks to compete in the opening Hammond automobile races on May 15, making a total of six pilots already listed.

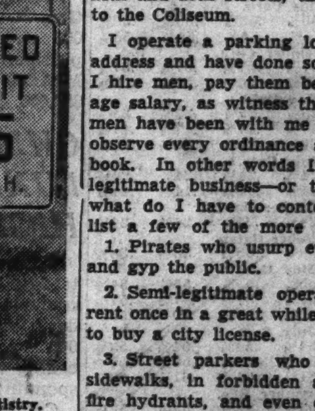
The three who signed yesterday were Johnny McDowell of California, Morris Musick, Texas title holder, and Les Adair of Indianapolis. Others who will have cars in the opening races are Petri Alberti, holder of three Hammond records; Joey Chitwood, Indian driver, and Everett Saylor, Indianapolis dirt track champion.

Officials announced that time trials for the races a week from today would start at 11:30 a. m. and the first race at 2:15 p. m.

VOICE OF TRAFIC

DISTORTED SPEED SIGN.

Chicago, May 2.—There was many a motorist who looked twice and even three times at the speed limit sign a few rods north of Grand avenue on River road.



Hoodlum Artistry.

The sign, one of the conventional Illinois state highway make, told to the motoring public that at that point the speed limit was 85 miles per hour.

Close inspection of the sign revealed that it originally was 35 m. p. h., but the 3 was very deftly and neatly made into an 8 by the use of paint, asphalt or tar.

LIKES TOUR STORIES.

Chicago, April 23.—I just wanted you to know how much we appreciate and enjoy your suggestions about trips. We have clipped every one so far and they are such fun to follow. We have often wished we knew where to go when starting for a ride and it is so nice now to start out knowing our destination and knowing we are going to see something interesting instead of just aimless driving. Only I wish your column could appear on specific days so we would be sure not to miss any.

MRS. F. C. HOFFMAN.

AN ANNUAL COMPLAINT.

Chicago, May 3.—This is my annual complaint about trafic and parking conditions on South Wabash avenue between 14th and 16th streets, the area adjacent to the Coliseum.

I operate a parking lot at the above address and have done so for five years. I hire men, pay them better than average salary, as witness the fact that two men have been with me three years. I observe every ordinance and rule in the book. In other words I am running a legitimate business—or trying to. But what do I have to contend with? I'll list a few of the more obvious things.

1. Pirates who usurp every vacant lot and gyp the public.

2. Semi-legitimate operators who pay rent once in a great while and "forget" to buy a city license.

3. Street parkers who park cars on sidewalks, in forbidden areas alongside fire hydrants, and even double park in the streets so that street cars must cautiously crawl through.

JOSEPH J. WILSON.

OLD ROADS BREAKING UP.

Chicago, April 26.—If you'll get out of your comfortable air-conditioned office and push THE TRIBUNE'S road car around Illinois for a few days, you'll be able to report to your readers that important pavements in our highway system are in urgent need of replacement. The oldest slabs are on the heaviest traveled roads, and they are breaking up under their loads. If you knew the true condition of Illinois roads, you wouldn't be publishing stories about reducing the license fees.

CIVIC FESTIVAL TO OPEN 103D STREET

BACK OF YARDS BOYS ARE GOING TO HAVE A GYM

Half of $50,000 Fund Already Raised.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Bridgeport needs a gymnasium and it now appears that the boys and girls of that community are going to get one. If you don't know about Bridgeport you don't know your Chicago. It is located in the general back of the yards area and is known in police circles as a proficient educational center for hoodlums.

Miss Margot Atkin.

Youngsters along west 31st street in Bridgeport who prefer useful citizenship to gangdom have actually adopted the catchword—"It's either gym or gang." Every one of them wants the former, and, in particular, the projected gymnasium of the House of Happiness, 3052 Gratten avenue. Otherwise, no gymn, no choice. Crowded streets, dusty alleys and lots make gangs necessary. A gangless boy out there is like an ugly duckling that cannot grow up.

Former Gym Lost.

At least, so says Wayne McCarthy, boys' department director of the house, who once had a gymnasium to house his 500 boys. But that gymnasium was a makeshift in a rented building which also was headquarters of other activities. Now that is gone. Last summer it was sold, so something had to be done. Thus far $25,000 out of the needed $50,000 has been contributed.

Miss Margot Atkin of Winnetka, former president of the Junior league, is head of the committee to raise the gymnasium money. The building plans by Armstrong, Furst, and Tilton, architects, call also for handicraft and manual training rooms. Bishop George Craig Stewart, president of the House of Happiness board, has announced that the board hopes to begin building on July 1, anniversary of the sale of the former gymnasium.

The following nationalities are crowded into the Bridgeport area: Poles, Germans, Irish, Italians, English, Lithuanians, Ukrainians, Slavs, French, Greeks, Scots, Bohemians and Jews. Mr. McCarthy, in designating these national groups added that youths from them are organized in many activities; scouting, football, nature study, health clubs, dramatics, handcrafts, sewing, cooking, tumbling, clubs, and folk singing and dancing.

Crap Shooting Scout.

Mr. McCarthy told of Jimmie, who wanted a Boy Scout uniform and knew a lot about crap shooting.

"Jimmie won his uniform before we knew what he was doing," said Mr. McCarthy. "Crap shooting was the best thing he could do and the uniform was soon purchased. There are dozens of cases like Jimmy's, although perhaps not the crap shooting phase of it. It takes months of patient work sometimes to change these Jimmies into coöperative and helpful members of House of Happiness groups."

Members of the board of the house include Mrs. Langdon Pearse of Winnetka; Mrs. M. Paul Noyes, Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson, Mrs. Henry Pope Jr., and Mrs. Paul T. Bruyere. On Miss Atkin's building committee are Henry P. C. W. Barber, Mrs. John B. Green, Henry L. McIntyre, and Warren F. Sarle.

Moody Bible institute announces that a May Bible conference will be held from Monday to Friday, May 23 to 27, in connection with the corner stone ceremony of the new administration building now being erected on La Salle street immediately north of Chicago avenue. The evening speaker at this conference will be the Rev. Irwin A. Moon of Los Angeles, Cal., in a series of lectures entitled "Sermons from Science."

Corner stone laying exercises will take place at 3:15 o'clock Friday afternoon, May 27, with the Rev. Will H. Houghton, president of the institute, in charge. The conference will conclude with a rally in the Coliseum, 1463 South Wabash avenue, at which the guest speaker will be the Rev. Robert G. Lee of Memphis, Tenn.

SYMPHONY GIVES FINAL CONCERT THIS AFTERNOON

The final concert this season of the Beverly Symphony orchestra, directed by Ernest Toy, will be given this afternoon in Ridge park fieldhouse, 96th street and Longwood drive. The program will include the "Raymond Overture," by Thomas; the "London Suite," by Eric Coates, and "Polonaise," by W. E. Kritch. Renan De Camp, 11 year old pianist and composer of eighteen musical scores, will play the first movement of Concerto No. 1, by Beethoven, accompanied by the orchestra. Other soloists will be Thomas Siwicki, violinist, and Marion Kroeplin, harpist. Tea will be served at the close of the concert.

Sing in Comic Opera

When the sailors sailed the seas in schooners and named their ships after their sweethearts, romance had double drama. The senior class of Visitation High school will call those days before the footlights Thursday and Friday evenings in the school auditorium, 54th place and Peoria street, with a production of "Joan of the Nancy Lee," a comic opera. Taking part in the cast will be (left to right) Marie Haugh, Eileen O'Keefe, Jeanette Zanders, and Mary Jane Stephens. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

ST. LUKE'S CHURCH OPENS 50 YEAR JUBILEE TODAY

Congregation Grows from 8 to 1,000.

Fifty years ago eight German families who had built their homes, paid their taxes and baked their kuchen, went to meeting to found a church. Today more than 1,000 persons pray in the house of worship they erected. Many will participate in the golden jubilee of the church, St. Luke's Evangelical Reformed, 62d and Green streets, beginning today and continuing until May 22.

The pastorate history of St. Luke's reaches back to March 15, 1888, when the Rev. J. L. Kling, assisted by the Rev. William Hattendorf, organized the little congregation of eight German families. Ground for a church building was immediately purchased and the structure erected at its present site by November of the same year.

Complete Building in 1924.

In 1915 the Rev. John Kreuger changed the services from entirely German to German-English. The Rev. Mr. Kreuger was succeeded by the Rev. Theodore G. Papsdorf, who began and completed the building program, including the parish hall, dedicated in 1924. In 1929 the Rev. Mr. Papsdorf gave up his pastorate to the Rev. Armin N. Mayer, who died in office. The Rev. R. C. Kienle is now pastor.

Today will be dedicated to the work of the religious education department. Sharvey Umbeck, University of Chicago divinity student and social worker, will be guest speaker. More than 400 members of the Sunday school will attend this 11 o'clock service.

Banquet on Thursday.

The annual mothers and daughters' banquet given by the organized women's classes in the Sunday school is scheduled for Thursday evening. The program will be directed by Mrs. Katherine Braker, Miss Matilda Kann, and Mrs. George Seehausen.

Next Sunday will be given over to church organizations, and the Rev. Irving R. Koch of St. Paul, Minn., will be the morning speaker. A fathers and sons' banquet will be served Tuesday evening, May 17, when the Rev. Dr. J. C. Kindred of the Englewood Christian church will speak.

The actual anniversary services will be conducted May 22 with both a German and an English speaker presiding.

Reunion in Evening.

Closing the celebration, the confirmation classes will hold a reunion at 8 o'clock in the evening, presenting Dr. George L. Scherger of St. Paul's Evangelical church of Chicago as the principal speaker.

Taking an active part in all the observances will be Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wasbach, 6140 Peoria street, who were the first couple married in the church after its founding and who have attended ever since. Mrs. Ida Gestram, 6940 Perry avenue, who has been present at German services for forty-eight years, also will participate.

VESPER SONGS TO GIRDLE CITY THIS SUMMER

BY MILDRED WILDS.

Summer evenings soon will bring the city's people out of doors again and the methodical metropolis that is Chicago will become groups of just good neighbors. For nine consecutive Sunday evenings beginning July 3, Chicago will prove that, though it has grown great, it has not forgotten to be friendly. Then informal vesper choral concerts, to be held in five of its forest preserve parks, will almost encircle the city with song.

Approximately 2,000 members of forty-five choral groups in Chicago and suburbs have registered to sing in the twilight music series which has been arranged by the TRIBUNE with the coöperation of the board of commissioners of Cook county, of which Clayton F. Smith is president.

The stage for these concerts will be a grassy slope or a great moss mat and the only curtain the deepening dusk. The wind playing through the branches of old oak trees and slim white birches will be the only accompaniment.

Church choirs will sing hymns of praise there that have echoed through vast cathedrals and sung again around family organs at home. There will be swelling oratorios and light opera in the romantic mood of holiday hours.

Schedule Is Completed.

The schedule is completed. Classic compositions and humble folk songs will compose the programs to be given in Harms woods, on Harms road out of Evanston; in Caldwell woods in the Emmett Whealan Pool preserve, reached by Milwaukee avenue street cars; in Thatcher woods, at Chicago avenue and the Des Plaines river; in Palos Hills preserve, on Mannheim road and route 52, and in Daniel Ryan woods, 87th street and Western avenue.

When the first announcement of the vesper series was made, letters commending the project poured into the TRIBUNE offices from the city's music leaders, leading ministers, and educators. They write of the picture they see when mothers, fathers, children, and neighbors gather in the outdoors to receive the ministry of music when day is done.

Frederick A. Stock, conductor of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, writes his words of praise for something new toward making music a common language for all people. He says:

"I am sincerely interested in the concerts to be inaugurated and to be known as the Forest Choral Vesper Series, that will be started in the first week of July. I feel sure that nothing could further enhance the beauty and charm of our out of door life in our beautiful forest preserves and that these concerts will go a long ways toward the appreciation of good choral music.

"I wish it were possible, at least once in a while, to add a small instrumental group to those choral organizations which take part in the vesper services. A plan of this kind would offer greater advantages toward the projection of oratorios like those of Handel and I feel sure would attract multitudes of people."

Commends the Plan.

Another letter was received from Miss Charlotte Carr, director of Hull house. Her comment reads: "I am very much in favor of the plan of THE TRIBUNE to give the citizens of Chicago an opportunity to hear free of charge the beautiful voices of the singing choirs of the city at open air concerts. From the point of view of educational value as well as esthetic enjoyment, the plan is an excellent one."

From Bishop Ernest Lynn Waldorf of the Chicago area of the Methodist Episcopal church comes this statement: "Please permit me to register my enthusiastic approval and delight over your proposed series of choral concerts which are to be given this summer in five forest preserve parks near the throngs of people living in Chicago.

"The idea is beautiful and the concerts will render a real service to our community. The out of doors, the picturesque surroundings, the ministry of music, the religious and social implications involved are all highly commendatory. This is a very worth while forward movement."

Clayton Smith Approves.

The president of the board of Cook county commissioners, Mr. Smith, writes: "Visitors to the forest preserve district of Cook county call it 'the peoples' paradise.' Its stately trees, its tortuous streams, its expansive vistas of verdant beauty, its animals, its birds, call to mind the popular conception of Eden.

"A series of choral concerts as planned by the TRIBUNE completes the mental picture. Nothing more sublime could be done to create a lasting appreciation of the forest preserves than human voices lifted in harmony in the Cook county's tranquil woodlands at twilight."

"THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE is to be commended for this splendid entertainment," is the comment of James Howe, president of the village of Oak Park. "This undertaking should demonstrate to the citizens of Cook coun-

EXPECT 100,000 TO JOIN IN FETE SET FOR JULY 27

Highway Gives New East-West Link.

BY FRANK EDWARDS.

Plans for celebrating the opening of 103d street in July with the largest intercommunity celebration and fanfare ever seen on the south side were announced last week by Roy F. Healy, chairman of the south area council of the Chicago Motor club.

Roy F. Healy.

Indicating its intention of outdoing the Illiana drive opening celebration of last summer, the council is planning, for an attendance of at least 100,000 persons from all communities of the south and southwest sides. Arrangements were begun at the council's meeting last Monday for holding mass meetings in various sections of the area to stir up interest and enlist participation in the ceremonies.

Two Parades to Meet.

The program on the evening of July 27 will include two parades, which will meet at the bridge on 103d street, where a large grandstand will be erected. Ribbon cutting ceremonies will take place at each end of the bridge. Invitations are being sent to federal, state, county, and city officials. The processions will include floats, American Legion units, fife and drum corps, fraternal, civic and business organizations, and decorated automobiles.

Ald. Arthur G. Lindell [9th], Ald. William A. Rowan [10th], and Ald. John J. Duffy [19th], whose wards will benefit from the new thoroughfare, will be special guests at the celebration.

Clarence J. Bohling, president of the East Side Chamber of Commerce, is celebration chairman. Vice chairmen are Carl Buck, South Deering Improvement association, and William J. McGonagil, Ridge Civic council.

Chairmen of Committees.

Committee chairmen are Mrs. C. C. Lively, South Side Federation of Improvement Clubs, women's activities; Gustave Brand, city treasurer, floats; Mr. Healy, service clubs coöperation; Ald. Rowan, Indiana cities participation; J. E. Bulger, Chicago Motor club, coördinating activities; Lieut. Col. Harry A. Cotter, parade, and Severn Golkowski, South Chicago Y. M. C. A., organization of juvenile units.

Other community leaders and public officials who already are at work to get their organizations and fellow residents on the band wagon are Edward J. Hanlon, Southtown Safety council; Oscar E. Anderson and Herbert W. Tech, Gresham Business Men's association; A. L. Armantrout, Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation; Edward J. Bohling and H. W. Smith, East Side Chamber of Commerce; O. C. Bruhlman, Conservation council; Duncan Campbell, Cook county highway department, and Hugh W. Donaldson, Illinois commerce commission.

Others Aiding Plans.

Others are William H. Doyle, Grand Crossing Improvement association; William B. Gibson, South Chicago Chamber of Commerce; Glenn E. Miller, Des Plaines Valley Improvement association; Frank X. Rydzewski, Russell Square Improvement association; Bud Singman, Grand Crossing-Chatham Chamber of Commerce; Fred L. Steers, Ridge Civic council; J. G. Strader, Fifty-fifth Street Business Men's association; Spencer Castle; Walter C. Cohen; W. G. Newbould; John Jasinski, and Edward W. Ringl.

The county already has taken bids on the paving of 103d street from Stony Island to Cottage Grove avenue. The work from Stony Island east to Torrence avenue is now in progress under the jurisdiction of the city.

When the two projects are finished there will be a through roadway from Western to Torrence avenue, which council members say will become one of the most important east and west trafic arteries on the south side. It will provide a necessary and useful link between the residential communities of Beverly Hills and Morgan Park on the far southwest side and the industrial districts near the Lake Michigan shore.

Success After Thirty Years.

Charles M. Hayes, president of the motor club, said:

"The opening of 103d street will mark the conclusion of a thirty year campaign by civic groups in the south end of Chicago to break the 'Chinese wall' which for years barred trafic flow from the area west of the Illinois Central and Nickel Plate tracks to South Chicago."

Ald. Lindell declared that pioneers in the battle for an east-west thoroughfare recall the days when motorists west of the tracks had to travel north to 79th street or south to 127th street to get from one side of the tracks to the other.

Chicago High R.O.T.C. School News

CADET REVIEW PLAN IS GIVEN HIGHEST PRAISE

Leaders Laud Tribune for Sponsorship.

Educational, military and civic leaders last week added their endorsements to the huge review of Chicago's 9,630 high school R. O. T. C. cadets to be held at 2 o'clock, May 20, on Soldiers' field.

Characterizing the spectacle, sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and the board of education as an "inspiring demonstration of loyalty and allegiance to our nation and constituted authority as proclaimed by law," William H. Johnson, superintendent of schools, urged the citizens of Chicago to "fill the stadium to overflowing."

Others who proclaimed their approval were Col. Warren E. Pugh, infantry reserve, president of the department of Illinois, Reserve Officers' association; Lee E. Ragdale, president of the Chicago Rotary club; Douglas J. Scott, president of the Kiwanis club of Chicago, and Mrs. R. L. Floyd, national defense chairman, department of Illinois, American Legion auxiliary.

Freshmen Take Part.

More than 2,000 freshmen will take part this year also, the first time that these cadets, who are not issued uniforms, have performed for the show. As another innovation, the units will pass in review by individual schools instead of in mass formation as formerly, Maj. John H. Ringe, adjutant in R. O. T. C. headquarters, has announced.

Led by the crack Amundsen High school drum and bugle corps, the national and school colors of each of the units will be marched onto the field en masse as the thousands of cadets stand at attention.

Maj. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commanding the 6th corps area, will present stands of colors, furnished by THE TRIBUNE, to the two outstanding units of the city as the climax to the spectacle, and the 9,630 cadets will conclude the show by marching in review to the music of twenty-one bands.

Supt. Johnson Endorses.

Expressing his approval, Mr. Johnson said: "I cannot endorse too heartily the R. O. T. C. movement in the Chicago public high schools. I know of no more splendid movement—patriotic or purely civic in nature—as a result of which there will accrue to the youth of our city a training in citizenship so significant in its influence for the welfare of our beloved city.

"THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE is to be conplimented upon the splendid service it has rendered in its support of the R. O. T. C. of the Chicago public schools.

"The review on May 20 will be an inspiring demonstration of loyalty and allegiance to our nation and constituted authority as proclaimed by law.

Youth Is Ready.

Mr. Ragsdale said: "The R. O. T. C. review not only is calculated to impress the participating youth with their solemn responsibility to their country, but will demonstrate to Chicago citizens that youth is ready to play its rôle. The board of education and THE TRIBUNE are to be congratulated upon this program."

"The Kiwanis club of Chicago," Mr. Scott asserted, "is entirely favorable to the R. O. T. C. We believe in its purposes and we favor the movement to develop the organization in the Chicago schools. We feel THE TRIBUNE, in coöperation with the board of education, is doing a fine work in sponsoring this review and we wish you every success."

Mrs. Floyd said: "We, of the American Legion auxiliary recognize the definite character building value of the R. O. T. C. in our high schools and shall continue our support of this activity which we know will develop leadership, confidence and patriotism in our fine young Americans."

Aids National Defense.

"The value of the junior units of the Reserve Officers' Training corps in the Chicago high schools and parochial schools appeals to me from two standpoints—first, the building of men and second, the beginning step in providing for the defense of this country in the event of war.

"THE TRIBUNE is doing much to promote the interest of these boys by fostering competition through the award of medals to individuals and the presentation of colors to the highest scoring units.

"The annual review, which culminates the R. O. T. C. activities for the year, provides the boys with the opportunity to display their ability and cannot fail to inspire any one witnessing it with the value of this training."

New School Colors

3 CLOSED STATE BANKS TO MAKE $123,000 REFUND

Depositors State Return Totals $99,000.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Three more of the closed state banks that once served the southwest side are expected to repay an additional $123,000 to their depositors during the next few months, State Auditor Edward J. Barrett announced last week.

The new repayments are expected from the Depositors State bank, whose depositors are to share another $99,000; the Industrial State bank, whose unsecured creditors will get an extra $19,000, and the First State Bank of Steger, which will free an additional $5,000 of its deposits.

Here are analyses of the condition of ten more of the closed state banks of the southwest side and nearby suburbs, with the best available estimates for future refunds:

Depositors State bank—Total receipts, $2,807,896; paid on prior claims, $885,988; paid depositors, $497,359, or 23½ per cent. Costs: receivers, $9,552; legal, $69,019; clerical, $111,343; interest, $38,116; advanced to protect assets, $763,757, with $624,509 refunded. Cash, $168,220. The impending new distribution is being withheld to await the outcome of a suit by stockholders of a bank that merged with Depositors State before it closed. The total payout will be about 35 or 40 per cent.

First Englewood State bank—Total receipts, $1,163,201; paid on prior claims, $369,567; paid depositors, $344,888, or 60 per cent: Costs: receivers, $4,854; legal, $35,329; clerical, $47,753; interest, $18,723; advanced to protect assets, $139,693, with $127,607 refunded. Cash, $24,066. About $50,000 is still owing on an RFC loan. The fifth and subsequent repayments may bring the total to 65 or 70 per cent.

First State Bank of Chicago Heights—Total receipts, $687,150; paid on prior claims, $270,062; paid depositors, $189,739, or 25 per cent. Costs: receivers, $6,179; legal, $18,157; clerical, $49,555; interest, $3,849; advanced to protect assets, $137,551, with $105,175 refunded. Cash, $11,044. Depositors can expect another 5 per cent or so, but the time of payment cannot be predicted.

First State Bank of Steger—Total receipts, $75,560; paid on prior claims, $17,265; paid depositors, $25,987, or 30 per cent. Costs: receivers, $1,808; legal, $4,003; clerical, $13,257; interest, $43; advanced to protect assets, $8,312, with $7,982 refunded. Cash, $4,882. The next small repayment, which may come before the end of this year, is about all that depositors will get.

Halsted Street State bank—Total receipts, $1,530,267; paid on prior claims, $358,238; paid depositors, $434,962, or 55 per cent. Costs: receivers, $648; legal, $24,685; clerical, $60,593; interest, $20,614; advanced to protect assets, $185,123, with $169,969 refunded. Cash, $23,074. Remaining assets will probably bring another 5 or 10 per cent for depositors, but none in the immediate future.

Homewood State bank—Total receipts, $274,014; paid on prior claims, $71,364; paid depositors, $24,269, or 16 per cent. Costs: receivers, $2,662; legal, $13,436; clerical, $22,070; interest, $4,821; advanced to protect assets, $55,190, with $37,471 refunded. Cash, $31,547.

Industrial State bank—Total receipts, $223,144; paid on prior claims, $85,455; paid depositors, $68,508, or 35 per cent. Costs: receivers, $7,566; legal, $5,048; clerical, $34,560; interest, none; advanced to protect assets, $7,815, with $7,606 refunded. Cash, $14,189. The next repayment may be made before the end of summer, after which depositors can expect another 10 per cent.

Marquette Park State bank—Total receipts, $922,102; paid on prior claims, $130,289; paid depositors, $336,504, or 35 per cent. Costs: receivers, $9,754; legal, $34,927; clerical, $63,308; interest, $632; advanced to protect assets, $282,947, with $296,604 refunded. Cash, $11,251. The total payout will be about 45 per cent.

Mount Greenwood Trust and Savings bank—Total receipts, $41,919; paid on prior claims, $11,639; paid depositors, $14,501, or 33 per cent. Costs: receivers, $1,154; legal, $4,253; clerical, $7,628; interest, $167; advanced to protect assets, $1,114, with $366 refunded. Cash, $1,460.

Morgan Park Trust and Savings bank—Total receipts, $825,798; paid on prior claims, $106,540; paid depositors, $290,286, or 52½ per cent. Costs: receivers, $4,609; legal, $32,747; clerical, $45,576; interest, $7,359; advanced to protect assets, $174,858, with $176,995 refunded. Cash, $10,941. There is a balance of $16,000 still due on an RFC loan, which must be paid ahead of further disbursements to depositors, who will get little more.

TALKING BOOKS GIVEN TO BLIND BY CLUBWOMEN

Open New World to the Unfortunate.

(This is the twelfth of a series of articles on philanthropic and cultural projects of the Second and Third districts, Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs.)

BY RITA FITZPATRICK.

There are 125,000 persons in the United States who cannot pick up their Sunday paper today, leaf through to their favorite section, and settle themselves for a typical Sunday morning. In other words, there are throughout the country 125,000 men and women who are blind.

Miss Beulah Kendall. [Marshall Studio.]

Blindness is a land where stumbling fingers must be eyes and ears must conjure up scenes out of sounds. For despite blind Milton's boast that "They also serve who only stand and wait," men are of the world and need to be. They must see, or have seen for them, the timid bush in spring, the washed green of after rain, the baseball game on the corner lot, and the news of the war in China. It is the exceptional man who is content to measure life with four sense dimensions instead of five.

Aids Only 5,000.

For only 5,000 of our blind Americans has Braille been an open sesame into houses of written thought. Blindness generally comes to individuals in adult life at a time when their fingers lack the requisite sensitiveness of touch. Unless learned at an early age it is a slow process.

The lamp in the corner of darkness for the other 120,000 citizens in our blind population is the Talking Book, devised and manufactured by the American Foundation for the Blind.

The Talking Book is a phonograph that reads. Its mechanism is so delicate and simplified that it can be operated easily by touch. Its "books" are a collection of twelve or more double sided discs, each of which plays for thirty minuts.

Well trained actors, radio men, and sometimes the authors of the books themselves are the recorded readers. Among the discs available to the blind, free of charge, are detective stories, modern fiction, biographies of the great and near great, books of the Bible, plays of Shakespeare, and the beloved classics of fiction.

Owned by Government.

Prepared by the American Foundation for the Blind, the records are the property of the federal government and are circulated by mail through the public libraries. When a machine is installed a list of "books" is immediately sent to the blind client. He may once more roam the world of ink printed thoughts.

All in all, the spread of Talking Books among the sightless is a worthwhile movement, and as such has the clubwoman behind it. The case in point is the Second district of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, which, as one of its minor projects, has given nine Talking Books, or phonographs, valued at about $450, to blind residents of the south side.

This philanthropy began during the régime of Mrs. W. A. Randolph as district public welfare chairman and has flourished under the sponsorship of Mrs. George W. Payson, retiring public welfare chairman.

To qualify as a user of a club Talking Book a person must be certified by Edward Peterson of the Chicago Public library as worthy and unable to rad otherwise. Blind recipients of the machines are selected by clubwomen or recommended by Mr. Peterson.

Finds New Life.

One woman who received a Talking Book through the Second district has since joined one of the clubs and is taken to the meetings by members who own cars.

Because they are young and see life from the long view, members of the Bryn Mawr Junior auxiliary have been particularly interested in the project. They saved pennies which would have bought sodas or eventually a new hat and purchased a Talking Book for a young blind pianist.

Their protégé has been blind since birth and can barely distinguish light from dark. She now comes to their meetings, plays for them, and discusses with the best the technique of "North to the Orient" by Anne Lindbergh or similar modern literature. Behind this junior movement was Miss Beulah Kendall, president.

Both the Second district juniors and the Second district itself have given two machines each to sightless members of the community. The other five Talking Books have been donated by the Ken-Rose Woman's club, of which Mrs. Martin Boset is public welfare chairman; the Roseland Woman's club, Mrs. George R. Hillstrom, public welfare chairman; the Arché club, Mrs. Harry Hill Ganz, public welfare chairman; the Woodshore Woman's club, Mrs. Al Frederickson, public welfare chairman, and the above mentioned Bryn Mawr Junior auxiliary.

Leaders Meet Wednesday for Final Plans.

BY PHILIP MAXWELL.

Final plans for the presentation of a massed 1,000 piece Chicago high school band at the ninth Chicagoland Music Festival in Soldiers' field on Saturday night, Aug. 20, will be made Wednesday night at a dinner meeting of the Chicago bandmasters in Normandy House, 800 Tower court, west of Michigan avenue.

Jeannette Poulson.

Speakers will include Henry Weber, general musical director of the festival; Miss Helen Howe, director of music for the Chicago public schools; Oscar Anderson, supervisor of instrumentalists; Earl V. Hughes, president of the Chicago Public High School Band and Orchestra Parents association; and Capt. Howard Stube, president of the Chicago High Schools Band association.

To Attend Parents' Meeting.

Following the dinner those in attendance will go to the monthly meeting of the band parents group which will begin at 8:15 o'clock in the Lyon and Healy recital hall.

Entries are coming in each day to the festival headquarters, room 1418, in TRIBUNE Tower, for the many festival contests which include those for adult and juvenile bands, men's, women's and mixed choruses, vocalists, violinists, cornetists, and bâton twirlers.

Paul Ziegenhagen, 17 year old tenor of 8045 South Laflin street, another entrant, is president of the student council of the Fox Secretarial college. He says that to be a soloist of note is his ambition. He studies with Harry Pearson and is a member of the South Shore Male chorus.

Soprano Enters Again.

Entering the festival vocal competion for the second time is Miss Jeannette Muriel Poulsen, 25 year old soprano, of 7250 Langley avenue. She writes on her entry blank: "Two years ago my uncle, Johannes Poulsen, director of the Royal theater of Copenhagen, Denmark, was passing through Chicago on his way home to Denmark after a performance of 'Everyman' in the Rose Bowl at Hollywood. During his stay here I had the privilege of singing for him and his remarks were so kind that it was though advisable to devote my entire time to training my voice.

Paul Ziegenhagen.

HOME BUILDERS TO LEARN WHAT $5,000 CAN BUY

National Exposition Has Reply to Question.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

"How can I get more house for my money?"

"How can I get a better house?"

"How can I modernize or remodel the house I have and know that the equipment and the materials I put into it are the best that 1938 offers?"

"How much house can I build for $5,000 or $6,000? What sort of house will $4,000 build?"

Answers to these and hundreds of similar questions will be given at the National House and Garden exposition which opens next Saturday at the Coliseum in Chicago.

Clarification will be available on a host of problems confronting the family ambitious to build a small home, or to sensibly improve the home it already has.

If we had $50,000 we feel sure that we could turn out quite a magnificent home, complete in every detail and completely satisfying. But, it is the pocket with a budget that can swing a house under $6,000 which is most frequently found.

What Owner Can Buy.

And the questions asked on every side right now concern this type of house. Over and over again you hear: "I could afford a home if I could build it for around $5,000, but just what sort of home would it be? Will it have modern electrical equipment, central heating, good plumbing, and wiring? And good equipment? Can a house be well built at that price? I don't want a house full of omissions or leaks. I want a good home and the necessities of good living in my house—or I don't want any house at all."

The house exposition at the Coliseum is prepared to help the would-be home owner and the would-be home modernizer by offering case studies in home values, materials, and equipment.

In case studies of actual construction there will be models of homes costing $3,000 and less. There also will be an interesting façade of a house in the much discussed $5,000 class.

Fireplace Adds $175.

It is a house which is now under construction in Palos Heights for a Chicago family. It is costing, to be definite, some $5,175. The family wanted a fireplace—hence the extra $175.

The plans for the house have been carefully drawn by the architect, Edwin H. James, 111 West Washington boulevard, in order to keep it within the prescribed budget.

It is a two story five room home. [Two story houses cost less to build than bungalows.]

Its cubic content is small; some 13,000 cubic feet, but it offers an attached garage with storage space at the back; two bedrooms on the second floor, with overall of 11 feet by 15 feet 4 inches, and 11½ feet by 11 feet, respectively; the living room, 15 feet by 16 feet.

It has no basement, but a warm air heater between living room and kitchen, which is oil fueled. Elimination of basement saves several hundred dollars. And the family has automatic, effortless heat.

Floors Are Hardwood.

It has certain high lights of interest to prospective builders because its cubic content has been kept small and no square foot of overall wasted!

It is an English cottage type home of half timber and brick, with asphalt shingle roof. It's walls and ceilings are insulated. All its floors hardwood, except in bath and kitchen, where inlaid linoleum is used. Its kitchen is planned and equipped as a modern workshop, with adequate wiring for electrical conveniences and equipment, modern lighting and sink under window. Its plumbing is modern with built-in tub and shower in bath.

Other displays will take the prospective builder and modernizer through the entire house building program, from the time he starts to look for his lot, to the day he moves into his new renovated home.

Labor Saving Devices.

Still other displays will stress home equipment and labor saving devices, from kitchens that work for you with their work saving ranges and refrigerators, water heaters, and dishwashing sinks, to basements that provide automatic heat with gas, oil or stoker firing, provision for year round air conditioning, games rooms, and weatherproof walls, modern laundry rooms with modern decorations and equipment, storage spaces, and so on.

New solutions of the home lighting and wiring problems will be stressed.

Building material firms will feature different materials and construction methods available at the present time. There is no one method of construction, no one material that can be said to have any monopoly on the solution of the modern cost house problem.

ALD. W. L. DAWSON LEADS BY 237 IN PRIMARY BALLOT

Count of Congress Vote Shows Victory.

Ald. William L. Dawson [2d] won the 1st district Republican congressional nomination in the April 13 primary by 237 votes, according to the official canvass of the returns completed last week.

Dawson polled 4,577 votes, as against 4,340 for Louis B. Anderson, former alderman, who had challenged the early returns showing Dawson to be victor, on the ground that his own organization's tally immediately following the primary gave him the winning margin.

Oscar De Priest, former congressman from the district, ran third in the Republican race with 4,059 votes. Roscoe Conkling Simmons, Negro orator, who seconded President Hoover's first nomination, got 1,703, and Attorney Benjamin W. Clayton, 253. The candidates finished in the order their names appeared on the ballot.

On the Democratic side in the same district Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell was renominated by an overwhelming plurality. His official total was 16,995 votes, as compared with 1,132 for James P. Durden and 2,703 for Augustus L. Williams. This year for the first time all the 1st district congressional candidates were Negroes.

Official tallies for other southwest side districts are:

Fourth—Democratic: Congressman Harry P. Beam, 31,537; Stanislaus E. Basinski, 15,759; John Zukorski, 5,284; Kazmer Moczarski, 2,434. Republican: Dominic M. Janec Jr., 3,256; A. J. Gorman, 2,115. [This was the smallest Republican primary vote in the 4th district since 1918, when only 2,752 G. O. P. ballots were counted.]

NEW PLAY UNIT LISTS COMEDIES FOR FLOSSMOOR

"The Pot Boiler," plus "The Will o' the Wisp," plus "Two Crooks and a Lady," will equal the first Thespian efforts of the newly organized Flossmoor Community Players Saturday and Sunday evening, May 21 and 22, in the Flossmoor Community house. The series of one-act plays also will be staged at a matinée performance Saturday afternoon, May 21.

All three plays will be directed by Dorothy Richardson Buell, former faculty member of the Columbia School of Expression. The cast of "The Pot Boiler," will include Richard Maloney, Robert Nicholson, Henry Ingwerson, Helen Ely Charlton, former member of the Masques and Comedy club of the University of Michigan, and Kenneth Shankland.

Taking part in "Two Crooks and a Lady," will be Betty Henderson, Charles Henning, Edna Ramsay, Genevieve Henning, Harry Owen, and Charles Kane. Members of the "Will o' the Wisp" cast are Angeline Dursema, organizer of the Community Players of Bismark, N. D.: Evelyn Reeve, Katherine Clair, and Charlotte Bierbaum.

Heading the production staf will be Franklin Barber, scenic designer of the Blackfrairs at the University of Chicago as technical advisor and Richard Buell, general manager. Assisting them will be Miss Duresma, Mr. Maloney, Fred Bright, Robert E. Zinn, Douglas Hall, Dorothy Strawbridge, Gladys Senn, Miss Ramsay, Betty McGillivray, Helen Maloney, Miss Bierbaum, Margaret Anderson, Miss Charlton, Emma Barber, and Ellen Zinn.

RECOUNT IS SEEN IN BALLOT FOR COMMITTEEMAN

Close Margin Shown in Two Districts.

Recounts of the Republican returns for state central committeeman in two of the ten Cook county congressional districts appeared likely last week when the results of the official canvass of the April 13 primary vote were announced.

In the Eighth district the Republican incumbent, Elliodor M. Libonati polled 1,242 votes, according to the official tally, which gives him a margin of only three votes over his only rival, Benjamin F. Chmielewski, whom Libonati defeated by a two-to-one plurality two years before.

In the Tenth district, which includes Lake county, the present Republican committeeman, Thomas J. Houston of Chicago won over his nearest rival in a field of seven, Samuel J. Lasaine of Waukegan, 17,169 to 11,426. Lasaine said last week that he contemplated seeking a recount of the Republican ballots in Cook county, where he was given a total of only 505 votes, on the ground that test checks of various precincts revealed glaring discrepancies.

Dist.	Democrat.	Republican.
1.	*John Coughlin	Cornelia Pickett
2.	James Sullivan	*Clement Nance
3.	*David Hickey	*Lester Norris
4.	*Patrick McGuire	Henry Harris
5.	*Leo Slaski	Ben Schwartz
6.	*Richard Sullivan	*John Tyrrell
7.	*Joseph Higgins	*Charles Sampson
8.	*Stephen Carynski	*Elliodor Libonati
9.	*Edmond Mulcahy	*Arthur Dehmlow
10.	*John Dougherty	*Thomas Houston

State central committeemen are elected, not merely nominated, in the primaries. One Republican and one Democrat is picked for each congressional district.

Church Reunion.

The annual confirmand reunion of Tabor Lutheran church, 80th street and Escanaba avenue, will be held at 4 o'clock next Sunday afternoon. Confirmands of classes from 1902 to 1938 will gather for their yearly social meeting and program.

Gentlemen:
The Chicago Tribune deserves a special vote of praise and appreciation for the splendid results we received through the Metropolitan section of the Sunday, March 27th, edition.
Our 7 column advertisement, announcing the opening of Turner Bros' newly remodeled store for men, accounted for the largest crowds of customers that ever jammed into our store during 38 years of business.
This is an impressive proof that good merchandise, honestly priced and presented, needs only the right advertising medium to receive wide buying acceptance. Apparently, the Chicago Tribune IS the right advertising medium.
Very truly yours,

WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

VESPER SONGS TO GIRDLE CITY THIS SUMMER

45 Choruses to Sing in Forest Preserve.

Bishop Stewart Praises.

Bishop George Craig Stewart of the Chicago diocese of the Episcopal church says: "The Forest Choral Vesper Series proposed seems to me a most excellent plan and I think the whole community should feel under deep obligation to the choruses which have volunteered to participate."

The letter from Helen Howe, director of music in the Chicago public schools, reads: "In the warm summer evenings comes a pause in the week's occupations of congested city life, in the coolness of the Sunday Forest Twilight Choral hour. What could be more fitting than an opportunity such as this for bringing Chicago's tired people close to the beauties and realities of nature."

Hears America Singing.

Mrs. Margaret H. Tyler, past president of the Ohio Society of Women and chairman of vocal and choral contests for the Tribune Chicagoland Music Festival, says:

The series of Twilight Choral concerts sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE with the coöperation of the board of commissioners of Cook county, which will begin July 3 in five forest preserve parks neighboring the city, has received laudatory comments from educators, church heads and musicians. The general comments summarized say that the series promises to be one of the finest contributions to music appreciation ever attempted.

NEW LIGHT SHED ON ELECTION BY OFFICIAL COUNT

BY EDWARD WILSON.

The official canvass of votes cast in the recent primary election, completed last week by the board of election commissioners and County Clerk Michael Flynn, revealed several sidelights in south and southwest side state senatorial district elections that did not show in the first returns.

One of the outstanding renominations on the south side was that of State Senator Daniel A. Serritella, Republican, 1st district. James H. Pricer, an attorney and Serritella's chief opponent, received only 543 votes to Serritella's 2,085. Early reports in the campaign gave Pricer a better chance.

In the 3d district the outstanding fact was the renomination of Representative George Garry Noonan, Democrat, who received 28,680 votes, while his closest opponent, Thomas Elsworth Towles, received 3,659. Noonan is a Nash-Kelly man, while Towles was campaigning with the Horner slate.

Jenkins Easy Winner.

On the Republican side in the 3d district, Representative Charles J. Jenkins received 11,771 votes and Attorney A. Andrew Torrence received the second nomination with 6,637 votes. Representative Richard A. Harewood, defeated by Torrence, was in fourth place with 3,848 votes.

In the 4th district on the Democratic side, Representatives John C. Kluckzynski and James P. Boyle, both Nash-Kelly candidates, were renominated with a large plurality over their Horner opponent, Leonard Wolniak.

In the 5th district, James Weber Linn, candidate on the Horner ticket for Democratic representative nomination, rolled up the largest count with 44,682 votes, while Representative Louis G. Berman, the Nash-Kelly candidate, received 39,185. Two Democrats were nominated.

Indicates Fall Fight.

The official figures in the 7th district indicate a serious fight for senatorial nomination will be made there in the fall. Senator Charles F. Baumrucker, Democrat, was renominated with 31,989 votes, against Ralph E. Sinsheimer, his opponent. Arthur Bidwill, Republican, was nominated by 23,054 votes, against 17,129 cast for Frank Foster.

Bidwill and Baumrucker are old enemies. Bidwill was elected senator in 1934 and was unseated by Baumrucker in Springfield. The total Democratic votes cast for senatorial nominations was 53,740, while 40,183 were cast on the Republican side. Many of the Republicans claim that Republican votes went to the Democratic side to aid in reëlecting Judge Jarecki.

In the 13th district State Senator Francis J. Loughran, a Nash-Kelly man, received 33,474 votes to defeat his Horner opponent, John J. Sullivan, who got 19,614. A Horner victory was recorded in the district by the nomination of Adam S. Mioduski with 66,800 votes against 66,659 cast for Representative John G. Ryan, a Nash-Kelly candidate. Representative William W. Powers, Democrat, was renominated with 80,509 votes.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, May 9.

Planting of the more tender things may begin after May 20, for frost is not probable after that date. Repot ferns if it has not been done. Use a soil containing leaf mold and rich garden loam. Give good drainage. Syringe often to assure good health. If a fern becomes badly infested with white scale it is best to discard it and get a new plant. The Boston fern is a favorite, but the holly fern is equally desirable. More interest is being shown in cacti as house plants. They are among the finest of all plants, requiring the minimum of attention. See that they have good drainage and plenty of sand with the soil.

Tuesday, May 10.

Melons should be planted after the 25th. Give a well drained, sunny location. Currant worms can be killed with arsenate of lead, but use pyrethrum or rotenone after the fruit has formed. Spray for the iris borer, using arsenate of lead and nicotine. Prune evergreens, especially hedges. Do not remove the foliage of daffodils until it has turned yellow, indicating that the bulbs have ripened. This applies to all spring bulbs. Get out the window boxes and repair and paint them. One of the best flowering plants for boxes is the rosy morn type of petunia. This plant has been adopted by several cities as the city flower because of its free flowering habit and the fact that nothing else is needed with it.

Wednesday, May 11.

Do not be too willing to mow newly sown lawns. Keep the knives not less than 1½ inches high to avoid too close cutting. Water the lawn only when it needs watering, and then do a thorough job of it. Keep all walks and beds edged, but do not make great channels when edging. Dig weeds by hand. When young plants are large enough to handle without difficulty see that they are thinned properly. Plants need room in which to develop if they are to produce many flowers. Sow vines along the wire fences that divide back yards.

Thursday, May 12.

Activity in the garden should be most intense at this time. The trellises should be in place, vines rapidly growing and trained properly, bird boxes hung or secured and occupied, shrubs fertilized, the beds cleanly edged; in fact, all plantations should be in proper order. The chances are that no injurious frosts will appear after next week, so that tender things can go into their permanent places.

Friday, May 13.

Tomato plants can be planted next week. Shade and a too rich soil are the cause of some plants not fruiting as abundantly as they should. The plants should be staked. When cutting gladiolus leave two or three leaves, otherwise the corms will not grow to a large size. Plant new lots about two weeks apart for succession. The hardy amaryllis [Lycorus hallii] may be planted now. The flowers come in August, after the leaves die down. Plant four inches deep.

Saturday, May 14.

The prevailing idea that ants are injurious to peony buds is erroneous. The ants seek the sweet fluid which is found in the buds. They may carry the spores of bud rot from one plant to another, causing an infestation that is injurious. Moss usually appears in lawns that are neglected. To affect a remedy, see that there is good drainage, rake out the moss, and give a top dressing with a soil containing about one-seventh lime. Sow a lawn mixture that contains some clover seed.

Hit-or-miss diet blamed for terrier's diarrhea, listlessness

Dr. J. R. S______, who treated this fox terrier, says: "My professional friends are gravely concerned over the number of dogs we see that have been wrongly fed. Actually, 9 out of 10 ailments we treat can be traced to hit-or-miss feeding or nutritionally deficient dog rations!"

In their crusade against incorrect dog diets, many leading veterinarians are suggesting Pard as a safe solution to the problem. Pard was developed by years of intensive research in Swift & Company's biological laboratories. It has been thoroughly tested—has served as an exclusive diet for four successive generations of splendidly healthy dogs.

The Pard formula is based on fresh beef meat food products, combined with seven other choice ingredients in the proportions necessary to give your dog the food elements he needs. To safeguard his health and keep him always in good condition, feed him Pard regularly.

NEW FACES, IDEAS NEEDED TO BREAK RADIO MONOTONY

Sponsors Little Inclined to Experiment.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Now that summer replacements for the big night time shows are being announced, it is a good time to take stock of the year's achievements. In the development of program ideas and personalities the year has been barren. More and more sponsors are showing a reluctance to fool with anything that has not been thoroughly tried—they use the word "tested." There have been more serials than ever on the air this year—and sillier. It's getting so now that most of the releases that come from networks or sponsors start out "for the fourteenth consecutive year," etc.

One result of this refusal to experiment even a little has been an increasingly monotonous fare for listeners. Now another one is becoming apparent. With so few new programs or personalities launched those most eminently successful are constantly upping their prices. Amos 'n' Andy hiked their asking price to $7,500 a week — and got it, $3,500 more than they were drawing. George Burns recently demanded—and will get next fall—$12,000 a week, a 50 per cent boost. Eddie Cantor is said to have boosted his fee substantially in making a recent shift in sponsors.

All Cannot Afford This.

In addition to the expensive comedians there have been super-collossal shows all winter from Hollywood costing as much for talent weekly as $20,000 and over. [Advertising agencies have been encouraging such lavish expenditures for Hollywood names, because in many — possibly most—instances these entertainers are booked through the agencies netting them fancy fees in addition to those drawn from placing of time on the air.]

But since few sponsors can afford such fabulous figures [and with business receding throughout the last season] there has been a pronounced disposition to go for the less expensive amateur, question and answer, and contest type programs. In their simplest form these require only a "professor" to ask the questions. Teams of contestants from all manner of business and industrial concerns, night clubs, schools, and clubs are available free in return for a good plug on the air.

Major Bowes Started It.

The quiz program that has become so popular really owes it all to Major Bowes, who most vividly demonstrated—four years ago—that ordinary folk drawn from the listening audience can be entertaining. [Incidentally Major Bowes' amateurs still draw higher ratings in the listening surveys than any other of the interview type programs.]

Some interesting quiz programs have been pitched up this year. Kay Kyser's Musical Klass is one. It successfully combines the ask-me-another business with music, a wrinkle that had not been exploited before. The man-on-the-street programs are still legion [and many of them have become deadly]. The mystery drama contests, in which listeners endeavor to settle who-dun-it, seem to be blooming again, one of these being, "You, the Unseen Jury." The show to replace Jack Benny for the summer, "What Would You Have Done?" has a slant along this line.

The sponsor of Kay Kyser's Klass has shown a little more willingness to test new ideas than most. Over a period of years this tobacco concern has been quite venturesome. This year, in addition to continuing its Hit Parade, it tried out a clambake in the Hollywood tradition, then experimented with Kay Kyser, then replaced the Hollywood show with him, and played around with another one called Melody Puzzles.

One encouraging aspect of the year has been the willingness of a few sponsors to underwrite broadcasts with real public service features, such as Wallace's Get Thin to Music, the Court of Missing Heirs [and other programs in which missing persons are sought].

Vallee Well Gone Dry?

This has been the leanest season for Rudy Vallee in his decade of broadcasting. Every season he has brought forth some potent new name, Eddie Cantor, Bob Burns and Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy being among those who sprung to radio fame from his variety hour. Best Vallee has been able to do this year is Tommy Riggs and Betty Lou.

There seems to be too little done in the way of talent and idea hunting by broadcasters. NBC claims it gets about 7,000 new program scripts each year; that most of these are read, but few prove of value. They also audition about 500 would-be entertainers each month. Few of these are elected.

Celebrate 500th Broadcast

MORTON GOULD TO AIR SWING SYMPHONIETTE

One of America's most promising young composer-arrangers, Morton Gould, will offer another of his unusual musical melanges over W-G-N-Mutual from 7 to 7:30 p. m. Tuesday. The main melodic entrée is to be "American Symphoniette No. 2," an original composition which has won Gould much acclaim from the orchestral bigwigs of the land. Portions of this Symphoniette recently were performed by Fritz Reiner, conducting the Detroit Symphony.

REAL AMERICAN FLAVOR IN MAGIC KEY HOUR TODAY

Dr. Walter Damrosch, dean of American conductors, will lend a truly American flavor to the Magic Key of RCA program today when he conducts the NBC Symphony orchestra during the concert from 1 to 2 p. m. over WENR-NBC.

The program also will mark the first of a series of fourteen broadcasts from Latin America by Linton Wells, Magic Key roving reporter, who left New York on Easter Sunday for a three month tour of South and Central America. Wells will speak from Managua, capital of Nicaragua.

Dr. Damrosch has programmed for the Magic Key concert Goldmark's "Overture to Spring," the Allegretto from Brahms' Symphony No. 2, Adagio in C Minor for String Orchestra by Lekeu, Honegger's "Pacific 231," Chasins' "Parade," and the fourth movement from "Radio Station WGZBX," by Philip James, first prize winner in the NBC orchestral awards contest of 1932 for the best original symphonic work by an American musician.

Jan Peerce, tenor, and Henrietta Schumann, concert pianist, will be soloists with the Music Hall Symphony orchestra at noon today over WENR-NBC. Peerce will sing "O Paradiso," from Meyerbeer's "L'Africaine," and Miss Schumann will play the second and third movements of Tschaikowsky B-Flat Minor Concerto. The orchestra, directed by Erno Rapee, will be heard in Handel's "Water Music" and Ravel's "Alborada del Gracioso."

Rachel Carley will sing "It's Raining Sunshine" and the French song "Pour Etre Heureux" during the Manhattan Merry-Go-Round at 8 o'clock this evening over WMAQ-NBC. Pierre Le Kreun, tenor, will be heard in "Cathedral in the Pines" and will join Miss Carley in "On the Sentimental Side." The orchestra and the Men About Town will offer "A Montparnesse, a Montparno," "Un Bon Movement," and "Eleanora."

They Sing

Annette King, young contralto heard on NBC Breakfast club and Saturday night Family Party series on WLS-NBC.

Tiny Judy Starr, who brightens the Harold Kemp Time to Shine show at 9 o'clock Tuesday evenings on WBBM-CBS.

Sally Eilers Will Play Opposite Power Tonight

Sally Eilers will be the leading lady in the Hollywood Playhouse production over WENR-NBC at 8 p. m., playing opposite Tyrone Power in a radio adaptation of the motion picture, "Walking on Air."

Government in Art.

George Thorp, state director of the federal arts project in Illinois, and Hubert C. Heffner, professor of dramatic literature at Northwestern, will be the participants on the Northwestern university reviewing stand at 10:15 a. m. on W-G-N. Their subject will be "Government in Art."

LESTER, SINGING PHOTOGRAPHER, ON STOKES SHOW

Popular music in the manner of Harold Stokes and the W-G-N dance orchestra and soloists will be offered W-G-N listeners on three programs this week. Two will be presented today, the major offering being "Your Sunday Date" from the audience studio at 9:30 p. m. On Wednesday "Melodies from the Sky" will be broadcast from the audience studio from 9:30 to 10:15 p. m.

At 2:15 today Stokes and the orchestra will be heard in the regular "On a Sunday Afternoon" program but this broadcast is not presented before an audience.

On "Your Sunday Date" tonight Gene Lester, the Singing Photographer, will make a guest appearance. Gene for three years had programs of his own on eastern stations, principally in Worcester, Mass., and New York. A year ago Gene found he could make more money taking candid camera photographs of radio personalities as they broadcast than he could as a singer. Then came the idea of appearing as a soloist on broadcasts and making pictures, too.

During the last year Gene has appeared on the Fred Allen show, the Jack Haley program, Hollywood Hotel, the last commercial series of Eddy Duchin, and the George Jessel program over W-G-N-Mutual. On "Your Sunday Date" Gene will offer "With a Smile and a Song" from "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs."

Arthur Wright, tenor, and Edna O'Dell, songstress, also will be heard on the program in solo selections. Wright will dedicate his tune to mothers on the occasion of Mothers' day, his song being "Little Mother of Mine," while Miss O'Dell will be heard on "An Error in the News."

Charley [Upside Down] Wilson, the tongue tied "sportscaster," will reenact the Kentucky Derby. Another new comedy personage will also be introduced by Maestro Stokes.

"On a Sunday Afternoon" at 2:15 p. m. will present the dance orchestra, Lawrence Salerno, baritone, and the Three Graces, W-G-N girls' trio. "Melodies from the Sky" will feature Phylis Norton, soprano, in a special swing medley of popular tunes. The "Opportunity Knocks" artists will be Jack Burym singing "I Can Dream, Can't I?" and Babs Bernard in "It's Wonderful."

Man Who Went to Coast in Trunk on Air Today

Charles Loeb, who shipped himself to Hollywood from Ohio in a trunk, and Hugh Herbert, who has been amusing the motion picture and radio audiences Loeb wants to reach, will be guests of Feg Murray during the "Seein' Stars" portion of the broadcast with Ozzie Nelson's orchestra and Harriet Hilliard at 6:30 p. m. over WLS-NBC.

THE GUMPS
YES, MY BOY, WHEN I WAS YOUR AGE, I LEARNED MY LESSONS SO FAST THE TEACHERS HAD TO SEND ME HOME FROM SCHOOL FOR MONTHS AT A TIME TILL THEY CAUGHT UP TO ME
GEE, THIS IS THE TOUGHEST ARITHMETIC EXAMPLE I EVER HAD- I'LL ASK PAPA TO HELP ME. HE'S THE SMARTEST MAN IN THE WORLD
PAPA, WILL YOU PLEASE HELP ME WITH THIS PROBLEM? I CAN'T SEEM TO DO IT
THAT'S RIGHT, MY BOY - ALWAYS COME TO YOUR FATHER WHEN YOU WANT THE CORRECT SOLUTION TO ANYTHING
IF I DON'T HAVE THE RIGHT ANSWER TO THAT EXAMPLE TOMORROW, MY TEACHER SAID, SHE'LL KEEP ME IN ALL RIGHT, SON - I'LL HAVE THE CORRECT SOLUTION IN A JIFFY
DO YOU MEAN TO SAY A BIG BOY LIKE YOU IS STUCK BY SUCH A SIMPLE PROBLEM?
WELL, IT'S EASY FOR YOU 'CAUSE YOU'RE SMART
M-M-M NOW RUN ALONG FOR A FEW MINUTES AND PAPA WILL FIGURE IT OUT FOR YOU
I'LL HAVE TO DO THIS QUICKLY, AS I WANT MY BOY TO KEEP ON THINKING THAT HIS DAD CAN DO ANYTHING FASTER AND BETTER THAN ANYONE ELSE IN THE WORLD
H-M-M-M — LET ME SEE -
NO — THAT'S WRONG!
THE FELLOW WHO THOUGHT UP THIS PROBLEM MUST HAVE HAD A GRUDGE AGAINST THE HUMAN RACE - I'LL GET THE RIGHT ANSWER OR DIE IN THE ATTEMPT!
ARE YOU FINISHED YET, PAPA?
FINISHED YET? WHAT DO YOU MEAN BY WASTING YOUR FATHER'S VALUABLE TIME WITH SUCH A SIMPLE LITTLE PROBLEM? NOW YOU JUST GET YOUR OWN BRAIN WORKING, AND WHEN YOU HAVE THE RIGHT ANSWER, BRING IT TO ME!!
GOSH, PAPA, YOU SAID YOU'D HELP ME!
I AM GOING TO HELP YOU — TO BE SELF-RELIANT
IT'S A LUCKY THING FOR THE BOY THAT I DIDN'T GIVE HIM THE RIGHT ANSWER - MENTAL EXERCISE IS THE BEST THING IN THE WORLD FOR CHILDREN - NEVER LET IT BE SAID THAT ANDREW GUMP STOPPED HIS SON FROM THINKING FOR HIMSELF

Baseball Blues.

This fellow was an ardent fan. One day last year his enthusiasm got the best of him and he bet several of his friends that his favorite team would win a certain important game. But the other team knocked 'em all over the lot. It couldn't happen, but it did. And when the friends came to collect this fan came to us. He pawned a wonderful gypsy ring with a 1¼ Ct. Blue White diamond. We can sell it now for....$145

Design for Living.

This architect designed homes—he also worked out a design for his future by putting part of his boom-time income into diamonds. "This feverish activity won't last forever," he reasoned. Smart man. When others were hard hit by lack of construction he turned diamonds into cash and stayed in business. We offer a few of them far below actual value:

All Platinum diamond dinner ring set with 19 diamonds, center diamond about 1 Ct. interset with 6 Blue Sapphires. Will liquidate for....$165

2.58 CT. DIAMOND, Blue White, Fine American Cut [imperfect] set in gent's all platinum gypsy ring. Will liquidate for....$245

2.08 CT. DIAMOND, Blue White Wesselton Perfect Gem, set in a lady's all platinum neatly designed tailored ring with baguette and round diamonds. Will liquidate for....$525

Signed for Friend.

"I'm in a jam, Bill," said his friend. "But I can get the money I need at once if you sign the note, too. Of course I'll pay up long before the due date. You're taking no chance at all." And big-hearted Bill signed. Later had to pawn jewelry to meet about three-fourths of the note or lose his job on a garnishment. "Never again," said Bill. And never again, perhaps, can we offer such a fine 1 Ct. Blue White square cut diamond in lady's all platinum ring with 2 triangular shaped diamonds for....$100

What Price Education.

If sons and daughters only knew how often parents sacrifice to put them through school they would surely double their efforts to make a good showing. We know one case where Dad had reverses and Mother gave up some of her loveliest pieces of jewelry so two boys could graduate. And all credit to them—they came through with honors. This all-platinum flexible bracelet set with 65 large Blue-White diamonds could not be redeemed. It can be yours for....$185

He Was No Angel.

In theatrical parlance an angel is an "outside" financial backer. This producer backed his own shows most of the time. He always had money because he always had diamonds. But they weren't always the same diamonds. A poor show or an expensive production often made it difficult for him to redeem. Here are several wonderful values he left with us:

10 Ct. Star Ruby, Pigeon Blood Color set in gent's all platinum, neatly designed gypsy ring with 4 fancy shaped diamonds. Can be bought for only..$200

THE TRUE STORY!

WONDER LAKE

NATURE'S BEAUTY SPOT,
4 Miles from McHenry, Ill.

A Group of
SPORTSMEN

Bought practically ALL 12 miles of shoreline around this magnificent wooded Spring-fed Sand-Bottomed Lake, just 50 miles northwest of Chicago. Then they:

[1] Stocked this lake with 5,000,000 Bass and Pike and prohibited fishing for 3 years, so the fish would grow and breed under ideal conditions. [Fishing officially opened at Wonder Lake September, 1934.]

[2] Set aside 60 acres as a permanent pheasant cover and hunting grounds for owners.

[3] Made the lake STRICTLY PRIVATE, so only owners could fish or hunt.

[4] Refused to sell property further than 1½ to 2 blocks from the water.

[5] Set aside great big sand beaches with piers every ¼ mile so there would always BE MORE than ample beach facilities for children, grown-ups, and boat landings.

[6] Priced the property so low that every one—even ordinary wage earners—could afford a country home.

[7] Arranged financing terms on homes so low that the yearly cost is less than a season's rental for a cottage elsewhere.

[9] Made it an exclusive GENTILE community.

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farms

By Bob Becker

Spring Flower Show

May 7, 1938.

WHEN the wild crab apple trees, and the flowering haw get together on a schedule for opening their blossoms the farm presents a colorful May flower show that is as beautiful as it is fragrant. When we walked over the Du Page county farm early in the week we found that this eagerly awaited show was on.

You could close your eyes in the woodlot north of the big pond and still know that it was May and the wild crab apples and the haws were partners in the flower show, because the fragrance was wafted a long distance down wind. To see and enjoy the many flowering trees that are in this part of the farm is to believe that nature must have done her planting years ago with a definite plan in mind.

There are some oaks in and near this heavy stand of haws and wild crab apple trees. And we know of one or two wild cherry trees there. But the flowering crabs and haws have this corner of the farm pretty much to themselves, as if nature had planned this area with the idea of making a beautiful display at this season of the year.

During the last few days the hawthorns dropped many of their blossoms when strong winds swept over the farm, so the woodland flower show has lost some of its brilliance. The wild crab apples have proved that they hold their flowers a little longer than the haws, but they, too, are starting to fade.

Warblers Pay Visit.

This corner of the farm with the many haw and apple trees was unusually attractive because the warbler migration had brought hundreds of these small birds to the farm. When looking at the flowering trees we could see the richly colored birds flitting through the foilage on their hunt for insects. From one of the low haw trees came the song of a catbird that doubtless is going to nest in a thicket nearby. And on a gentle slope we could see violets.

Here was everything that the outdoor lover would associate with a delightful spring day in the country . . . the delicate pink and snow white blossoms of flowering trees, birds that wintered in the tropics now joyously singing on their way to nesting grounds, and a carpet of spring flowers spread beneath the trees.

Almost as dazzling as the display of flowering trees on the farm is the showing of wild flowers in the south woods. We have been watching the growth of shrubs and plants in this particular stand of oak timber for many weeks, so we had some idea of what to expect. But even our expectations have been exceeded, for practically the entire floor of the woods is covered with thousands of purple trilliums, blue phlox, violets, wild geraniums, and anemones. Around the edge of this patch of woods there is a fringe of honeysuckle bushes which are providing their pink blossoms as a sort of frame for the whole woodland picture of wildflowers and tree blossoms.

Phlox Steals Show.

The wild phlox is just about stealing the show on the farm. There are places in the woods where these beautiful flowers make a regular waving carpet of blue. The sky violets have just as much color as the phlox, but they keep their heads close to the ground and naturally do not catch the eye as quickly as the phlox, which stands 9 to 12 inches high. In spite of the great number of wild flowers and tree blossoms on the farm, the bees do not seem nearly as numerous as usual. On all of our walks we have seen only a few noisy bumble bees, and not one honey bee have we noticed except in the east woods where a few were visiting the blossoms on wild plum trees.

One of the farm mysteries this spring is the failure of two horse chestnut trees to display any sort of a blossom. There are four of these trees on the farm, but only two of them are blooming.

Wife Gives Helpful Hints on How to Make Marriage Successful

By Doris Blake.

Some time ago there was printed in this column a letter from a wife who accused her husband of brutality. Not physical brutality, according to the report, but mental cruelty. The wife reported that he was stingy, although admitting that the man's income was reduced. She told that even right after marriage she saw signs of irritability in the man and a domineering spirit. She threatened to get a separation, but when the papers were served the man got down on bended knees and begged forgiveness. For six months his behavior was excellent and then, the wife reported, he reverted to his old habits. The money situation in the household being a difficult one, according to the wife, she threatened to go out and get a job, at mention of which the man became furious and his worst traits again came to the fore.

That was the woman's side of the story. Rarely, if ever, is there only one side to the tales of marital discord. When a woman writes she never tells of her own conduct which often, on investigation, proves to be the real reason for a man's emotional outbreaks. We do not say that the particular conclusion applies to this woman who wrote. Nevertheless, one married woman reading the complaint felt moved to write and offer a few helpful suggestions, not only for her, but for others in marriage or about to join the marital group. Mrs. M. E. writes:

"In reference to Mrs. L.'s letter appearing in a recent column, I feel moved to put down a few thoughts.

"We always are sorry to hear of marital discord, especially where children are concerned. In the case mentioned the husband is 12 years older than the wife. How much better to marry some one nearer one's own age. Physicians and psychiatrists agree that chances of marriage success are greater between more evenly matched married couples. The woman at 29 is younger every way than the man at 41, regardless of his claim to a young spirit. He knows this and this makes the difference.

"The best advice for a disagreeing married couple is for them to visit together a marriage clinic or a psychiatrist, a judge or the family doctor. Bad dispositions and unruly ways are a 'symptom.' If the husband will not consent, let the wife go alone.

"Constant threats of 'I am going to leave, I am going to get a job' should not and must not be the overhanging pall of a household. It gives the children an uncertainty which they carry through life. In other words, it makes life difficult for them.

"I have known many women who conquered a situation of this kind by studying the man's whims, and really humoring his peculiarities.

"Of course there are cases in which a man drinks terribly. Drunkenness is a sort of insanity. And I believe a woman should not take abuse from a drunkard. In the case under discussion there is nothing said about either of these vices, so they probably are nonexistent.

"Men are not as pliable characters as are women, and if marriage is successful the woman must do the adjusting. In this case, this wife does not understand life. She says the man is domineering and cranky. She should understand these things mean an inferiority complex and she should try to help the husband get over this feeling; also to know that all people possess some sadism and enjoy berating others. If she could understand that he and others who do this sort of thing are getting pleasure, then she could just say, 'I am glad he is getting a little pleasure.'

"I am not a confirmed letter writer, and this is the first letter of the kind I have ever written. My age is 46 and I am a married woman. I know that your column is widely read. I believe you can do a great good if you forever hammer home these things:

"Marry some one around your own age.

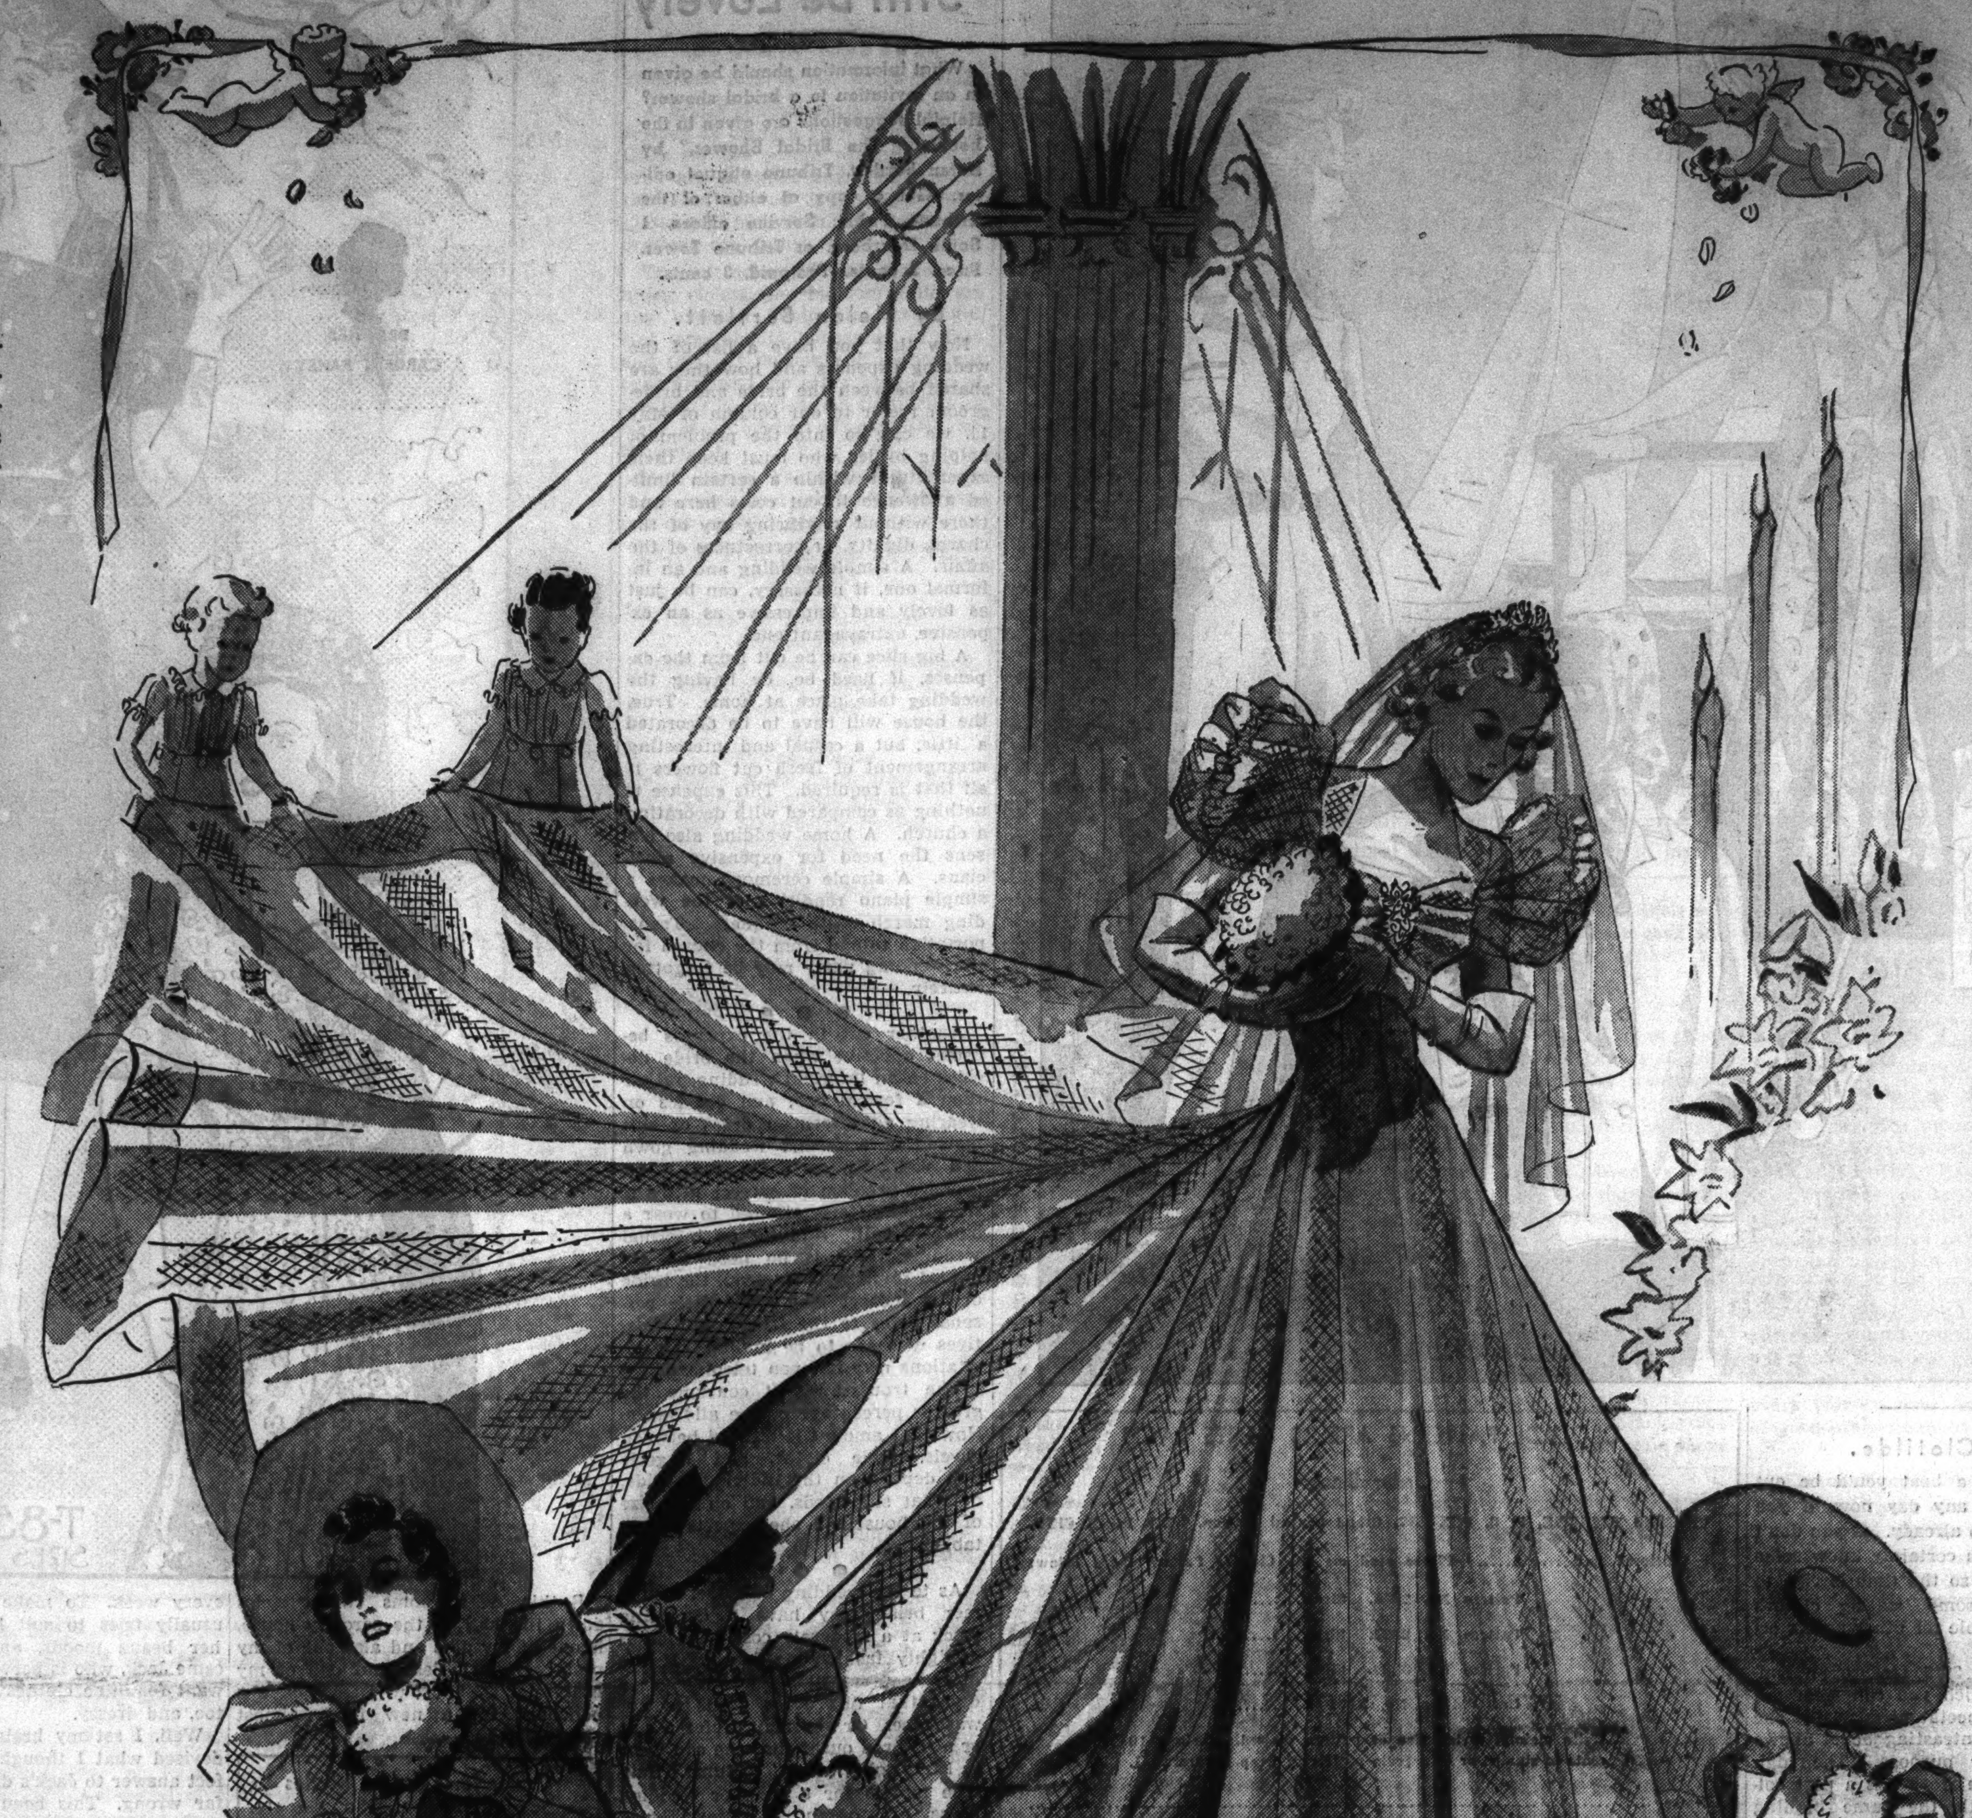
"Know each other one full year.

"Make out a budget before you marry and let it be understood how much money can be spent.

"Also write with all your might, Miss Blake, about tainted families marrying. The person one marries should have good health. No one can take the responsibilities of married life half sick. Feeble-mindedness and insanity are carried from generation to generation.

"Love, but be sure you love what is lovely.

"We are today living closer to people than ever before. Stress and strain are greater. The man who meets the world should have plenty of help at home, so encourage the wives to go 90 per cent of the way. I have been a school teacher and a social worker, and I have seen and known plenty of bitterness. This woman who sees her husband as stingy should try to measure him against his income. He may have an inadequate income and this burns his soul more than it does hers. Also, she can enjoy freely the greatest things of life which are really free, nature's sun, air, and the great outdoors."—Mrs. M. E.



Airy, crisp and cool, white point d'esprit fashions the lovely wedding gown, with an exceptionally long and wide train, the trail stiffened slightly with a band of horsehair. Matching in princess silhouette are the bridesmaids' dresses of plain net, made with short puffed sleeves, basque bodices, and a narrow fluted frill around the hem. The mother of the bride wears a plaited chiffon costume with short bolero jacket accented with white. The costumes are described in detail in an adjoining column.

By Rhea Seeger.

Even though she floats on rosy clouds of romance the 1938 bride shops with eyes open for new colors, new wedding plans, unusual bridal costumes, flattering lingerie, alluring negligées, and with a practical flair for quality combined with price marks that will not shatter the allowance for such important loot. Whether she shops hampered with an undernourished budget or with the unlimited cash supply of a feminine croesus, there are lovely finds for all. And the possessor of an in-between sum fares as well.

One store features complete trousseaux, from inexpensive to the skyhigh collections; you pay your money and take your choice. All the shops and stores are ready to plan your entire wedding pageant, small or large. Color schemes, materials, veils, gloves, and such important items as bridemaids' hats with a merciful low price tag are but a hint of what will be waiting for the slightly bewildered bride-to-be and her troubled relatives.

Because the wedding gowns and the bridesmaids' costumes are the most important part of a wedding pageant, not including the personal wardrobe of the bride, we sleuthed the town for brand new ideas. Summer garden weddings will be possible for extremely limited budgets, for some of the loveliest outfits feature organdy, exquisitely beautiful wedding gowns of this transparent stuff, and perfect bridesmaids' dresses in pastels that combine to make the picturesque wedding.

Nets, marquisettes, chiffons, and lace are also moderately priced, and if you insist upon gleaming white satin some of the best surprises imaginable come with low price marks and resplendent beauty. Wide swirling skirts make the bridesmaids' dresses practical as well as picturesque, for they can be worn all summer for ball gowns. Many of the wedding gowns are just as well designed with long sleeves and a train that is detachable.

Pink is a high fashion color. Some wedding gowns of 1938 are fashioned of clouds of misty pale pink tulle chiffon, net, or organdy. One of the most romantic of pink weddings was the Winterhalter wedding sponsored by the Chicago Fashion group in their spring fashion show. All the gowns were in shades of pink, ranging from pale to deep blush. Yards of net and sheer material were used for the exceedingly full flounced skirts and tiny bodices. Wide brimmed leghorn hats with old blue and pink velvet streamers, pink slippers, and pink bouquets completed the rosy hue.

Lace wedding gowns are traditional . . . clinging white or ivory made over satin or crêpe slips, pastel tinted lace bridesmaid dresses, and even the mother of the bride, graciously, a foil in dove gray or beige lace with broad brimmed hat and dark accessories.

We've sketched the net wedding. The same models can be ordered in other materials and all color schemes can be used. The bridal gown is of fine crisp point d'esprit. Clinging to the figure in slim princess lines, a dozen shaped panels flare widely around the lower edge and then spread in a very wide and long train. The underslip is of silk or satin.

A short veil of plain net or tulle is worn in either the palest tone of pink or blue. Long gloves can be used instead of the long detachable sleeves, or mitts with the net sleeves.

Bridesmaids' dresses are in plain net with the same high fitted bodice line, the same puffed short sleeves, and unbelted princess silhouette, and widely flared skirts. Around the edge of the skirt is a narrow band of plaited net. Wide brimmed straw hats, with colored velvet ribbon that descends to the floor, complete the outfits.

In the same soft, flattering materials the dress for the mother of the bride is of plaited chiffon with a short bolero jacket using white cuffs for contrast. Sapphire blue, navy, beige, gray, English violet, oyster white, and dark green are other colors that are contrasts for the wedding party. For an unusual change, small boys in white suits carry the long train of the bride, although bewitching little girl attendants in wide skirted net frocks with straw bonnets tied under the chin would make just as lovely a procession down the aisle.

Children Easily Hurt by Parents' Attitude to Each Other

By Gladys Huntington Bevans

[Copyright: 1938: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Most parents, and many who are not parents, must have followed with interest the case of the 12 year old boy who has, as the newspaper headline puts it, just won his fight to live with his father.

The facts, in brief, are that his parents were divorced in 1932 and that the boy lived with his father for five years until this December, when his mother found and claimed him and the court awarded the boy to her. The boy was so wretchedly unhappy and longed so for his father that he ran away on four occasions from his mother's home.

To the great joy of father and son, the boy was placed in his father's custody on the decision of Justice O'Brien of the Children's court in Brooklyn, who stated: "This is the most remarkable thing that has happened in the jurisprudence of this country. This case of a distressed little boy has moved the heart of a nation. His case has wound itself about the heartstrings of the courts of two states and all interests have been subjected to the welfare of the child."

But the thing that interests me most is this: That when the decision was rendered to award the child to his father and to allow his mother to see him one day a week, the parents and child were not then dismissed from the court. The judge, wise indeed, took another step for the welfare of the boy.

This was the step: Before the parents and child were dismissed they were taken into the judge's private chambers where he talked with them, obviously in an attempt to rob the situation of future bitterness or rancor for any one of the three.

But the formal written agreement definitely went further. It stated that neither the father nor the mother were to do anything to turn the mind of the child against the other parent, and that they were to "pledge themselves faithfully to avoid any unfavorable references by either of said parents to the child respecting the other parent."

What a wise provision necessary, indeed, for the welfare of the child—his mental, emotional, spiritual welfare! This boy is to be spared, if possible, the warping effect of the hatred, criticism, bitterness and partisanship that are too often expressed before children by a husband and wife who are at odds.

And such things are warping. If you think they leave children untouched you don't know much about the heart of a child. The tearing down of a father by a mother, or a mother by a father has a distressing and destructive effect.

And so I wish the agreement written by the court for the separated father and mother of this 12 year old to sign might be written larger for all to see and signed in intent by those who need it.

And my statement doesn't refer to divorced and separated parents only. I have some touching letters from fathers in that connection and I am going to write a later article on that. But it's about parents who are living together that I want to talk today—men and women who are straining at the leash of marriage, or who are unsuited to each other, or who may love each other but are undisciplined and not trying each to do his part.

To them I want to point out this: That it isn't how well each of you manages your child—it isn't how you [each one] act toward him that is of utmost importance. It's also important for him how you two, husband and wife, act toward each other. Because you're all tied up together: You and your partner in marriage and your children. And for this reason [that your lives are so intertwined] it isn't possible to write a column about child training without bringing in other human relationships, but principally that of husband and wife.

So, if your children are your great concern—if you love them with an unselfish love—if you have their welfare at heart as the judge did the young boy's, then you won't disparage each other, either before your children or directly to them; you won't try to curry favor with them at the expense of the other partner in your marriage.

For you not only hurt them in doing so—a sensitive child winces at these thrusts made through him, or across him. You also affect their attitude toward life and people, a far reaching effect which may not be noticeable until they get older and out into the world, or are ready to consider marriage for themselves.

Spring Brides Spurn Bizarre Fashion Trend

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—Whatever they may do to promote craziness in styles elsewhere, most brides this spring are certainly sticking close to the tradition of white satin and veils of lace or tulle. Some few radicals went to the altar in green, pink, or lilac, but most of the middle ailers went up to say their lines wearing what society has ordered these many years.

The biggest novelty in fashionable weddings is the new vogue for midnight marriages. Not the kind where they wake up the preacher and say their lines in sports suits, but the grand ceremony with all the trimmings of satin, tulle, and heaps of ushers and bridesmaids, but timed for the deadline between two days.

There is considerable variance this spring in the kind of attendants the bride chooses. Some of the most beautiful weddings in London and Paris have had the bride and groom attended by small children, page boys and flower girls, and only a maid of honor and best man from grownup circles. Other weddings, and these are the most numerous, have shown an increase of adult bridesmaids and ushers, sometimes triple the usual number, more often double. Anne Bowes-Lyon, the queen of England's niece, had fifteen attendants, partly adults, partly children, and everybody from the bride down in white and silver.

I have been impressed also by the popularity of the bouffant wedding dress. Several brides who are being married next month have ordered Molyneux's white satin crinolined wedding dress with the skirt as big as Empress Eugénie wore, and caught up by bunches of lilies of the valley. It also is smart to be married in a white lace or tulle wedding gown with a swing skirt containing many yards of material, which can be worn for honeymoon dances later.

One London bride, Miss Mary Stirling, was married this spring in a white satin wedding gown cut in the style of 1880 with a bustle back. She wore a veil of Brussels lace that had belonged to her great-grandmother, and her bridesmaids wore frocks of white satin cut also à la 1880. Their bouquets were yellow daffodils, while her's was white lilies of the valley.

Quite as numerous and as impressive socially have been brides gowned in long, slinky dresses of white satin or brocade, cut to reveal the figure, with trains of striking length.

Soft silk afternoon ensembles, in either dove gray or pastel blue, with small veiled hats have been the favorite choice of most of the fashionable try-it-again brides over here. The idea seems to be to look as sweet and girlish as possible in making a second or third marital experiment.

Orange blossoms as the floral accompaniment of the bride have taken a tumble. Some brides prefer this classic flower, but a great many go up to say their vows with other flowers for scenery. Lilies of the valley, camelias, arum lilies, white lilacs, and gardenias are some of the bride's flowers that are favorites this spring. It is very chic to have the bridal headdress in silver sequins, mother of pearl, and real pearls if you own them. Natural flowers are carried as a bouquet.

Nathalie Chatham Walker, when she married Frederick de Vere Beauclerk, second heir to the duke of St. Albans, wore a simple frock of ivory slipper satin, and over it a long redingote of white tulle embroidered with silver daisies. Her veil was white tulle, and her flowers daisies and orange blossoms.

For one of the midnight marriage brides of the season, Maggy Rouff designed a costume of white satin, the dress being closely draped to the hips, with a long, slinky, trained skirt, and long fitted sleeves. A low neckline is a new bridal feature.

A Paquin wedding dress is made of ivory satin. The unusual back bodice suggested a back-side-to vest, buttoned on silver buttons, while the front is a full length panel, the waistline of the dress being draped into this panel. The long train is a floating panel from the waistline at the back. The white tulle veil is held by a chaplet of silver leaves.

The popular bouffant wedding dress, which Maggy Rouff designed for a forthcoming June wedding, is made of stiff white satin, and the skirt has fifteen yards of the material in it.

If you own a boat you'll be out cruising in it any day now, if you haven't done so already. If you don't own a boat you certainly know some one who does, so the time is ripe to get yourself some boating clothes which can double for other sports occasions, too.

Pattern No. 2816 features a sunback dress which you can wear for active and spectator sports. The matching or contrasting jacket allows for the latter purpose. The high neckline of the frock has a pert collar edged with the same binding which trims the armholes, décolletage, and the breast pockets. No belt is used. Paneling does all that is necessary for a perfect fit and you will find the princess lines flattering. Use any washable silk, cotton, or linen.

Style No. 2824 is a casual coat ideal in fleecy wool to don when the lake or ocean breezes become too cool for comfort after sundown. You also can wear it afield and for motoring, and it may top your prettiest summer frocks in town.

The hat worn by the model in the sketch is a ridiculously saucy affair for which you will find a variety of uses all summer. Make it to match your summer frocks, one hat for each dress. The pattern number is 3471 and it's available for 10 cents, just as are the other patterns discussed today. One headsize is offered, which you may adapt to your individual needs.

The pattern for the man tailored slacks and shirt is No. 3227. The trousers are cut to fit excellently, and the shirt is the most casual kind, built for comfort as well as style. You may make the slacks of white or dark woolen or of heavy cotton, while the shirt may be of either silk or cotton.

Style No. 2816 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20 years, and 30, 32, 34, 36, and 38 inches bust measurement. Size 16 requires 2¾ yards of 39 inch material for the dress, with 1¼ yards of 39 inch fabric for the jacket.

Style No. 2824 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20 years, and 30, 32, 34, 36, and 38 inches bust measurement. Size 16 requires 2⅛ yards of 39 inch material.

Style No. 3227 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20 years, and 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measurement. Size 16 requires 1¾ yards of 39 inch material for the blouse with 2¾ yards of 39 inch material for the slacks.

Home Wedding Can Cut Costs, Still Be Lovely

What information should be given in an invitation to a bridal shower? Helpful suggestions are given in the booklet, "The Bridal Shower," by Helen Bartlett, Tribune etiquet editor. Get a copy at either of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn, or Tribune Tower. Price, 2 cents. Postpaid, 3 cents.

By Helen Bartlett.

Now that you have a list of the wedding expenses and how they are shared between the bride and bridegroom [refer to our column of May 1], we can go into the problem of helping brides who must keep their expenditures within a certain limited allowance to cut costs here and there without sacrificing any of the charm, dignity, or correctness of the affair. A simple wedding and an informal one, if necessary, can be just as lovely and impressive as an expensive, extravagant one.

A big slice can be cut from the expenses, if need be, by having the wedding take place at home. True, the house will have to be decorated a little, but a casual and interesting arrangement of fresh cut flowers is all that is required. This expense is nothing as compared with decorating a church. A home wedding also lessens the need for expensive musicians. A simple ceremony makes a simple piano rendition of the wedding march quite adequate. Transportation to and from the church for the wedding party may be forgotten entirely.

Another cut in the expenses becomes effective when the bride decides on an informal wedding, rather than a formal one, and decides on wearing an afternoon dress or suit instead of a formal wedding gown and veil. By so doing the bridegroom's problem of correct attire is simplified. He is allowed to wear a business suit. And for an informal wedding there is no need for engraved invitations. Instead, the bride or her mother may write little personal notes to the friends and relatives who are to be invited. Or invitations may be even telephoned.

The trousseau will consume the greater percentage of the allowance. How that amount is divided between towels, table cloths, and lingerie will depend on the individual bride, or what she needs, and on the size of the household she expects to establish.

As to the wedding costume, a summer bride may have a charming frock at a moderate cost. Cotton is a highly fashionable fabric. If the bride is practical she will choose a dress that fills other needs in her wardrobe. Or she may prefer a suit or a tailored outfit that she can wear as her "going away" costume. Suitable fabrics for a summer wedding dress are organdy, dotted Swiss, handkerchief linen, mousseline de soie, silk crêpe, chiffon, lace, paper taffeta, net. Flowers for the bride and her attendant [if she has one] may be fresh cut garden flowers . . . bridal wreath, sprays of apple blossoms, lilacs, tulips, lilies of the valley. White gladioli with shasta daisies would make a pretty arm bouquet.

With careful management a small amount of money will see the bride through the reception. The menu would be just the same as that for an afternoon tea. Tiny open faced sandwiches, relishes, pretty cakes, salted nuts, fondant patties, tea, and coffee, and wedding cake comprise a typical collation.

Campus Modes by a Co-ed

Ruthie, who rooms two cubicles down the hall at the sorority house, is one of my pets and also one of my pests! She's a dear and one of my best friends, but she DOES have a penchant for a new frock almost every week. To make it worse, she usually tries to suit her dresses to her beaux moods, and then along came Jack, who is perverse enough to want feminine clothes to be tailored, too, and dressy.

Well, I set my brain to work and devised what I thought was the perfect answer to Jack's dream. I wasn't far wrong. This beau DID like the frock, although he detested the hat she wore with it. [I didn't select the bonnet, by the way!]

The dress that caused all the furor is reproduced in the sketch today. It has trim shoulders which go feminine with a vengeance by means of softly shirred inserts. The sleeves are, on the surface of things, just ordinary shirtwaist ones, but look again! They have soft puffiness to them. The simple bodice has either buttons or a zipper, as you choose. [Ruthie chose the buttons.] The waistline may have tailored belt or soft sash. [Ruthie has the sash.]

Fabric is important to this model. If you follow Ruth's cue you'll make your frock of sheer over a harmonizing slip. Or a supple silk or cotton may be employed. Have a trim print, nothing splashy.

Cleanliness Is First Defense in War Against Moth

All washable clothing and household furnishings should be thoroughly laundered before they are put away for the summer. Even though blankets and underwear, scarfs, sweaters, etc., show no sign of soil, a plunge in soapy water and a good rinse is an excellent preventative. [Then they are ready for first aid treatment with dependable mothproofing preparations, and storage in mothproofing bags, chests, and so on.]

Apply Wax as Soon as You Wash the Floors

To keep varnished floors in tip top shape apply wax as soon as the floors have been washed and thoroughly dried.

Feminine Ingenuity Is Responsible for Noted Inventions

Because no one knows the names of the women who were responsible for some of our most important inventions doesn't make the fact of their ingenuity any less real.

Take for instance the boarding house keeper who had trouble with her wood stove and spoiled a perfectly good dinner for a young mechanic who roomed at her house. Angry at what had happened, she asked him why no manufacturer had ever thought of putting out big iron boxes with gas jets beneath them to cook by. And in a few months—or less time even than that—appeared our first gas oven.

The next time you thread a needle think of Christina Shaw, who lived some 200 years ago in England and devised the idea of thread on spools.

When you use the curling iron, remember that a certain Mary Anderson from New Jersey grew so tired of straight hair that she "thought up" the idea of the curling iron.

It was an East Indian princess, Nourmahal, who somehow thought up the idea of distilling scent from flowers.

Paris Pattern Offers Simple Two-Piece Summer Outfit

No. 5240—The Paris pattern for this frock is available in sizes 14 and 16, and in 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measurement.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—One of Paris' foremost fashion artists accepted my invitation to luncheon recently and appeared wearing a virtually perfect "pattern" costume. What I mean is this. Too often I see striking models which any woman would love, but which are almost impossible to make, since they are so intricate that they require the services of the most skilled dressmakers. But the artist in question wore a simple number which so struck my fancy that I eyed it critically and am passing it on to you in the form of pattern No. 5240.

This simple frock is one which you will have no difficulty in making. The extremely plain top is an ideal foil for the "loudest" and gayest of prints in either silk or cotton, and the skirt is a plaitless type which you need only cut out and run up in a jiffy on your sewing machine. The original dress was fashioned of silk, the blouse of multicolored print, and the skirt of a neutral shade to harmonize. You can concoct your own recipe for chic by selecting your favorite colors and those which blend with your complexion type and personality.

Another beauty of this model is that you can wear the skirt with other blouses and sweaters, and the blouse with your suits and spare skirts.

Bridal Shower Must Be Dainty, Pretty Affair

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1938: By The Chicago Tribune.]

A bridal shower party may be described as being a very dainty affair. Gifts for the young woman so honored are wrapped and tied daintily, the food served is dainty; china, glassware, tablecloth, and table decorations are dainty, too.

The soft colors of spring flowers—blues, violets, and blossom pinks are the happiest choice in decoration. Nut cups should harmonize in form and tint. If flowers and dainty nut cups are used, no other bedecking of the table is needed, for simplicity always is a quality of exquisite arrangement.

Food must be as attractive in shape, color, and service as the hostess can possibly make it.

Queen of Hearts Cakes

[1 sheet of cake 11 by 15 by 1 inch.]

1 cup shortening
2 cups sugar
3 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
⅓ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon flavoring
6 egg whites

Cream the shortening and add sugar gradually. Beat together until light and fluffy. Sift the flour and measure; mix and sift several times with baking powder and salt. Add dry ingredients alternately with milk to the creamed mixture, stirring the batter until smooth. Add the flavoring. Fold in the egg whites which have been beaten until stiff but not dry. Pour into a greased, shallow baking pan and bake for 35 minutes in a slow oven, 325 degrees. Remove from the pan and cut with a heart shaped cake cutter.

Make a seven minute frosting and divide it into three portions, tinting each portion with a different food coloring to a pastel. Frost cakes and decorate with colored sugar and tiny silver candies.

Orange Fluff.

2 eggs
Grated rind ½ lemon
1 tablespoon hot water
2 tablespoons lemon juice
3 tablespoons sugar
Grated rind ½ orange
3 tablespoons orange juice

Separate the eggs. Beat the yolks with 2 tablespoons of the sugar. Add the grated rind and fruit juices. Add hot water, beating constantly. Cook the mixture in the top of a double boiler until it coats a spoon, stirring continually. Pour over the egg whites which have been beaten until stiff and into which the remaining tablespoon of sugar has been beaten. Pile the mixture into glasses. Chill and serve.

To serve coffee with honey and whipped cream, make it in the usual way and serve it with a pitcher of warmed honey and a small bowlful whipped cream on each table. Hot coffee rum is made this way:

HOT COFFEE RUM

To serve six, make six cups of very strong coffee. Rub six lumps of sugar on the rind of an orange until well saturated with the oil. Place these in a pan with 6 cloves and a little broken cinnamon stick and the grated rind of an orange.

Add enough rum to cover the sugar, and bring to a boil. Stir until the sugar has melted, being careful not to let it catch fire. Stir this mixture into the hot coffee and heat just to boiling.

South American Chocolate.

½ pound vanilla sweet chocolate
1 cup strong coffee
6 cups scalded milk
Whipped cream

Melt chocolate over hot water and add coffee slowly. Boil for 1 minute. Add to scalded milk and beat until a thick foam forms on top. Leave over hot water 10 minutes. Serve with sweetened and flavored whipped cream. Chocolate may be chilled and served in tall glasses with cracked ice, if liked.

Iceberg Chocolate.

2 cups hot coffee
4 teaspoons sugar
2 squares unsweetened chocolate
4 tablespoons sugar
1 cup boiling water
3 cups hot milk
½ teaspoon vanilla
Whipped cream

Add 4 teaspoons sugar to the hot coffee, stir until dissolved, and pour into an ice cube tray. Freeze. Shave the chocolate and add remaining sugar and boiling water. Heat to the boiling point, stirring constantly. Remove from the range, add hot milk and vanilla and stir until well blended. Chill. To serve, pour into tall glasses with the coffee ice cubes. Add a bit of whipped cream to the top of each floating ice cube to transform it into an "iceberg."

Next Sunday food plans for a wedding reception will be under consideration in this column.

Through the Looking Glass

By Eleanor Nangle

Before you have that summer permanent it's wise to condition the hair if you've any reason to suspect it is not in the best of health. Intelligent pre-permanent care and good preparations that stimulate natural oil play a large part in insuring the success of the wave.

Never in our experience have we known women to be so receptive to sound advice about care of their hair. Beauty experts and the more conscientious hairdressers have been thundering for years about the importance of hair conditioning, but until recently they heard only echo answer.

Now the picture is changing. It may be that the cumulative effect of frequent permanents, lack of brushing, and weekly intervals under the dryer is at last recognized by woman. Neglect over years and years has taken a toll that is distinctly recognizable everywhere you go. How many truly beautiful heads of hair do you see, contrasted to the heads that are lusterless, brittle, and straggly?

Right now we'd wager that more women are conscious of the need to condition their hair before their summer permanent than ever gave such a procedure a thought before. And we're all for it.

There are two ways to go about reconditioning hair. One is to go to a shop for professional treatments, individualized. The other is to give yourself the benefit of intelligent care at home.

The great problem nowadays is dry hair. If there are oily haired women they are in the minority—and certainly seem inarticulate since you never hear them complaining.

The choice of a shampoo is important. If you've any reason to feel that what you've been using has had a drying effect by all means switch to something else. And do get out the hairbrush for a daily workout—twice daily if your elbow holds out!

Massage the scalp night and morning and if the dryness is excessive work in some corrective ointment. One of the best we have recently found is called a "scalp food," a white, clean smelling ointment that seemed to us to do a remarkable job of lubricating the scalp without making the hair definitly greasy.

It's especially important if you dip into the dye pots to be fussy about your permanent. Have a test curl, by all means, and remember that the cheap permanent is apt to be extremely expensive in the long run. Dyed hair calls for the skilled operator and the best equipment.

In any case, don't rush for the permanent until your hair is in shape for it. If there are any brittle ends, wait until they grow out—and give every hair on your head the benefit of good pre-permanent care.

It's a Help to Me, Says—

Jane Gregory, Minneapolis, Minn: Often in the spring when I start house cleaning I find my furniture has dried out so that it won't take a furniture polish. I give it a quick sponging with a mixture of three parts linseed oil to one part turpentine and then remove with a cloth moistened with alcohol. After this, polish does the work.

John T., Chicago: I always see to it that my window screens have a good coat of thin white screen enamel. We can all see outdoors through this enamel, but the outside world can't see so well what's going on inside.

Sarah M., Lansing, Mich.: We do a lot of small painting jobs around our house in the spring and summer, and when mosquito and fly time arrives I find that if I add a teaspoonful of oil of citronella or wintergreen to the final coat the insects don't like the smell and don't flock around with quite so much zest.

Mrs. John Hays, Chicago: To chase away the shine from old serge garments I lay the article over a heavy cloth, sponge with hot vinegar, and then cover with a cloth wrung from cold water. Then I press dry.

Lenora M., Chicago: I have a large family and I think I have mastered the trick of renewing worn places on my varnished floors without doing the whole floor over. I first sandpaper worn places to a clean, bare surface and smooth surrounding places. Then I wipe with benzine, watching out for fire, and refinish with the same color quick drying varnish. I start in center of worn place and brush toward edges to keep patch from showing. When first coat is dry I apply second, and rub down margins with sandpaper. When second coat is dry I rub down well with paste floor wax.

Harry Smith, St. Louis, Mo.: I apply a couple of coats of light spar varnish to all our window sills. I use top quality varnish, and it puts up a good fight against summer rains and winter snows.

Spread Sandwiches This Way to Prevent "Oozing"

When spreading sandwiches leave about a ¼ inch around the edges unspread. Then, when you put the second slice of bread in position press it down firmly. The filling will spread to the edges, but is less likely to ooze out.

MOTHER'S OLD-TIME NUT CAKE

⅔ cup Spry
1 teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoons vanilla
½ teaspoon almond extract
1 cup sugar
3 eggs, unbeaten
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 cups sifted flour
⅔ cup water
1 cup nuts, finely chopped

Combine Spry, salt, vanilla and almond extract. Add sugar gradually and cream until light and fluffy. (See how quickly and thoroughly this triple-creamed shortening mixes.) Add eggs, one at a time, beating thoroughly after each addition.

Add baking powder to flour and sift 3 times. Add ¾ of flour to creamed mixture in small amounts, alternately with water, mixing after each addition until smooth. Add remaining ¼ of flour to nuts, mixing well. Then combine with first mixture and blend. Pour batter into 10x10x2-inch pan greased with Spry. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) 45 to 50 minutes. Spread Vanilla Cream Frosting on top and sides of cake.

VANILLA CREAM FROSTING

1 tablespoon Spry
1 tablespoon butter
¼ teaspoon vanilla
⅛ teaspoon almond extract
¼ teaspoon salt
2 cups sifted confectioners' sugar
5 tablespoons scalded cream (about)

Combine Spry, butter, vanilla, almond extract, salt and blend. (Notice how much creamier frostings are, made with Spry—how moist they stay.) Beat in ½ cup sugar. Add hot cream, alternately with remaining sugar, beating well after each addition. Add only enough cream to make a nice spreading consistency. Makes enough frosting to cover top and sides of 10x10-inch cake. (All measurements in these recipes are level.)

Contract According to Culbertson

Rumors of Change in Two Bid Branded as Malicious

By Ely Culbertson.

[Copyright: 1938: By Ely Culbertson.]

It is about time, I think, for me to don my shining armor, mount my snorting steed, and sally forth to kill one of the worst dragons that has ever dared to invade the territory of King Contract. For some time I have been hearing vague rumors about a drastic change in the Culbertson system in respect to its very corner stone, the opening two bid. From all parts of the country players have written in, asking whether it is true that the opening two bid is no longer forcing to game. Almost invariably they add that "a certain teacher or prominent player stated as a fact that Mr. Culbertson's latest edict was that henceforth two bids could be dropped at the discretion of either partner." Unfortunately, these correspondents failed to name their informants. This has been a source of profound regret to me, because it has robbed me of the pure pleasure I would derive from telling these rumor mongers exactly what I think of them.

Now and for all time I want to put myself on record: There has not been the slightest change in the conventional meaning of an opening suit bid of two! As always, such a bid is absolutely forcing, not for just one round, but until game has been reached, or until the opponents have been doubled in a contract that satisfies the opening two bidder and his partner. I hope I have made myself quite plain. I haven't the slightest idea how the aforesaid rumor started, and can only guess, therefore, that it was disseminated by individuals whose main object in life is to create a sensation and to direct attention to themselves either for "glory" or material profit.

I have no quarrel with any one seeking information. Dozens of bewildered but honest players write me every week asking why an opening two bid should have an arbitrary meaning. A typical plaint is: "My partner opened with a two bid and I held an absolute bust. I responded the first time with two no trump, but when partner merely rebid without jumping I passed, being absolutely sure there was no game in the hand. Isn't this just a simple matter of common sense? Why should I have to keep on bidding until game is reached when I am sure we'll go down?"

As I have said, I have no angry words, nor even slight impatience for this attitude. Indeed, my only desire in these cases is to convince, through explanation and example. First, I point out that no bidding system under the sun can take care of one thousand cases out of a thousand. A system is devised [and painstakingly devised] to cover the vast majority of bidding problems that may arise. With many billions of card combinations possible it is patently impossible to lay down a rule for each hand. Indeed, any system that attempts to work miracles produces nothing but chaos. Thus, I will not attempt to deny that, occasionally, partners would save points by failing to go to game after an opening two bid. It would, however, be the most expensive saving they had ever made, because from that time on partnership confidence would be notable by its absence. There would be a pressing doubt in the two bidder's mind as to whether his partner might not choose the particular time when the opener had a positive game to "exercise discretion" and drop the bidding.

Suppose a deal like this comes up:

♠ 8 6 3
♣ J 8 5 4

WEST
♠ J 7 5 2
♥ K Q J 8 6
♣ 10 7

♦ 8 6 5 3
♣ 9 3 2

SOUTH
♠ A K Q 10
♦ A K Q J
♣ A K Q 6

If North is a player who insists on "using discretion" in respect to an opening two bid I pity the poor partner, South! In that case South deserves commiseration, not envy, for holding such a rock crusher. From South's standpoint there is a virtually certain slam, even if North has not a face card but does hold four cards in spades, diamonds, or clubs. Without a conventional bid, however, to assure South that he will be able to tell his three suit story without fear that North will suddenly stop listening there is no way a slam can be reached, unless South gets out his crystal and finds that North has not four spades and not four diamonds, but does hold four clubs. In this hand South must be able to bid two spades with the assurance that he will thereafter be permitted to show both his diamonds and clubs. Let's suppose that the North observes the two spade bid to the extent of responding with two no trump. South then bids three diamonds, and at this point North, "the free thinker," decides that he has done enough for the common cause and will not go another inch. What a tragedy! South has not been able to disclose the exact nature of his hand, and a cold small slam in clubs has not even been approached.

I have always been the first to advise against "woodenness" and to point out that any player who abides 100 per cent by any system [including the Culbertson system] is bound to overlook countless opportunities that demand departure from ordinary conventions. But where the opening two bid and its responses are concerned I recommend rigid orthodoxy. And once more I say that any one, teacher or player, who takes it upon himself, or herself, to announce that there has been a change in the Culbertson two bid rule is either malicious or ignorant—perhaps both!

The average player may have qualms about his own ability in so far as squeezes and other difficult coups are concerned, but it probably never occurs to him that even simple establishment plays may involve technique. In the following hand consider declarer's method of establishing an extra winner:

NORTH
♠ J 8 5 3
♥ 7 6 5 4
♦ K 3 2

♠ 10 6 4 2
♦ Q J 10 8 5
♣ Q 10

♣ J 9 8 6 5 2

SOUTH
♠ A K Q 7
♥ A K 2
♦ A 6 4
♣ A K 3

The bidding [match point duplicate; both sides vulnerable]:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	Pass	3 no trump
Pass	Pass	Pass

A three no trump opening bid is in itself a slam try, and since it shows seven to eight honor tricks, every suit stopped, and 4-3-3-3 distribution it was exactly descriptive of South's holding.

West opened the diamond queen. Declarer counted that even if he should find a 3-3 heart break five odd was the most he could hope for. Hence, he properly ducked the first trick. West continued with the diamond jack and declarer won with the ace. He then laid down the A-K-Q of spades. Now came the crucial play of the hand. The ordinary player would probably lay down the ace, king, and a small heart, praying for a break. East, however, would promptly cash the fourth round, thus holding the contract to one extra trick. The declarer recognized this danger, and instead of laying down the ace and king of hearts led the deuce! As may be seen, there was nothing to lose by this play. If the heart suit split 3-3 the ace and king would drop the outstanding hearts on successive plays; if the suit did not break 3-3 the initial lead of a low heart would enable declarer to discover that fact on the later leads of the ace and king.

We shall see the difference that declarer's play made. West won the heart lead with the nine and returned a diamond [it made no difference which defender won this heart lead nor what suit was returned]. Dummy's diamond king won and declarer then led a heart to the ace and cashed the king. West showed out and the nonbreak became apparent, but declarer had not shot his bolt by any means. He now led to the carefully preserved spade jack in dummy, and at this point East could no longer retain an active interest in the proceedings. He had to reduce to three cards. To throw away the heart queen was to establish dummy's seven spot. Therefore he was forced to let go another club, which brought him down to the J-9 blank. All declarer had to do was lead a club; his ace, king, and three spot were now as good as gold.

The bidding [both sides vulnerable]:

South	West	North	East
1 heart	Pass	3 no trump	Pass
6 hearts	Double	Redouble	Pass
Pass	Pass

Suppose you were South and had such a nice West opponent that he doubled six hearts to warn you that the three missing trumps were in his hand. How would you go about fulfilling your redoubled slam contract? Opening lead: Spade jack.

Answer: Ruff the first trick with heart deuce. Cash A-K-Q of diamonds. Lead low club and finesse ten spot. Ruff spade with heart five. Lead club to king. Ruff spade with heart seven. Lead last club to ace. Ruff diamond with heart eight. Lead queen or ten of trumps and laughingly invite West to try and get out!

Knitting Yarns Now Come in Stick Candy Colors

By Jean Macdonald.

Stick candy colors are the latest affectation in the realm of high fashion in hand knits for spring and summer. Lime green, lemon, and peppermint with white are favorite combinations which will probably carry over to fall and winter fashions.

The two tone sport sweater illustrated today is an example of the stick candy combination. Peppermint pink and white are used to create a cunning hand knitted number which is certain to be a prime favorite for both active and spectator sports apparel. It is a simple knitting job which takes only one week's labor in spite of the pockets and other details which make it look like a complicated problem. Popular yarn for this model is a chalky finish material, which is a combination of wool and a synthetic fiber and has a reputation for coolness and lavability. Yarn manufacturers have gone to great expense to produce an attractive yarn product and soap manufacturers have coöperated by producing a mild soap flake which may be used for washing hand knitted garments without destroying color or injuring materials in any way.

HOW TO ORDER

If you wish instructions for knitting the two-tone sports blouse with short sleeves illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Jean Macdonald, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Be sure to send name and address with your letter.

It is necessary that the following measurements be included:

George Rector

Back in 1902, after I finished serving my apprenticeship in the kitchens of several famous restaurants in Paris, I headed south to the Bordeaux section, where those fine French wines are made. I arrived there just at the start of the vintage season, which means the pressing of the grapes. The scene of action was in a small town called Fronsac. My host, M. Lacaze, was the proprietor of the vineyards, consisting of many acres on which was located his beautiful home—Château Pardillan. This château is more than four hundred years old and has plenty of background and color.

At this particular time the grape pickers were at work bringing the grapes to the pressoir, where they are not pressed by machinery, but by bare feet. The juice from the grapes is pumped into a mammoth vat, which is known as a cuvee. The pulp and stems also go into this huge vat. Soon the fermentation sets in, and gradually the pulp rises to the surface and forms a crust, so solid that one could walk across it. After the fermentation the wine is sampled and is now ready for purchase and then aged in barrels.

Not far from this Bordeaux section which I visited is a small town called St. Emilion. Upon entering the town we came to a cemetery, adjacent to which were large vineyards. My host commented on the fact that the grapes grown in that particular spot produced wines of extraordinary quality.

When you are having guests and would like to serve coffee with a dash of showmanship, then proceed with "Café Diable."

Make a quantity of strong coffee, enough for eight or ten small cups and keep the coffee hot. Put in a chafing dish that has direct heat, two sticks of cinnamon, one teaspoon whole cloves, one teaspoon coriander seeds, eight or ten lumps of sugar, one tablespoon of whole coffee beans, a small piece of lemon and orange rind. Let these spices get thoroughly heated and then add about four tablespoons of brandy.

When the brandy has become thoroughly heated, ignite it from the flame of a match. Spoon or ladle constantly while the brandy is burning. When the flame has died out, pour in the hot black coffee and one tablespoon of curacao. (Curocao is a liqueur, also delightful, with a decided orange flavor.) Now pour into the ladle four tablespoons of brandy and drop in three or four lumps of sugar and again ignite and let sugar and brandy burn in the ladle until sugar is melted and brandy is burnt out. Ladle all together and serve in after-dinner coffee cups. During all this preparation the heat must be under the chafing dish from start to finish.

FRIED BANANAS, CHERRY SAUCE.

Split the bananas in halves lengthwise. Roll them in finely pulverized, stale macaroons and then in flour. Fry in deep hot fat until they are nicely browned. Drain, and brush carefully with apricot jam. Arrange the entire quantity on an attractive flat dish building from a wide base up to a point (pyramid shape). Dredge entire surface with freshly peeled and shredded pistachio nuts.

The cherry sauce is to be served separately. Melt four tablespoons of currant jelly in a saucepan and dilute it with one pint of syrup made as follows: Boil together for five minutes one cup of water and one cup of sugar. Pour this medium syrup into the melted jelly along with one cup of candied cherries.

This was one of the dessert specialties of Rector's and I hope that you will like it. It was known in those days as "Bananas Frites, Aux Cerises."

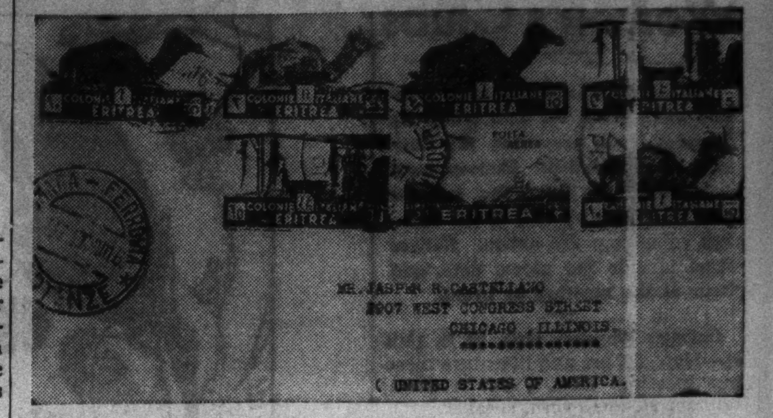
The Stamp Collector

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, except concerning value. Do not ask where stamps may be sold, as the Stamps and Coins advertising section adjoining contains offers to buy and sell. Inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.



Jasper R. Castellano of Chicago has loaned this cover for illustration. It originates in Asmara, capital of the Italian colony of Eritrea, in northeastern Africa, bordering on the Red sea.

With two values of the new Presidential series now in circulation, collectors have had a chance to examine the design and to express their opinions upon its artistic merit. Actually it does not matter much whether a design has true artistic merit so long as the engraving is skilful and the color pleasing.

It is true in all of the graphic arts that a poor design may be so brilliantly presented by a skilful draftsman or delineator as to deceive all but the most analytic critics. The 6 cent Parks stamp, for example, is usually cited as a poor design when compared with the other values of the set, but actually it is being criticized because of a certain crudeness of line in the engraving.

The third value of the set will be placed on sale at Philadelphia, May 19. This is the ½-cent stamp showing the portrait of Benjamin Franklin and its first day of sale has been arranged to coincide with impressive ceremonies attending the unveiling of a heroic statue of Franklin, by James Earle Fraser, at Franklin institute.

Franklin retains a place on this stamp issue since he was deputy postmaster general for the English colonies in America and later the first American postmaster general having been appointed by the Continental Congress. As "father of the American postal service" his memory will be honored by the establishment of the "Benjamin Franklin Memorial station" at the institute. There will be an imposing exhibition of stamps and the treasury department has agreed to install a press where United States stamps will be printed for the instruction of visitors.

The exhibition lasts from May 19 to May 25 and a special philatelic agency will be open each day. Collectors who desire first day cancelations may send not to exceed 10 addressed envelopes together with a postal money order remittance covering the exact cost of stamps to be affixed to the postmaster at Philadelphia, Pa., with a notation on each envelope stating the number of stamps to be affixed. If a cachet is desired in addition to the first day cancelation do not send covers to the postmaster, but address your parcel of envelopes to Stamp Committee, Franklin institute, Philadelphia, Pa.

Plate number blocks or other special positions will not be furnished on any covers. Remember that six ½ cent stamps will be required to cover the first class rate from Philadelphia to other cities, and leave sufficient room for a block of this size without covering a portion of the address, or the cachet if this is desired. Unused stamps may not be ordered from Philadelphia, but may be obtained from the philatelic agency, postoffice department, Washington, D. C., where they will be placed on sale on the same day.

Stamp Notes.

Newfoundland will issue new 2, 3, 4, and 7-cent stamps on May 12, the anniversary of the coronation of George VI. The 2-cent value will show a portrait of the king, the 3-cent a portrait of the queen, the 4-cent, Princess Elizabeth, and the 7-cent, Queen Mary. The current Newfoundland set after that date will include the 1-cent, codfish; 5-cent, caribou; 8-cent, Corner Brook; 10-cent, salmon; 14-cent, dog; 15-cent, seal; 20-cent, Cape Race; 24-cent, Bell Island; 25-cent, sealing fleet, and 48-cent, bank fishing fleet.

The latest supplies of the 9d pictorial stamp are being printed locally in New Zealand from two plates prepared there from negatives obtained from Waterlow & Sons. These stamps have the watermark in normal position, while in the previous issue it is sidewise. Half-penny George VI. stamps went on sale throughout the dominion on May 12. The half-penny pictorial stamps were removed from sale on Feb. 28. On March 1 official stamps of ½d, 3d, and 9d values in the George V. designs were replaced by the new series.

Cachets and Covers.

Cachets for national air mail week will be available at the following postoffices: Springfield, Wilmette, and Highland Park, Ill.; East Orange, N. J.; Vancouver, Wash.; Newport, Tenn.; Huntington, W. Va. Address your package of covers to the postmaster at the office named. The envelope should be addressed and stamped or accompanied by cash or money order remittance to cover cost of stamps to be affixed at air mail rates. For Cleveland, O., send envelopes to Mark C. Emsley, 2192 Brown road, Lakeview, O.; Oklahoma City, Okla., address Aviation committee, Chamber of Commerce; San Francisco, Cal., care Cachet Director, Junior Chamber of Commerce, 333 Pine street.

Cachets for National Air Mail week, May 15-21, may be obtained also from Bad Axe, Mich., and from Chanute Air Mail field, Rantoul, Ill. Address the postmasters at Bad Axe and at Rantoul. There is a memorial flight from Cedar Falls to Waterloo, Ia., on May 19 to commemorate a flight made by Lincoln Beachey in 1912. Each office will have a cachet for the flight and a special cachet for Air Mail week. Address the postmaster. St. Bernard, Ala., will have an air mail cachet which may be obtained through E. O. Saltmarsh, St. Bernard college, St. Bernard, Ala.

Special flights are planned for May 19 at Bremen, Ind.; Elyria, O.; Newport, Ky.; Evanston, Ill., etc. All air mail posted in La Salle county, Ill., will be flown from Starved Rock State park to Chicago. Mail posted in nearby towns, north and west of Evanston, will be collected at that city and flown to Chicago.

Hampton, Va., will have a printed cachet and requests collectors to send address labels with their orders. Covers should be forwarded to Retail Merchants Association, Hampton, Va.

Several hundred Pennsylvania towns are listed as having prepared cachets. The list may be obtained from Joseph F. Gallagher, state chairman, national air mail week, Philadelphia, Pa. In any case where the new air mail stamps are not available, a cash money order remittance may be included.

Club Notes.

The 1938 regional convention of the Trans-Mississippi Philatelic society will be held at Hotel Montrose, Cedar Rapids, Ia., Sept. 23 to 25. A Pan-American section has been planned as a stellar feature of the stamp show and this will comprise the 21 republics of North, South, and Central America. The exhibits of each will be marked by its national flag. The illustration advertising this unusual feature of the show gives a composite view of the flags of the republics grouped about the base of the Statue of Liberty.

On Friday, May 13, 1938, a group of eight women, ignoring the ominous portends of the day and date, organized the Chicago Woman's Stamp club, the first of its kind in America. On Friday evening, again the 13th, the club will celebrate the unusual occurence of its birthday falling on a regular meeting night, by holding a party at the home of Mrs. I. M. Parker, 4656 Lake Park avenue.

A FRIEND IN NEED

If you are in need, perhaps I can help you. If you have household articles or clothing you no longer use, please let me place them with needy families. Address correspondence to Sally Joy Brown, the Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Activities of this department are sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.

By Sally Joy Brown.

Because of the common human habit of clinging to objects used in other days, we feel sure that somewhere in the city there are trunks and chests stored away in attics or basements packed neatly with mothballs and clothing. We're interested in obtaining some of the billowing, high-waisted apparel of the type worn in the gay '90s.

A letter from Mrs. P. G. on the south side supplies the motive for this rather unusual request. She is one of a group of mothers who have been giving a play for the benefit of the needy youngsters in their neighborhood school located in an extremely poor district. There are hundreds of underprivileged youngsters in attendance who must have more assistance than can be given through the regular channels. Most of the mothers are too poor to rent costumes. All of them are participating, stout and thin, and all sizes from the very smallest to 54 can be used.

A south side reader has asked for discarded household furnishings for a neighbor. A young man and his wife are trying to make a comfortable home out of an old rear cottage. The husband is unemployed and is not eligible for WPA because of a serious cardiac disorder. There are several children in the family. They need floor covering, a full size bed, a couch, and a baby bed. Other items such as lamps, linens, etc., while not necessities, will be much appreciated.

Physical disability has also forced the G. family to accept relief. Mr. G. cannot obtain even WPA work because he is almost totally blind. There are two children in the family, a baby a year old and a boy of 4. Mrs. G. would like to have a stroller or buggy for the youngest child, as their home is on the second floor and they have no porch or yard and it is difficult for her to carry the baby. The address is on the south side.

In Defense of Mrs. Maxon

By George Agnew Chamberlain

Marcia Maxon Calls on Hugh Riggs and Finds Tragedy Has Entered Her Life

THE STORY TO DATE

● Supremely happy in the love of husband and children, Marcia Maxon had lived on their estate apart from the social scene. The sudden death of her husband plunges her into a living death, aloof even from her own children. As companion to the children Barbara Clinton comes to the strange house. On her first visit to the estate Barbara had met Hugh Riggs, a cynical young modern, whom she had known as a child. Barbara arouses Mrs. Maxon from her apathy by accusing her of cowardice. The two women bcome fast friends. Barbara, betrayed by a scene of beauty, succumbs to Riggs.

INSTALMENT III.

(Copyright: 1938: By George Agnew Chamberlain.)

CHARACTERISTICALLY, Hugh let a day pass before giving Barbara a casual call, and by that time she could match cheerfulness against his indifference and answer coolly: "No, I can't, Hugh. I haven't any dress. No, I don't think so, not this week or next."

When she returned to the living room Mrs. Maxon looked up from her book. "That's too bad, Barbara. What happened to your dress?"

Mrs. Maxon was a recluse only as regarded Long Island. The city—any city—held no horrors for her. She had always shopped for the children, the house, and herself with shrewd efficiency, but the death of her husband had forced her into a higher plane of affairs.

It was a matter of general knowledge that Philip Maxon had left an ample fortune, but only a very limited circle composed of her bankers and legal advisers was aware of Marcia Maxon's actual financial position. Thanks to her own dowry, bolstered by legacies from various aunts and uncles, she was an extremely wealthy woman.

Brought up in the careful atmosphere of France, she was by no means content to let others guard her interests to her own exclusion, no matter how trustworthy her agents. She insisted on being informed of any major move, and as a consequence her visits to town were not infrequent.

For several weeks after Barbara's last night out with Hugh, Mrs. Maxon watched her with steadily increasing interest. An odd transition seemed to be taking place in the young girl. She was as gay as ever with the children and even more companionable of an evening. But she evinced a new sweetness, a strange mixture of contrary impulses. Thoughtful of others one moment, alive to meet every inflection of smile or mood, the next she would fall into a dreamy absentmindedness from which she would awake with a start.

Mrs. Maxon, so outright in everyday matters, was a woman of reserve when it came to emotions—her own or another's. She asked no questions, but she watched, and the result of her watching was in a way astonishing. Instead of focusing her attention on Barbara it ended by turning her inquiring gaze upon herself.

The same heartstrings that throbbed when she had been worried over Bruce or Philip or Winifred were throbbing now; the same constriction was in her throat. But with a difference, and the explanation was simple enough. The reason her thoughts turned inward was allied to a sense of overwhelming gratitude for the awakening that had been brought to her heart, to all the drying fibers of her being.

When next she went to town, her affairs at the bank quickly disposed of, she reveled in buying for Barbara not only frocks but every other article of wear a girl might covet. In the midst of this orgy she came to a sudden halt, her capable brain measuring her action for what it was—a childish gesture. Nevertheless she ordered the things sent on approval, little knowing the trap she was setting for herself and for Barbara.

WITH still time to spare, she directed Sam to drive to an address in the west fifties. Miss Livingston lived in one of a series of brownstone fronts now torn down. She admitted to sixty of her seventy-five years and had been one of the last persons in New York to sport a coupé drawn by knee-action bays. She wore a lace cap, served tea every Thursday on the stroke of four, disliked her own generation, and was Aunt Mary to her entire acquaintance.

She alone had the penetration to admire Marcia Maxon for defending exactly those things which, could she herself have attained them, would have spelled the difference between a full and a barren life. The amenities of greeting out of the way, Mrs. Maxon came to the point with her usual directness:

"Aunt Mary, do you know anybody called Riggs?"

"Certainly; what is her first name?"

"That's it—Hugh Hadley Riggs." Miss Livingston directed a sharp glance at her visitor, appeared to be about to ask a question, but changed her mind. "I never met him, but I can tell you all about it. James Hadley, his grandfather, married Evangeline Hitchcock—we used to call her Vangie—when they were both very young. She had three children one after the other, then made a fool of herself by producing another eighteen years later. A fine boy, by the way, and he's grown up into a quite a man—no nonsense, and an authority on archæology, or something or other. Creighton, he's called—Creighton Hadley. Ever heard of him?"

"No."

"You wouldn't. He doesn't strive for the front page; quite the opposite. Vangie died of embarrassment, but Louise, her eldest daughter, made a lot better mother for the baby anyway. She's dead now, too, but she was the salt of the earth to her last breath. She made only one mistake in her life, but it was fatal.

"When this little brother of hers, Creighton, was about three years old she married Franklin Riggs. He was no good; he went through her money like a greased pig at a fair. When he died about all he left her was the boy you asked about—Hugh Hadley Riggs." The old lady paused and cast another birdlike glance at her visitor. "So you know him, do you?"

"No," said Marcia, "I've never seen him."

A look of relief flashed in Miss Livingston's eyes; then she waited, but waited in vain. "Well," she drawled finally, "I've about quit believing in rules, but as a general thing, given the choice between a good and an evil parent, it's my experience that the offspring somehow manages to eschew the good."

Mrs. Maxon returned to Shively in somber mood. As she entered the house she noticed that owing to Sam's early departure a batch of letters she had got ready the previous evening—all containing checks to meet last month's bills—had not been mailed. She went to the console and picked them up, intending to send them out at once. An envelope of another size slipped from among those she had herself prepared.

Before she knew what she was doing she had read the name upon it and the simple address. Both were instantly engraved on her mind, not only by reason of the clear handwriting but because of the pang she felt at having been guilty, however involuntarily, of espionage. Five weeks had passed since Barbara had gone out except in the company of the children. Why was she writing to Hugh Riggs?

FOLLOWING out her original impulse to give Barbara a surprise, Mrs. Maxon had ordered the things she bought to be sent direct to Miss Clinton. The cartons did not come until the day following her trip to town, and it happened she was not present at the moment of their arrival. She returned soon after, just in time to catch a glimpse of Sam skimming down the drive with the boxes piled in the rumble seat of the small car. His face had the look of one striving to keep one step ahead of a pursuing devil.

Mystified, she entered and went in search of Barbara. An air of storm pervaded the house. Winifred, standing at one end of a long hallway, turned at sight of her mother and vanished. Hattie, encountered on the stairs, stood aside but deliberately avoided her mistress' glance. Stopping to ask no questions, Mrs. Maxon hurried on to rap at Barbara's door. There was no answer. She entered.

Though everything in the charming little room was in perfect order, she sensed at once that it was here the storm had centered, for a terrible change had come over Barbara. Marcia had never seen her even angry, but now she beheld her in the grip of rage.

Her cheeks were pale with a deathly pallor, burned dry of blood; her slender arms were rigid at her sides as though flesh had been fused to bone. Only her hair seemed to have escaped. It waved playfully this way and that in the breeze from the open window beside which she stood.

"Barbara!" cried Mrs. Maxon, brought to a halt. The girl did not answer. "Barbara, I admit I had my doubts, but I never dreamed such a little thing—anything—could make you so angry. I thought I was being childish, but it's you—it's you who are childish."

Barbara stared at her from within some cavern of the soul into which Marcia's final word succeeded in penetrating. "Childish?" she said in a hoarse, unrecognizable voice. "Have you ever had a man try to buy you off with a lot of frocks—ten for one?"

"I don't know what you're talking about," breathed Mrs. Maxon, utterly bewildered.

She made a swift movement forward, but stopped at Barbara's cry: "Don't come near me. Don't touch me. You'll know soon enough."

Instantly Mrs. Maxon reassumed dignity as though it were a mantle that had barely slipped from her shoulders. "All right, my dear," she said quietly. "I'll wait my turn."

"I'm leaving you," continued Barbara in the same hoarse voice.

"That's impossible," said Mrs. Maxon slowly. "You can't leave me—ever."

There ensued a long pause during which Barbara's gaze softened until her eyes assumed a limpid profundity which seemed rather to embrace than to plead. "Marcia," she said softly, "I'm going to have a baby."

Mrs. Maxon braced herself instantly, but only within. "Are you sure?" she asked, never flinching.

"Yes."

"Then eventually you will have to leave, but we'll still be friends—before and after you're married."

A pitiful smile curved Barbara's lips. "I don't think I'm going to be married."

Staring into his leering eyes, she forgot the individual and beheld only a demon, a force of evil spitting on the face of decency.

Mrs. Maxon's eyes opened wide. "Why not? What else can you do?"

"Nothing," said Barbara quietly. "At least, there isn't anything else I would do, whatever he says. But he won't marry me."

Mrs. Maxon stared at her, at last shocked into surprise. "That's perfectly absurd," she said finally. "Of course he will, and be glad of the chance."

"I don't think so," said Barbara. "I believe you are wrong."

For a long moment of silence the two women stood looking at each other with steadfast eyes. Scarcely conscious of approach, they drew near together and Mrs. Maxon's fingers closed over Barbara's hands. They were icy cold.

"Barbara," she said, "I still think it is you who are wrong. I'll tell you why. For one thing, it was I who sent you all those things; I bought them yesterday."

Barbara stared at her, wide-eyed. "O, I'm sorry! I scarcely looked at them. I made Sam promise to take them straight back to the shop."

"It doesn't matter in the least," said Marcia. "What matters is this—right or wrong, I love you. In my heart Winifred and Barbara are only two names for the same love."

That evening Barbara and Marcia met on a plane where incident has no place. They talked only of what they believed, and Barbara went to bed feeling that strength had been poured into her veins as surely as if there had been a transfusion of actual blood.

Marcia lay awake for a time, asking herself the unanswerable. Had she done right? Had instinct played her false in leading her to accept an accomplished fact without a single word of reproof? She shook herself free of questions. One can never start from yesterday, she told herself; only today and tomorrow can be governed, never what's past. Of course Mr. Riggs would marry Barbara.

Reassured, she fell asleep, but in the morning scarcely had the children departed for the beach in the station wagon with Barbara at the wheel than the telephone rang. It was the bank. She had omitted signing a proxy of considerable importance, and the dead line was set at noon. The bank was quite willing to send a messenger, but there was some doubt as to whether he could return in time. Should they risk it? No, she decided, her morning was free and she would run in herself. In half an hour she stepped out on the branching stairway that led down to the drive.

SHE was dressed in a printed silk frock which seemed to caress while it revealed her. True to the European tradition, she wore gloves—long white ones that reached to her elbows. From beneath a straw hat with a drooping brim, pertly reminiscent of Dolly Varden, her eyes shone with a calm yet vital glow.

Her feeling upon entering the car was one of content. Had she remained at home a dozen trifling interruptions might have occurred to break the current of her thoughts; but here, with Sam at the wheel, she could be sure of an hour's peace. It passed all too quickly. She was still deeply immersed when Sam found a parking space just around the corner from the bank and promptly took advantage of it.

She had been thinking of Hugh and Barbara. On what grounds but one could a man turn his back on such a girl? She had everything except money—family, charm, and more than her share of the universal appeal of the bursting bud. For she possessed a beauty all her own, the beauty of a lighted lamp. She was lovable—a lovable child.

The signing of the proxy was a matter of thirty seconds. She had drawn a check and had meant to cash it, but it slipped her mind and scarcely a minute had passed when she found herself once more outside. But the bank had made her think of money, and the thought of money now led her mind to Hugh.

She remembered his address perfectly, and it was so near the car could stay where it was. She glanced at the street clock in the next block; it showed a quarter past eleven.

Almost before she knew it she had reached Hugn's house, selected the proper bell button and was about to touch it when she noticed the street door was held ajar by a lifted corner of the mat, possibly on account of the heat of the day.

Ordinarily she would have been the last person to break in on a young man without warning, but already she was absorbed either in the rôle of strategist or in a mood of parenthood toward Hugh no less than Barbara. She climbed two flights of the carpeted stairs and felt an odd twinge of doubt at coming upon the door enameled in black which bore Hugh's card above a bronze knocker encrusted with verdigris. Hesitantly she lifted the tongue and let it fall.

A moment of silence followed the tap of the knocker. She felt an impulse to flee and half turned, but faced around resolutely at a sound from within. The door was thrown open and she observed a tall young man with a look of exasperation like a thunder cloud in his dark face. Other items flashed at her through her eyes, pouring a barrage against her senses in such a stream as to leave them stunned.

The fantastic interior, completely alien to her comprehension of life, shocked her with the force of a physical blow. She perceived the door had been painted black, that it might harmonize when open. The symmetry within, broken only by the disorder of the bed, seemed to indicate an inexorable hardness as definite as the nakedness of a blade.

She wrenched her attention from the surroundings to the man himself. He was still in pajamas and a black silk dressing gown whose inlaid gold arabesques matched the figures of the window hangings. His exasperation and manner of throwing open the door showed he had expected to face the housekeeper or perhaps the iceman, and the sight of Marcia instead struck him a blow almost as forceful as that which she had herself sustained.

His first reaction was one of fury—fury at being disturbed, at having his privacy violated without warning. But his anger, natural and becoming, passed all too soon, leaving in its place an expression drained of the last vestige of nobility.

In the instant which divided these two moods his glance had managed to absorb the striking beauty of the apparition before him. It did not enter his head it was Marcia Maxon his eyes were disrobing, nor would the knowledge have influenced him in the least. All he perceived was a splendid figure silhouetted against the oblong of the open door, mature yet pulsing with unspent youth.

He brushed past her, forcing her to step aside, and with his toe gave the door an impulse which caused it to close with a click. She felt instantly imprisoned, but, instead of feeling frightened, a strange calm descended upon her. Physical fear was a sensation she had never known and she was merely conscious of the forces within her marshaling themselves for combat. She was not afraid of Hugh or anything he could do, but abruptly, overwhelmingly, she now feared for Barbara.

Immediately he had closed the door, he went to the center of the room and turned to face her. With his hands thrust into the pockets of the dressing gown, he teetered, heel and toe, his quizzical gaze sweeping her up and down, his lip quirked oddly in the empty gesture of a smile.

Instinctively she took a step backward and stood braced against the ebony desk. Her gloved hands went down at each side of her to rest on its smooth surface, but one of them encountered a bronze object no larger than an apple. Her fingers investigated it curiously, though her dark eyes remained fixed on Hugh's face.

"Pot-bellied penguin by Brancusi," he explained, "though you'd never guess it. Look out for the beak; it's sharp."

"Do you know who I am?" she asked in a clear, full voice.

"Aphrodite in a cloud of silk," he answered promptly. "For the first time in my life I'm pleased at being dragged out of my morning sleep. But what does it matter who or what you are? You're lovely—the reward of the undeserving sluggard. In a moment, my dear—"

"I'm Marcia Maxon," she interrupted sharply.

"O!" His eyes and his whole face darkened, not with the ennobling cloud of anger, but with sheer annoyance. "So that's it, is it?"

"Yes," said Marcia slowly, "that's it. I came here on an impulse, and already I'm sorry."

"Why? It's I who ought to be sorry for having been such a fool as to have dodged meeting you sooner."

She scarcely heard him. "Now that I'm here, I'll stay."

"As long as you like!"

Her eyes gave him a first flash of anger. "I'm sorry," she continued, "because I realize I'm facing something for which I wasn't at all prepared. To my inexperience, what I believed I had to do was to remind you that Barbara is a dear, sweet child."

"Exactly the point," said Hugh impatiently. "Will you tell me what on earth I'd do with a dear, sweet child?"

She stared at him, nonplused. "You should have thought of that——" she half stammered.

"Nonsense!" he interrupted. "Who thought of anything? Did she? The monumental seriousness of the two of you gets my goat—as if this was the first time in history! I've told her everything she needs to know. She may have been a dear, sweet child, but in the last couple of weeks she's developed a streak of mulishness——"

A quiver ran through Marcia's erect body, leaving her spine rigid. "How could you have seen so much of Barbara and know her so little? She has an integrity you seem to ignore, an honor that won't bend even before dishonor."

"Words!" said Hugh scornfully. "If that's her brand of cake, let her eat it."

"You say that, but you can't mean it," pleaded Marcia. "She has family, tradition, everything you have yourself, and—she'll have a dowry. Don't you see there's only one thing to do—only one way out for her and for you? Listen to me. Don't think of her as a girl, a person—think of her as life itself. That's what betrayed her—not you, O, not you! For your own sake, take your chance."

AGAIN he rocked backward and forward, heel and toe, his eyes sweeping her body with thinly veiled insolence and giving the impression he had not bothered to listen. A cold, slow anger began to rise in her, and to control it her fingers tightened on the round ball of the penguin. It fitted into the palm of her hand like an apple, but had it been an apple she would have crused it into fragments. Instead it offered an iron and comforting resistance.

"Chance? What chance?" he asked vaguely, as though the words were completely dissociated from his thoughts.

"Your chance to marry her."

He laughed, an indescribable sound. It denied every familiar premise, cut down her hope at the roots. Her foundations shook at the realization everything she believed was at stake, all the undeniable truths that constitute the living body of faith—faith in oneself, faith in others.

Staring into his leering eyes, she forgot the individual and beheld only a demon, a force of evil spitting on the face of decency. At the challenge rage surged through her, setting her aflame. The sudden flood of her beauty swept away his cynicism, destroying his only strength. He passed his tongue over lax lips, his eyes watered with desire. In a moment he became loathsome.

"If it were you, now——" he murmured thickly, starting forward uncertainly.

The penguin had been her support; now with the suddenness of lightning it became her active ally. She was conscious neither of movement nor of the strength with which she hurled it; all she knew was that its beak seemed to peck at his forehead. To her horror, the ball of brass stayed there as though glued. Like a lifted veil the evil went out of his face and for an instant he became a young boy—a clean boy; then his knees sagged and he tumbled forward like a falling tree. Her veins had been on fire; now they were frozen and she stood as if turned to ice.

Only her eyes lived. They grew round and glassy as they watched a dark stain spread creepingly through the pile of the thick carpet. Slowly she came to life and made a movement toward the telephone, but stopped and stood looking down at her gloved hand, shining white against the dull black of the ebony desk. She drew it back. There was no need of a doctor to tell her Hugh Riggs was dead, no reason to call for help.

The front door stood ajar just as she had left it. She stepped into the street and turned toward Fifth avenue.

For the first time her knees actually quaked and she was grateful for the crowd waiting to cross at the change of the trafic lights. In its midst she reached the other side of the avenue and entered the bank. She went straight to the ladies' window, cashed the ready-drawn check, nodded in response to the teller's remark that it was a lovely morning, and returned to the street.

She turned westward and a moment later had singled out her car, the third from the corner.

She sank back in the deep seat with a sigh of relief. An hour—an hour to think, to find herself, to clamp her nerves in a vise of control. Strangely enough, she had a feeling of catastrophe but none of wrongdoing. Remorse or justification might come later, but for the moment the mounting anger she had felt still lived so strongly in memory as to lend to its fatal culmination the mantle of the inevitable.

On one point she had no doubt—she had destroyed evil. Was she sorry? Yes, profoundly sorry, but not for Hugh. For herself—for herself as an appointed instrument of vengeance. Had she to do it over her course would be different from the very start, but she had the intelligence to perceive the past was her most redoubtable enemy. As resolutely as she had banished it in the case of Barbara she now dismissed it from mind by a deliberate effort of the will. Either life had ended for her at the moment it had ended for Hugh or it began now.

By the time the car turned in at the gates of Shively she was not so much a composed as a remade woman.

Barbara waved to her from her window and she waved back; otherwise there was no sign of life, only peace.

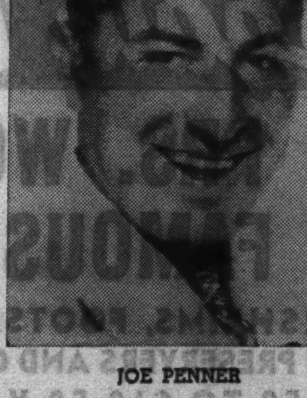
An Open Letter to Joe Penner



JOE PENNER

Dear Joe: There are times when we wonder if we are on the right track, when it seems as though past efforts and decisions have been wrong. Of course, we do make mistakes, but it is sometimes wise to be sure we are wrong before we back down. Such is the present year for you, for you are heading into a new period, beginning next year, during which you can make several advantageous changes with considerable profit and progress for at least three years thereafter. The present is a preparatory period for you, not one for the worry that may be tempting you. With best wishes, WYNN.

'You Never Know' Tries to Baffle Chicago Stage Historians

Show Recalls Stellar Debut of Leontovich

By Charles Collins.

Theater programs occasionally try to baffle the historian by omitting information about the ancestry of plays that have been adapted into new forms. For example, the musical show called "You Never Know," recently launched on the Chicago stage, fails to confess that its origin can easily be traced to the Viennese comedy called "Candle Light," in which Eugenie Leontovich made her debut as a star. Its playbill supplies all the facts about the song and dance arrangement of this plot but completely ignores its source.

Here is the text of the identity card which "You Never Know" submits to its audiences:

"Music by Cole Porter and Rex Katscher; lyrics by Cole Porter; book adapted and directed and additional lyrics by Rowland Leigh; dances by Robert Alton; settings by Albert Johnson; orchestra directed by John McManus; orchestration by Hans Spialek."

The original author was Siegfried Geyer, an Austrian playwright; and the original adaptor from German into English was none other than the eminent humorist, P. G. Wodehouse. The play was staged in New York in the season of 1929-1930, with Gertrude Lawrence in the rôle which is now handled by Lupe Velez, and was sent on tour in the spring with Eugenie Leontovich as replacement. This was the first time that this fine actress was given full stellar rank.

Footnote to Career of Eugenie Leontovich.

"Candle Light" opened in Chicago, at the Princess theater, on April 28, 1930. Reginald Owen appeared as the quizzical and amorous master, now played by Rex O'Malley, and Alan Mowbray was the masquerading valet, now played by Clifton Webb. Since that time both of these men have been extremely active in the movies. Others in that cast were Mildred Quigley, in Libby Holman's rôle; Jo Bradlee, as the jealous husband; William Blair, as the chauffeur, and Milton Roberts, as a waiter.

The play was favorably received here as a light amusement, acted with charm and skill, and had a run of four or five weeks. Its chief value, however, was to demonstrate that Miss Leontovich was capable of fulfilling the prophecies which had been made about her when she acted Mrs. Pepys in "And So to Bed" a few months before. My own review touched on this point as follows:

"Miss Leontovich, who gave a spirited account of her talent as a comedienne as Mr. Pepys' 'poor wretch' in 'And So to Bed' not long ago, returns as a star in this play. She represents a rare quality in the Russian temperament—a sunniness of mood. She is adept in carrying off scenes of banter and frolic; she has charm and piquancy of manner. Altogether, she is clearly a stellar personality."

Incidentally, the title of the play was keyed to a proverb which has dropped out of general use, to wit: "Choose neither women nor linen by candle light."

Lunts Are Coming—Six Months Hence.

Chicago subscribers to the Theater guild's programs who have been yearning vainly for Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne all season will be thrilled to learn that the First Married Couple of the American stage will probably arrive here about six months hence. The official date, when, as and if, is Nov. 28. They will give "Amphitryon 38" for three weeks, and Chekhov's "The Sea Gull" for another three weeks in the Erlanger theater. At present they are preparing for a London engagement in "Amphitryon 38."

A new translation of the "Alcestis" of Euripides, by Dudley Fitts and Robert Fitzgerald, will be staged at Harvard university, under the auspices of the Poets' theater, this month. Performances will be given on May 19, 20, and 21.

The Ann Arbor, Mich., drama festival will begin a five weeks' program on May 13. Five plays will be staged, in the following order: "The Ghost of Yankee Doodle," with Alice MacMahon; "Liliom," with Tonio Selwart; "The Late Christopher Bean," with Pauline Lord; "French Without Tears," with Doris Dalton, and "Rain from Heaven," with Jane Cowl.

"Pins and Needles," a proletarian entertainment of which the radical intelligentsia of New York think highly, will come to Chicago on May 30 for a brief engagement at the Grand Opera house. It was produced by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union for propaganda purposes and self-expression among sewing machine girls. Oddly enough, the company which was sent on tour promptly got into an argument with the theatrical managers, press agents, and treasurer's union because its publicity man did not hold a card in the latter organization. The garment workers lost the brawl.

Julia Haydon, who won Broadway's admiration this season in "Shadow and Substance," came out of the movies, and her film record contains the following titles: "Beast of the City," "The Great Meadow," "Symphony of Six Million," "Thirteen Women," "Song of the Eagle," "Golden Eagle," "Golden Harvest," "Son of the Border," "The Scoundrel," "A Son Comes Home," "The Longest Night," and "A Family Affair." She was born in Oak Park, Ill., and her right name is Donella Donaldson. "Shadow and Substance" will come to Chicago next season on the Theater guild's subscription program.

Salvador Dali to Create New Ballet Designs

Salvador Dali, prominent Spanish surrealist painter, has been commissioned to create the designs for a new ballet to be staged next year by Leonide Massine's ballet company, according to S. Hurok, general manager of the company.

In addition to painting the scenery, Dali also will write the libretto, which may or may not be intelligible to the ordinary American theatergoer, according to his previous experience with the vagaries of subconscious surrealist artistic expression.

Entitled "Tristan Fou," the ballet will draw upon the music of Wagner's "Tristan and Isolde" and a potpourri of songs by Cole Porter, musical comedy composer. Costumes will be designed by the Parisian stylist Schiaparelli, and the choreography will be conceived by Mr. Massine.

The curtain for the ballet "will depict a huge human head sleeping on a crutch, with eyes and lips in repose, and throughout the interior decor there will be numerous representations of crutches. Tristan will be patterned after Harpo Marx, and will be danced by Leonide Massine in a tousled blonde wig."

"My ballet starts at the moment when Tristan goes mad with love and the obsession by Isolde slowly devours him. This will be developed in the melancholy manner of a book on natural history where one observes the essential tragedy of the praying mantis devouring the male.

"Tristan, in the depths of despair, will make no movement excepting automatic gestures in the manner of Monsieur Marx. Suddenly, however, he will emerge from his state of hallucination, surrounded by crutches, and go into paroxysms of the most frenetic choreographical delirium."

Some years ago Dali appeared on the streets of London clad in a deep-sea diving suit with a jeweled dagger at his belt, carrying a billiard cue in one hand and leading two Russian wolfhounds with the other.

Massine's new Ballet Russe, sponsored by World-Art will make its American début at the Metropolitan Opera house in New York in October. After the New York engagement the company will entrain for a coast to coast tour, in the course of which a Chicago engagement will take place at the Auditorium theater. The list of sponsors of the new company include Julius Fleischmann of Cincinnati, O., William Hale Harkness of New York, and Chauncey McCormick of Chicago.

Greek Tragedy

Vassos Kanellos, director of the institute of Hellenic chorodrama of Athens, Greece, will present "Elektra," by Aeschylus, and a program of dances of ancient Hellas at the Goodman theater next Tuesday evening, assisted by his daughter Xenea and a company of twelve Greek girls. He is dedicating the program to the memory of his wife, Tanagra [Charlotte Markham] Kanellos, who died shortly after the program they presented at Orchestra hall a year ago.

Tanagra Kanellos was graduated from the Art Institute School of Art. She and her husband began a study of the dance forms of the early Greeks, and developed the forgotten art to a point where they were regarded as its foremost exponents. In Greece, under the patronage of the government, they gave festivals to as many as fifty thousand spectators at a time.

During the last ten years of her life Mrs. Kanellos spent much thought in reconstructing the Aeschylan tragedy, and she portrayed the rôle of Elektra in the ancient theater of Argos. Xenea will have the rôle at the memorial performance.

The program is given under the auspices of the Adult Education council of Chicago and has the sponsorship of Greek churches, Consul General D. Benetatos, and leading Greek-American citizens.

Orson Welles Revives Shaw Post-War Play

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Having startled, or at least stirred, the town with a production of Shakespeare's "Julius Cæsar" without any scenery and comparatively little Shakespeare, the Mercury theater came forward this week with a revival of George Bernard Shaw's 18 year old "Heartbreak House" that is handsomely loaded with scenery and as full of Shaw as three hours of playing time will permit it to be.

It is, in the Shaw tradition, a garrulous play. The venerable philosopher and social prophet was writing about England's gathering problems just after the world war and had a lot to say. He was, it may be recalled, in pessimistic mood. He saw the England about which he always has been of two or three minds—the England he both admires and distrusts, upholds and pillories, resents and defends—riding for a fall, and he was not only disturbed but a little disgusted as well.

Wanting to talk things over, to issue warnings and point with some alarm, he gathered together a group of eccentric characters that should represent so many living symbols of a disintegrating civilization and set them discussing the situation, each from his own viewpoint. As the master of the show he arbitrarily maneuvers them into groups of two and two and sets them talking—the big business egotist with his eye on profits and his vanity assailed; the innocuous but good little idealist who must take what he gets and learn to like it; the dominant feminists with most of their feminine virtues lost; liars, pretenders, nitwits, shirkers and old Capt. Shotover himself.

Captain Is 84 and Detached from Everything.

The captain is chief cynic and general arbiter of the debates. He is 84 and pretty thoroughly detached from everything and everybody. The captain has seen this England of his go to war—"The England that did not know how to live and found, when the test came, that all that was left to it was the boast that at least it knew how to die. Thus were the first born of 'Heartbreak House' smitten; and the young, the innocent, the hopeful expiated the folly and worthlessness of their elders." So it was written.

"It is a play filled with the biting satire and the bitter irony of one who has grown old and a little tired of fighting for ideals that were never realized by a people who never understood," I discover I wrote in November, 1920, when the New York Theater Guild sponsored the world première of this drama. "It is a little like the swan song of a discouraged prophet."

And so it is today. The discouraged prophet, however, is more vigorous in thought and protest in this play than he has been in any other play he has written since the advent of "Heartbreak House." He was old in calendar years in 1920, but the truth of his prophecies prove that he was far from being mentally fagged. We thought him so then because, while he saw England facing a physical and spiritual disintegration, we were flirting with an upswing of idealism born of a war that was to end war, and world courts that were to guarantee its end.

And now we see not only England facing these prophesied crises, but the world as well. We did not get far with our own idealism before it was wrecked on reefs of selfishness and greed and all the dominating weaknesses of humanity.

Play Has Been Given an Effective Staging.

Orson Welles and his associates of the Mercury have given the play an effective staging. A solid and handsome setting and a carefully selected cast. Mr. Welles plays Capt. Shotover, revealing a mask that could easily represent the good gray Shaw a little messily turned out—with high, shiny cheek bones and a scraggly gray beard, a loose fitting linen suit, a sagging abdomen insecurely held by a sagging belt. He is a sententious cynic, confident and defiant as he approaches the end of his life. The Welles voice is full and dominating, which helps his command of the rôle and of those scenes in which he figures. It is, I think, a notably fine characterization.

The others includy Mady Christians, George Coulouris, Erskine Sanford, Geraldine Fitzgerald, and Vincent Price. Mr. Welles did the directing, and made an excellent job of it.

Which reminds me again of the somewhat startling progress of this Welles person the last few years. It goes to prove, as I have often insisted, that any young man determined upon a stage career, with anything to give the theater worth the giving, will find a way.

Years and years ago, when I was living in Chicago, George Ade was just making the leap from newspaper work and feature story writing to the writing of stage pieces. When he wasn't working on a play, or holding down a job, he was going on trips with a sizable fat man named Orson Wells. They were buddies for years, and great travelers. A few months back, in tracing the biographical facts of young Orson Welles' life, I discovered that he was named for these two, his full name being George Orson Welles, given him by a father who was a close friend and admirer of the two pals.

Actor or Painter; Young Orson Undecided.

Young Orson also did a bit of traveling as a boy. He was undecided in school whether he wanted to be an actor or a painter. The fact that he once doubled the parts of Antony and Cæsar in a school production of "Julius Cæsar" may have been the deciding factor. At any rate he was traveling Europe as a student of art the year he was 16 when he decided on a stage career. That was the summer he acted at the Gate theater in Dublin, and told its directors that he had had his early training with the Theater Guild in New York.

It took him a year or two after that to find a place in his native theater. Guthrie McClintic and Katharine Cornell helped him to that when they took him on the road to play, first, Mercutio, and then Tybalt, to the Cornell Juliet. It was while he was playing with them that he met John Houseman and they started out to find backers for certain experimental things they wanted to do in the theater.

We have the WPA Federal theater to thank for giving them their chance; and for the voodoo "Macbeth," the popular "Dr. Faustus," and the slightly startling "Cradle Will Rock" that followed close upon that chance. We have the same Federal theater to thank for chasing them out of that organization in search of a theater of their own. And for all that the Mercury theater has accomplished since then.

Which reminds me that I have several queries from upstate New York, and particularly from my friends in Buffalo, regarding a proposed trouping of the New York State Federal theater production of Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion" to such state centers as Buffalo, Albany, Syracuse, and other towns between here and there. What do I think of that?

I think very well of it. No other state unit has done better work than that Roslyn unit supervised by Charles Hopkins. Their work deserves to be sent around a state circuit at least. Their "Coriolanus" their "Captain Jinks" and their "Pygmalion" should be toured, though I suppose the "Coriolanus" is too heavy to transport.

Holman's Record

If Libby Holman had followed the advice of her father, she would now be an attorney-at-law. As a girl in Cincinnati, which is her home, she received the degrees of bachelor of arts and bachelor of legal letters from Cincinnati university. When she came to New York to take her M. A. degree at Columbia university the bright lights of the theater proved more enticing than the study of law.

She applied for a small part in a touring company of "The Fool" and it was Channing Pollok, the author of the play, who discovered her voice. Back in New York, she sang in the first edition of the "Garrick Gayeties," then later went on tour in the "Greenwich Village Follies." Then followed "Americana" and "Three's a Crowd." Her voice, say her friends, is due to a trick of nature which has placed her palate an eighth of an inch askew.

For three years, Miss Holman has been in retirement, although she has tried dramatic acting in summer stock companies.

It is reported that a trust company in Baltimore which administers her financial affairs will not permit her to travel with "You Never Know," her present show, beyond Chicago.

Picking Liberal Arts College Is Involved Task

[This is the sixth of a series of articles on the selection of a college or university. While he will not recommend specific schools, Dr. Evans will answer questions which will amplify this series.]

By the Rev. John Evans.

The involved task of selecting a liberal arts college is now before several hundred thousand high school seniors of the country. Some educational directories have listed more than 600 of these institutions scattered over the country.

Many prospective college students will desire to reduce this number to the 300 colleges accredited by regional associations such as the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Others will be still more selective and consider only the 152 colleges approved by the strict American Association of Universities.

Reference to liberal arts and undergraduate departments of universities has already been made in this series. Further discussion of these departments will be made in subsequent articles.

The 29 exclusively liberal arts colleges of the six states of the general Chicago area which are approved by the A. A. U. are listed in a table accompanying this article.

[Additional technical schools approved as such by the A. A. U. in this area will be listed later when technical training and engineering education is discussed.]

If a student is interested in a college lying outside the Chicago area there is no reason why he should not apply the same standards as suggested here.

In a previous table the thirty-two A. A. U. liberal arts colleges of the country having plant equipment valued at $2,000,000 or more were listed. Less than half of the 152 standard colleges have equipment valued at more than $1,000,000. Because land values vary so greatly without effecting educational resources it seemed best to deduct the value of grounds from all tables published in this series.

The importance of equipment value is obvious. But care should be used in interpreting the accompanying and previous equipment value tables of this series. For instance, some colleges and universities make no dormitory provisions for students, others make partial provision in this respect. Where full dormitory provisions are made the per student value of equipment is relatively high. Where no dormitories are maintained the comparative equipment value per student is greatly decreased.

Also, it must be borne in mind that it has cost a lot more money to build good dormitories for 2,000 students than for 300. On the other hand, a good telescope will cost the same for a college of 300 students as for a college of 2,000 students; in this case, the gross investment rather than the per student investment is the important thing. The per student column under investments and the gross investment column shown in this and other tables therefore supplement and interpret each other with somewhat greater weight going to the per student column.

In interpreting endowment tables it should be remembered that many notable colleges and universities are operated by religious orders as a portion of those orders' social and religious obligations. Such contributions constitute a portion of the endowment which cannot be figured in dollars and cents.

The most important thing in any college is its faculty. How may faculties be judged? Many factors are involved. In the truest sense, a good teacher is born, not made. That is to say, if he does not have the original gift, the quickening spirit, then no amount of learning will make him a good teacher.

But it is fair to measure the teacher's academic training in terms of the standard academic degrees and his professional achievement. It is not wholly unreasonable to suggest, with certain notable exceptions, that, by and large, the highest paid faculty may be preferred. Clews to this comparison, except for Catholic higher education, may be found in this week's comparative endowment tables.

Doctors' degrees [not honorary] represent the highest formal degree obtainable in a specialized field. Therefore, the percentage of the faculty members holding earned doctors' degrees should be at least a weighty discriminating factor. Then, what has the faculty member done to distinguish himself aside from the classroom or laboratory? Has he written books or articles which have been widely recognized? Has he been recognized by learned bodies? Has he been an officer in his professional societies? If so, he is likely to be listed in "Who's Who."

Tables next Sunday will show percentages of faculties holding earned doctorate degrees and of those listed in "Who's Who" of the colleges listed in this week's table. A few noted eastern colleges will be added in the interest of statistical control.

[The seventh of this series will discuss the relation of liberal arts education with professional training. John Robert Van Pelt of Rosenwald Museum of Science and Industry and president of the Chicago area of the Engineers' Council for Professional Development will assist in this discussion.]

Urges Problem Be Confronted with Honesty

By Edward Barry.

Every boy or girl who is busy cultivating his voice or working away at his piano or violin has somewhere in the back of his head the notion that he should go to Europe soon for a few years of study. In most cases the sheer impossibility of begging, borrowing, or stealing the necessary money prevents the notion from growing into anything disturbingly strong. Those others—who have, or could conceivably obtain, the financial backing for such a venture—hang miserably on the horns of a dilemma as the time for their decision approaches.

To the question, "Is it or is it not advisable for me to go to Europe to study?" no facile answer can be made. To tell a student that American wealth has brought all the best teachers to America and that it is silly to travel 4,000 miles to enroll under their inferiors is as completely misleading as to inform him solemnly that this country is vowed to materialism and that an artist cannot live and grow in such an atmosphere.

Because both of these standard answers boast a surface plausibility the unthinking youngster is apt to accept one or the other as truth and to seriously cripple himself as a result. The only honest way to confront such a problem is to analyze it dispassionately on the basis of what passes for common sense. Here, then, is an attempt to do just that.

Urges Two Preliminary Cautions Be Taken.

There is little chance of making an intelligent decision on anything unless you are willing to take two preliminary cautions. First: Ask yourself exactly what you want. Second: Fix these desires so firmly in mind that you will not be distracted by irrelevancies when the time comes to choose between two or more proffered goods or between two or more possible courses of action.

A farmer who is in the market for an old station wagon in which to fetch his summer boarders and their luggage from the railroad depot must clarify his requirements and impress them deeply on himself before he goes into town to choose among the many vehicles which will be offered for his inspection. Otherwise he may return driving a beige convertible coupé with aerial, heater, and defrosters. The car is doubtless very nice—but it is not at all the thing he wanted!

If this reasoning be accepted as valid, the fallacy underlying the first of the standard answers to the puzzled music student becomes fully apparent. Even if American money has brought all the best teachers here [and the statement is not literally true, of course] the possibility remains that the student does not particularly want the best teachers. This whole facile solution of the matter is unintelligent because it takes too much for granted. What if the student wants something other than the best instruction?

Discounts Search for Idealistic Atmosphere.

Atmosphere, perhaps? Here the sponsor of the second solution comes hopefully into the picture with the statement that a materialistic country like America cannot provide the proper conditions for a music student. This is such arrant nonsense, such a honeycomb of falsehood, that a volume rather than a fraction of a column should be devoted to an attack on it!

In the first place, what country would you recommend for a genuinly idealistic atmosphere? Germany? France? Italy? This is no time for nonsense. Perhaps Atlantis, when it reëmerges, will be found to possess the proper nonmaterialistic spirit.

And just what are the proper conditions for a music student? Simply the chance to work with good teachers and the opportunity to associate with a few people who believe in the importance of art. Berwyn may be Weimar and Hegewisch the Faubourg St. Antoine if only these simple requirements can be met. Starry eyed students should be reminded at intervals of the mythical character of all stories about Europe's lack of sordidness and about the intense preoccupation of her people with art and with the search for the beautiful.

Solution Depends on What Student Wants.

Something reasonably fruitful results when we apply the analogy of the farmer and his car to the case of the music student trying to choose a course of action. Before asking himself whether he shall go to Europe or not let him pose the following question: "Exactly what do I want?" The solution of the larger problem must depend entirely on his answer.

Suppose he says "the best instruction." Then America can certainly provide it, and he will save himself the trouble and expense of an 8,000 mile round trip. If he declares that atmosphere and the society of people sympathetic to art are the things which he desires, then, in this case, too, the conservatories of the large American cities can give him much of what he wants.

But what if a student is of a practical turn of mind and insists on conducting a profoundly searching, rather than superficial, self-examination? What if he refuses to mouth any nonsense about the things which he should want and comes right out with a bold announcement of what he really does want? Suppose he shouts just one word—"PRESTIGE!"

Well, that is a different thing. The arguments patriotically advanced earlier in this article lose most of their validity. If our student is willing to leave without any illusions as to what he is really after, if he carries in his cranium the cynical knowledge that even a few foreign stamps on his luggage are more apt to impress the home folks than a degree from a great American foundation, then, by all means, let him pack his grip and go!

We may, it is true, question the ultimate value of this prestige and demand a more philosophical examination of the entire problem, but we cannot deny that the departing student has made an honest decision on the basis of relevant facts. Our good wishes, like the gulls, should follow him.

FESTIVAL SOLOIST

Helen Jepson, soprano of the Metropolitan and Chicago Opera companies, will sing in Patten gymnasium, Evanston, on the evening of May 21. This concert, which will feature a galaxy of musical talent, is to be the fourth and last event of the Northwestern university music festival.

Notes of Music and Musicians

Marie Sidenius Zendt, popular Chicago soprano, will give her first downtown recital of the year in the Cordon club lounge Tuesday evening. Her program includes songs by four Chicago composers, Felix Borowski's "Love and Memory," Herbert Hyde's "As a Bird," Una Howell Cook's "Robin, Is It Spring?" and Mary Cameron's "Music Critic's Hymn of Hate." This last named work, written in 1920, satirizes the Sunday afternoon activities of the music critics hastening from concert to concert, and besides references to some critics still living, also lampoons such favorite writers of the last generation as Edward C. Moore and Karleton Hackett. Miss Cameron, whose opera satire "Hi Eda" made life bright at the Cordon club in 1936, will accompany Mrs. Zendt in her hymn of hate and will also play a light hearted group of piano solos.

Marie Sidenius Zendt.

The Second symphony by Randall Thompson, now of Berkeley, Cal., and formerly of Concord, Mass., will receive a belated Chicago hearing this afternoon at the hands of the Illinois Symphony orchestra, Izler Solomon, conductor, in the Great Northern theater. This symphony made a favorable impression when its première was broadcast several seasons ago by Serge Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony orchestra, and has been played by a number of orchestras since that time.

Not to be confused with Virgil Thomson, composer of the Gertrude Stein opera "Four Saints in Three Acts," Mr. Thompson is well known in college and university circles for his book, "College Music," a survey evaluating and severely criticizing the teaching of music in American colleges, prepared and published under the sponsorship of the Carnegie Foundation. Earlier he had held a Guggenheim fellowship for composition and study abroad. Until the performance of his symphony he was better known as a choral than as an orchestral composer. His choral works include "Americana," a set of humorous settings of passages from the old American Mercury; five austere "Odes of Horace," and "The Peaceable Kingdom." He is now a member of the music faculty of the University of California.

The program selected by Mr. Solomon for this afternoon contains two other novelties, Louis Aubert's "Habanera" and Leos Janacek's "Wallachian Dances." Of the "Habanera," first played in Paris in 1916, Edward Burlingame Hill writes, "In this short score there is a dramatic concentration, an expression of poetry and human emotion, a genuine inspiration far beyond its modest dimensions."

Janacek, little known in the United States, is the composer of the opera "Jenufa," given at the Metropolitan Opera house more than a decade ago. Vaclav Stepan, Czech critic, compares the terseness and intuitive dramatic qualities of Janacek's music to the similar qualities in the works of Moussorgsky.

The complete program for the day, which engages the services of David Moll, violinist, as soloist, follows:

Overture to "Anacréon"............Cherubini
Symphony No. 2....................Thompson
[First time in Chicago]
Poème, for Violin and Orchestra....Chausson
[David Moll]
Habanera ....Aubert
[First time in Chicago]
Wallachian Dances.....................Janacek
[First time in America]

The series of Beethoven chamber concerts will continue Tuesday evening at Federal Music project headquarters, 632 North Dearborn street, with the following program played by Marion Hall, pianist; Jenska Slebos, cellist; Fritz Siegal, violinist, and the Forum String quartet:

Sonata, A major, for Cello and Piano, Opus 69
String Quartet, B-flat major, Opus 18, No. 6
Sonata, F major, for Violin and Piano, Opus 24

On Friday evening at Federal Music project headquarters the National Youth orchestra of thirty players from 18 to 25 years old will play under the direction of Herbert Pyne.

Gunner Johansen, Danish pianist from California, completes his ambitious series of twelve historical recitals on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons of this week in Breasted hall at the University of Chicago. Tuesday's program lists César Franck's "Prelude, Chorale, and Fugue," six Debussy preludes, and Reger's "Variations on a Theme by J. S. Bach." The final program Thursday includes Reger's "Variations on a Theme by Telemann," "Six Little Piano Pieces," opus 19, by Schönberg, the Fifth Sonata of Scriabin, Ravel's "Gaspard de la Nuit," and three movements from Stravinsky's "Petrouchka."

The Ridge Music festival, formerly called the Morgan Park May festival, will take place Saturday evening at Fenger High school auditorium. The Salvi harp ensemble will be featured artists.

Allene Cunningham, 16 year old coloratura soprano, and Goodwin Samuel, 12 year old pianist, will be soloists with the Carl Craven Ladies' chorus in Kimball hall Tuesday evening.

For its final Lake Shore Athletic club concert of the season the Lake Shore-Hamilton Male chorus, Harry S. Walsh, director, will enjoy the assisting art of Walter Pontius, B. Fred Wise, Earle Wilkie, Edward Stack, and John Macdonald Monday evening.

The Creative Dance guild will present its second annual spring recital this evening at Forester hall, 1016 North Dearborn street. The principal ballet is "Kaspar Hauser," choreographed by Charlyss Hinds, the guild's dance director, from the novel by Jacob Wasserman.

Sussex Festival

At the annual Glyndebourne opera festival in Sussex, England, opening May 21, Verdi's nearly forgotten "Macbeth" will be performed for the first time in England, with a cast including the American soprano, Franca Somigli [Marian Clark.] Other operas to be mounted include Donizetti's "Don Pasquale" and Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" and "Cosi Fan Tutte."

Reappointed

Nadia Boulanger, distinguished French musician and teacher, who has been in this country since February giving instruction at Radcliffe college, Wellesley college and the Longy School of Music in Cambridge, Mass., has accepted reappointment in the two last named institutions for next winter.

Mlle. Boulanger, who number several leading American composers among her pupils, won a striking success with the Boston Symphony orchestra last February, when she played the organ part of Saint-Saëns' Third symphony and conducted a memorial performance of the "Requiem" of Gabriel Fauré.

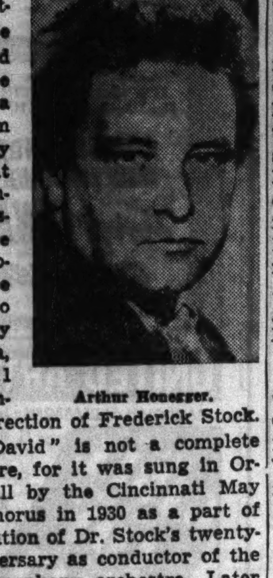
She is a chevalier of the Legion of Honor and a graduate of the Paris conservatory. A pupil of Fauré and Guilmant, she is a noted organist, and at one time belonged to the staf of the Church of the Madeline in Paris. In recent years she has been head of the department of theory and composition at the Ecole Normale de Musique in Paris, and has taught in Fontainebleau in the summer.

Mlle. Boulanger appeared as organist with several American orchestras twelve years ago, but did not play with the Chicago Symphony orchestra.

Honegger Work to Be Heard at Evanston Fete

By Cecil Smith.

Arthur Honegger's symphonic psalm, "King David," one of the best choral works written since the world war, will be given a week from Tuesday evening at the Northwestern festival by the festival chorus, the Chicago Symphony orchestra, and vocal soloists, under the direction of Frederick Stock.



Arthur Honegger.

"King David" is not a complete novelty here, for it was sung in Orchestra hall by the Cincinnati May Festival chorus in 1930 as a part of the celebration of Dr. Stock's twenty-fifth anniversary as conductor of the Chicago Symphony orchestra. Later it was sung in Evanston, so that next week's performance is the second at an Evanston festival.

Arthur Honegger's name is fairly well known to the musical public of Chicago. Back in 1925 he created an international sensation by writing a symphonic movement called "Pacific [231]," which attempted with some literalness and much cacophony to translate into tone the physical and emotional life of a French locomotive as it pulled the crack Blue Train through the night from Paris toward the Riviera. Not everybody liked "Pacific [231]," and very few discovered that its apparently incomprehensible dissonances hid so tried and true an academic formula of composing as double counterpoint. In recent years the piece has largely dropped out of the répertoire, which is just as well, for Honegger has done better things.

Mary Garden Sings Here in Opera "Judith."

Two years later Mary Garden added her bit to the story of Honegger in Chicago by appearing with the Chicago Civic Opera company in the opera "Judith." Originally scheduled for hearing in November, 1926, the score presented such difficulties to both cast and orchestra that the première had to be postponed until the last Thursday of the season. The opera was repeated Saturday afternoon, but it had not developed much of a following in two days, and the performance was hardly a commercial success. [A revival in January, 1929, produced similar results at the box office.]

More attention was centered upon Miss Garden's colorful dealings with Holophernes [Cesare Formichi] than upon the music, and probably most Chicagoans who heard "Judith" could not tell you what it sounded like, beyond recalling that it bore little or no resemblance to "Aïda," or to anything else ever heard on land or sea.

The month of January, 1929, saw more attention focused upon Honegger than any month before or since. At the very time that "Judith" was revived at the opera house the composer and his comely wife, a neat pianist named Andrée Vaurabourg, visited Chicago as guests of the Chicago Symphony orchestra. Honegger conducted a program consisting wholly of his own works, including a stillborn piece about football called "Rugby," and Mme. Honegger played the concertino for piano and orchestra, a thoroughly charming composition, and the one the audience liked much the best of all. Since 1929 the orchestra has not interested itself extensively in Honegger's music.

Honegger Born in France of Swiss Parents.

Honegger was born in France of Swiss parents in 1892. His early experience was of a conventional sort, including years of study with such capable teachers as Gédalge, Widor, and d'Indy in Paris. His Swiss heritage has kept him somewhat apart from the main stream of French music, for while he has not been wholly un-Gallic, he has also felt the influence of such Teutonic composers as Strauss, Reger, Wagner, and Schönberg. He has, however, made Paris the center of his operations and may be classed accurately as a French composer.

No other work of Honegger has achieved either such enduring success or such great popularity as the symphonic psalm, "King David." The first version was written at terrific speed for use as part of a dramatic performance of a play, "Le Roi David," given by the brothers René and Jean Morax at the Jorat Art theater in Mézières, near Lausanne, Switzerland. The occasion was one of special importance, for the important Swiss art theater, founded in 1903, had been closed during the war years, and was reopened with "Le Roi David." Only a limited number of orchestral players were available for the performance and Honegger wrote the original score for a chamber orchestra composed mainly of woodwind, brass, and percussion instruments.

In its original form "Le Roi David" was successful, but Honegger was fired with a desire to rework it in a form more generally useful. Consequently he set to work to revise it for concert performance, retaining the original text written by René Morax, but expanding the orchestra and choral resources. The dramatic action was given to a narrator, who related the incidents of the play between musical movements.

Psalm Is Series of 27 Varied Movements.

This revised "symphonic psalm," as it will be heard in Evanston, is a series of twenty-seven short, varied movements, separated by the remarks of the narrator. A full symphony orchestra, a large chorus, and soprano, contralto, and tenor soloists are required for its performance.

Musically "King David" is a clever confusion of styles, some old and some new. At its most dissonant it is never frightening and at its best it is extraordinarily beautiful. The choral parts are written with wonderful understanding of voices and of the sort of music that makes voices sound best. The outpouring of alleluias at the end of the first half, and the return of these alleluias at the end over a sturdy chorale in the bass; the blazing climax of the Dance Before the Ark as the chorus moves onto a fortissimo F major chord as splendidly resounding as the similar climactic chord in Beethoven's Ninth symphony; the eerie strangeness of the Incantation of the Witch of Endor; the rapturous lyric tenor and soprano solos; the poignant wailing lament of the daughters of Israel over the death of Saul; the melting music describing the death of David—these are high spots in one of the strongest, most affecting, and most completely interesting choral works the twentieth century has produced.

Current Music News

The two winners of the 1938 Musical guild contest will appear in joint recital at Kimball hall Thursday evening. They are Ella Steele, soprano, and Raymond Hanson, pianist. Miss Steele is a native of Alabama and has studied with Harriet Case since coming to Chicago. Mr. Hanson, an 18 year old native of Evanston, is a pupil of Walter Knupfer and has played with the Illinois and De Paul university symphony orchestras.

Two prominent national groups are represented in the week's music calendar. This afternoon in Orchestra hall the Swedish Glee club will sing under the direction of Harry T. Carlson. The soloist is Edna Swanson Ver Haar, well known Swedish-American concert soprano. On Wednesday night in the same hall the Chicago Welsh Male choir will give its fourteenth annual recital under Robert Gomer Jones, with John Patrick, bass, as guest soloist and William Notley Hughes as accompanist.

Mabel Malarcher, Negro soprano, who won the south side portion of the Chicagoland Music festival contest in 1937, will sing in Kimball hall Wednesday evening. On the same evening William Franklin, Negro baritone who sang in a performance of "Aïda" at the Civic Opera house last December, will give a benefit recital for the Olde Tymers' club, the members of which are interested in the problem of delinquent boys at the Juvenile court.

Giovanni Polifronio, Greek violinist, will give his annual Kimball hall recital this afternoon, scheduling works by Tartini, Paganini, Wienlawski, Saint-Saëns, Sarasate, Tschaikowsky, Bazzini, and Polifronio.

A performance of "Samson and Delilah" by students of Zerline Muhlman Metzger in Kimball hall Friday night will present in the leading rôles Margie Mayer, contralto engaged for the next City opera season; George Barnard, tenor; Lionel Godow, baritone, and Robert Miller, bass. Mrs. Metzger will accompany at the piano.

Michael Signorelli, the friendly little Orchestra hall usher who presides over the balcony floor, will lift his tenor voice in song at the Woman's Club theater next Sunday evening. His program includes an extreme rarity, the dramatic and difficult scena from Rossini's all but forgotten opera, "The Lady of the Lake."

Little Known Mozart Opus Is Put on Record

Alfred Wallenstein, who was first cellist with the Chicago Symphony from 1922 to 1929 and who now enjoys radio fame as a conductor, recently brought his Sinfonietta [a small orchestra] to the studios of the Columbia Phonograph company to make a sparkling recording of Mozart's practically unknown Symphony No. 25 in G minor. The first movement is rather roughly assertive and is definitly outside of the suave Mozartian idiom to which we are accustomed. But after a few hearings, when the shock of experiencing the unexpected is over, its youthful spontaneity becomes quite winning. The second movement is one of the most benignly lovely pieces of music in all Mozart.

The other G Minor Symphony, one of the great Mozart Trilogy [Symphonies 39, 40, and 41] has also been newly recorded. Sir Thomas Beecham and the London Philharmonic orchestra present it in all its wonder, freshening its familiar themes with new delicacies of color and shape.

Following this procession of classical symphonies is the Columbia recording of the Beethoven Symphony No. 1 in C major. Conducted by Felix Weingartner, outstanding Beethoven interpreter of the day, the new pressing is all that one can ask in a faithful reproduction of this monumental work. Most exciting single feature of the performance is the virtuosity of the Vienna Philharmonic's string section.

On an excellent ten inch Columbia pressing Egon Petri effectively plays the bravura Rigoletto Paraphrase of Liszt.

Snow White fans, embarrassed about making their fourth or fifth trip to see the movie, can now sit comfortably at home enjoying bright mental images to the accompaniment of the complete musical score of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," available in a Decca recording. What with the sugary singing and talking of Snow White [Zora Layman], the buffoonery of the dwarfs, and the animals [the Clubmen], and the whistling of Bob MacGimsey, the story comes amazingly to life. It is outlined by Frank Luther.

Canada Drama Festival.

Every province in Canada will be represented in the Dominion Drama festival, a tournament of little theater groups, which will be held in Winnipeg during the week of May 16. Seventeen plays are entered, including "The Petrified Forest," "The Guardsman," and "Cradle Song." Barrett H. Clark will be the judge.

Clifton Webb Began Career as Boy Actor

Having finished a term in Hollywood, where he received an exorbitant salary and never worked a day, Clifton Webb is back in the legitimate theater, and his latest assignment is the leading rôle in the Cole Porter musical show, "You Never Know." Webb became a dancer in an unusual way. After spending some time in the chorus of the Boston Opera company and then appearing in the chorus of a few musical comedies on Broadway he found a position at a night club on Broadway.

His partner was a girl whose name he has forgotten, but while dancing with her he was seen by Mae Murray. She asked if he would like to join her act as her dancing partner. He accepted the offer and for some time danced with the most glamorous cabaret figure of her time.

He began as a child actor in "Huckleberry Finn." After his partnership with Miss Murray came small rôles in musical comedies until he emerged in "Sunny" [1925] as a definite personality. His first notable success was in the "First Little Show" in 1929.

Lake Geneva Acting.

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

KIND: College-football film musical.

ACTING: Ordinary. None of the featured players, with the exception of Raymond Walburn as dean, Walter Connolly as a movie star manager, Jimmy Durante playing dumb, and Gertrude Niesen as college pep girl and swing singer, have an ounce of personality. And the good ones have such asinine rôles that they don't register much.

DIALOG: Uninteresting.

MUSIC: Nothing to hum about.

DIRECTION: Better than the story deserves.

STORY: About the efforts of a noble movie idol who quits pictures because he wants to go to college, and the endeavors of producers, his manager, and other interested parties to make him fail in the halls of learning so's he'll have to return to Hollywood and resume feathering their nests. It is all very silly and forced.

PHOTOGRAPHY, ETC: All right.
AUDIENCE APPEAL: 0000.

See you tomorrow.

New Deal in Drama.

ON BILL AT CONRGESS CASINO

Downey Comes to Chez Paree Next Friday

The Chez Paree placed the Three Diamond Brothers and the Frazee Sisters on its bill last Friday night, to remain as headliners for a week. Next Friday night Morton Downey, tenor, will begin an engagement which will continue until June 3. Then a summer bill will be presented with three stellar acts—Cross and Dunn, Helen Morgan, and Mary Raye and Naldi, a dance team from New York. On July 22 Abe Lyman's orchestra will come to the Chez Paree for a stay until early in the fall.

● The Villa Moderne, suburban café at Skokie highway and County Line road, will open next Thursday with Carlos Molina and his orchestra. This will be one of the first engagements of a nationally known band in a Chicago suburban café. Molina's previous Chicago engagements have been in hotel dining rooms. He will have eleven men in his band, and Margaret Myers will be the vocalist. Wendell Philips and his group will play the intermission music.

● Eddy Duchin's orchestra began an engagement in the Empire Room of the Palmer House last Thursday night. The date marked the fifth anniversary of this establishment, and a birthday cake weighing nearly 200 pounds was used in the ceremony. Members of the original Abbott ballet, now married and retired, attended. This group of Empire Room alumnæ included "Peaches" Dahl, Evelyn Ocen, Mildred Olsen, and May Haas.

● Mary Williams Kilpatrick, soprano, sings operatic and popular numbers on the bills of dinner entertainment at L'Aiglon restaurant. She is a Chicagoan, born in Wales, who sang professionally in Europe before coming to this country on a concert tour. George Bay's orchestra plays dance and concert numbers.

● College Inn is preparing to offer an ice skating cabaret show with Inga and Helga Brandt, young Swiss professionals, as its stars. Other performers will be Kit Klein, speed skater; Robert Scott, figure skater; Bobby Hearn, barrel jumper; Duke and Noble, comedy skaters; Vida and Ucksilla, dancing skaters, and six ice ballet girls.

● Mona Leslie, "exotic" dancer, has joined the floor show at Harry's New York cabaret. Other entertainers are Cliff Winehill, comedian and master of ceremonies; Rita Renaud, French singer; Ellen Kay, singer; Natasha, dancer; Betty La Vonne, dancer; Art Buckley's singing quintet, and Charles Engel's dance band.

● Boyd Raeburn's orchestra continues in the Congress Casino, with Lorraine as soloist. Other entertainers are Betty and Jane Kean, dancers and singers; Jackie Green, comedian and impersonator; Mat Manteria, Spanish dancer, and eight ballet girls.

● The Blackhawk café offers Bon Crosby's dance band, Billy and Joy Severin, tap dancers, and Marion Mann, singer.

● The Trianon ballroom starts its summer schedule today with Ray Pearl's orchestra. Dance nights will be on Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday during the warm weather period. . . . Ted Weems' band will end its engagement in the Aragon ballroom next Sunday.

● Marvin Frederic, pianist, and dance band leader, is making his Chicago debut in the Continental Room of the Stevens Hotel. The bill also contains Shayne and Armstrong, dancers, and Milbourne Christopher, magician.

● The Royale Frolics continues to offer Sid Tomack and the Reis Brothers and Dolly Kay as stars. The revue also contains Dawn and Darrow, ballroom and adagio dancers; Emile and Evelyn, acrobats; Anita Jakobi, acrobatic and control dancer; Mark Fisher, tenor; Jackie Hilliard, singer, and a ballet of thirty girls. The dance music is by Mark Fisher's orchestra, Al Turk's swing band, and a third relief band.

● Ada Leonard, "parade" dancer, is the star of the new revue at Colosimo's, which opened last Thursday. Holdover performers are Eddie White, master of ceremonies, and Yvette Rugal, operetta singer. New are Jerry and Turk, dancers; Hazel Manjean and her four girl acrobats; Waller and Lee, comic dancers, and Jean Scott, specialty dancer with the ballet of twelve girls. Henri Gendron's orchestra plays for public dancing.

● The Limehouse has a floor show Saturdays and Sundays, and Jerry Glidden's dance band nightly.

● Gibby's café offers piano and electric organ playing by Sammy Williams. . . . Dancing on Wednesday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday is announced by the remodeled Cocoanut Grove, at Dempster and Waukegan roads. Husk O'Hare's orchestra plays.

● A new floor show is on view at the Club Minuet. Benny Dugoll's Casino Boys play for dancing. . . . Billy Carr is master of ceremonies at the 606 Club. The show contains ten acts and runs for one hour.

● The show at the Club Alabam contains Harriet Norris, singer and mistress of ceremonies; Mary Stone, tap dancing soubrette; Andrée Faye, control and acrobatic dancer; Effie Burton, prima donna, and the singing Paramount Trio. There are three dance bands.

Six Concerts

The Berkshire symphonic festival promises six concerts of outstanding caliber at Tanglewood, the festival's outdoor music shed, near Lenox, Mass., beginning Aug. 4. The Boston Symphony orchestra under Serge Koussevitzky will play all six concerts.

At the opening concert the Cecilia society of Boston will join with the orchestra in Beethoven's Ninth symphony. At an all-Wagner concert Aug 11, the closing scene of "Die Walküre" and the complete last act of "Siegfried" will be given with vocal soloists.

Symphonies scheduled include Beethoven's Sixth ["Pastoral"], Brams' Second, Sibelius' First, and Tschaikowsky's Sixth ["Pathetic"].

Shorter works include the Brahms "Variations on a Theme by Haydn," Sibelius' "Tapiola," Debussy's "La Mer," Ravel's "Mother Goose" suite, the "Spanish Caprice" of Rimsky-Korsakoff, Respighi's "The Pines of Rome," and the "Lieutenant Kijé" suite of Prokofieff.

American composers will be represented by a work by Henry Hadley played in his memory [Hadley was the first conductor of the Berkshire Symphonic festival], Aaron Copland's "Music for the Theater," and Walter Piston's "Concerto for Orchestra."

Eliot in Operetta.

John Eliot, tenor, former soloist at St. James Methodist Episcopal church on the south side of Chicago, will play an important rôle in the New York Light Opera guild's production of "The Sun Dance," an operetta by William F. Hanson of Salt Lake City, Utah.

Veterans of Music Halls.

The Briants, acrobats who support Ed Wynn in "Hooray for What!" current in New York, celebrated their thirty-first stage anniversary recently. In their years of traveling over the world the Briants have changed their act only four times.

Club Leaders Eye General Conclave

By Betty Browning.

A verse from the Book of Proverbs, "For I give you good doctrin, forsake ye not My law," has been chosen as the theme appropriate to the triennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, opening Tuesday in Kansas City, Mo. Many Illinois leaders already are in Missouri for preliminary sessions, and a record delegation leaves tomorrow morning on the Seymour Special train, named for Mrs. Walter W. Seymour, Chicago's candidate for first vice president of the federation.

The contest for first vice president between Mrs. Seymour, present second vice president, and Mrs. John L. Whitehurst of Maryland, chairman of education, promises to be one of the interesting events of the convention. Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar of Oregon, present first vice president, is the undisputed candidate to succeed Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, retiring president.

Surgeon General Thomas Parran of the United States public health service, who has distinguished himself by his fight against syphilis, and J. Edgar Hoover, director of the federal bureau of investigation, will be among the principal speakers on the program, which will be dedicated to a consideration of the federation's work in relation to contemporary problems.

Dr. Parran will speak Friday evening on "A Forward Look at National Health," and Mr. Hoover will speak the closing night on "Crime Prevention Through Education of Youth." Edward C. Lawson, son of the federation

Beauties Storm William Acton London Studio

By Cousin Eve.

A new painting man in London has taken the world of art by storm. He is William Acton, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Acton of Florence, Italy, and consequently of Chicago origins. His mother was Hortense Acton, a much younger half-sister of the late John J. Mitchell, the early day banker. As Hortense Mitchell she was a chic blonde belle of Chicago.

The Actons have an old papal villa, La Pietra, on a hilly street called Vio Bolognese. Its high walls encircle five villas. One that the Actons have leased to Greek royalties is buried in pink and red oleanders. This famous house was built by Cardinal Coppini in 1453 and is a museum of magnificent furniture dating from those early times. The Actons have rebuilt the gardens themselves, a labor of love, for they had been neglected for centuries. I especially remember the lemon trees in pots along the brick walls, and the huge bright potted geraniums along the terrace. For the most part the gardens themselves are green and the little paths paved with patterns of smooth stones.

Brought up in an atmosphere of beauty, what wonder that William Acton has developed something new in portraiture? He paints beautiful women of London as marble statues, or with head and shoulders on a pedestal thrown against a background of stormy sky and sea. He paints lovely faces en profile like Greek cameos, suspended by a ribbon to a paneled wall. Or he sees them in rough plaster, modeled with character and style, but always with an astonishing background, throwing the portrait into strong relief.

One of his patrons is the beautiful countess of Rosse, but then, half the beauties of London are storming his studios and lately his mother has arrived to stay the season with her son. Sailing last week to enjoy the gayety of the London season is Guy Mitchell, uncle of William Acton, a resident now of California.

The Society of Colonial Dames has branches in many states of our Union and has for its aims a number of patriotic and constructive things. Its meetings are for the most part in private drawing rooms, and agreeably social, but veiled in that sort of freemasonry which an order binds upon its members. Now and then the Colonial Dames of Chicago have an open meeting, when near friends are invited in to hear a special program and partake of refreshments.

In order to belong to the Society of Colonial Dames several requisites loom before the aspirant. First, one must begin with one's ancestors prior to 1776, and ascertain if the dear old things held office with the colonial government.

If not, and this is a matter to be proved by book and seal and without the shadow of a doubt, one's ambitions are vain. Grandpop must have labored for the colonials in a titular sense, or one's feet cannot stand upon the first rung of the ladder. Next, a member of the Colonial Dames in the state where grandpa resided must put you up for membership. And after that hurdle has been jumped the aspirant must be invited by the local chapter to join. But before this is done the prospect is put over the jumps as to papers and tombstones and family trees and whatever. And then she is considered as to her personality and character, which she may or may not be elected a Colonial Dame of America.

The point of my narrative is that on June 11 Miss Harriet Stuart, who is a Stuart of Scotland first, and entitled to use the royal Stuart crest, and does, too, is giving a gay Colonial Dames luncheon at Shore Acres. This is in honor of the new president, Mrs. John Crerar, one of Chicago's most charming women. After the lunch at this small, exclusive farmhouse club, hidden among lilacs on the lake bluff, the entire party, about sixty in all, will go over to the Garden club show at the Bevans' new house. Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Dean Bevan have recently bought the late Noble Judah's French farm, where for a few years after the war he lived so happily. It is a most lovely house out on Green bay and the gardens are wonderful.

Mrs. Crerar is delaying her departure for Southampton on Long Island, where she has a cottage for the summer, until this grand gala has happened.

Martha Carr, now Mrs. Peter Moon, was the central figure of a beautiful wedding last Saturday at St. Chrysostom's. Having no mother, this flower-like younger daughter of George Carr confided the planning of her wedding to Mrs. Walter B. Wolf and Mrs. Ford Rodman Carter, and, as the saying is, she got something. A perfect wedding ceremony does not happen by chance.

Lilies grew round the chancel. Bands of lilies striped the evergreens outlining the arch. The full choir sang as gloriously as an opera choir as its members surged through the ailes. The various bridesmaids and matrons advanced at snail's pace in shimmering leaf green satin with tiny coronets of Easter lilies. Their bouquets were prim little compact things of white carnations fringed with lily petals. The bride, having a yen for old lace, yellow with the years, wore robes of ivory satin that even in the voluminous train had pink lights. The tulle veil was held with a tiara of lilies of the valley.

The ceremony went on without a hitch, and the party at 209 Lake Shore drive was very gay. Large collections of wedding gifts were shown in an adjoining apartment, much glass, according to modern ideas, and much gorgeous silver. One of the most featured presents was a silver cigaret box with the signatures of all the bridesmaids etched at hazard across the cover. There was Kay Goodman's plain little writing and Babs Carr's scrawl.

For decorations where the bridal party stood Fay Carter almost painted the lily. Easter lilies were run together like so many paper drinking cups and then fashioned with long branched shrubs, highly fragrant and exotic. The wedding table was spread with pale green satin and the cake three tiered and worked like jewelry, with tiny designs of much fineness. At the ends were little trees made of hyacinth blossoms run together, fascinating to behold. The flowers massed in this room were white stocks and lilies, among which stood three white candles of vary heights.

Carrs abounded at this wedding. They are a many branched family, the Robert and Walter Carrs, and their married children have many twigs. Katherine, the bride's older sister, is a pretty blue eyed Carr whom I had last seen yesteryear, when the late Mrs. George Carr, who built a house high up in the hills at Cannes, was inviting her friends to see Valbonne, with its great blue swimming pool and medieval halls.

Mrs. Silas Strawn, in black and white print, was looking lovely. Also there were Mrs. Edward Carry, Mrs. John Crerar, Mrs. Hambleton Kirk, Mrs. Freeman Hinckley, Mrs. Allan Clement, the Cyrus Adamses, Mrs. Byron Reid, Mrs. Kersey Coates Reid, Mr. and Mrs. James Hopkins, Mrs. Harold Smith, Uri Grannis, Ford Carter, the James Ameses, Col. and Mrs. Horatio Hackett, and the Press Hodgkins. Louise Hodgkin's costume and hat were dashing—a black and white print and draped turban in irregular squares. Her three sons, sleek and rosy little lads, were a nice note at the party.

Weddings are certainly a thrill, no matter how many one sees or who is getting married.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Moon have gone abroad.

The Episcopal church extends a wing over spring fashions this week, when the ladies of St. James social service committee have a fashion tea [it sounds excellent] in the Woman's Athletic club ballroom, with lovely up-to-the-minute clothes.

Glad rags are truly heart breaking this season—so feminine and full of ruffles, lace, and flowers. Tweeds are out of the picture after many years and chiffons are in. There's an old saying that men with tweed sisters marry chiffon wives.

The women in charge of this fête are Mrs. Duncan Browne, Mrs. Alan C. Dixon, Mrs. Hayden Harris, Mrs. Robert G. Peck, Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson Jr., Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson, Mrs. Orville J. Taylor, Mrs. P. A. Valentine.

Another fashion show by a younger group, that of the Infant Welfare society's North Side center, will happen Monday, May 16, in the Narcissus room at Field's.

Of twenty members on this board a few at random are Mrs. George Braun Jr., Mrs. Ross Beatty Jr., Mrs. Charles Yoe Freeman Jr., Mrs. Lincoln Harris, Mrs. Gilbert Robinson, Mrs. Denis Sullivan, and Mrs. Sydney Waud.

Mother's Day Inspiration of Club Parties

Today has been dedicated to mothers throughout the entire country, and several Chicago clubs are planning to give programs especially for Mother's day. Among these is the Junior Business and Professional Women's club, whose members will entertain their mothers at a luncheon at 2 o'clock on Saturday afternoon in the College Inn of the Sherman hotel. Mrs. Robert Suhr of Evanston, president, will act as hostess for the party.

Mrs. Robert Suhr.

The object of the club, which was organized in 1936, is to promote the interest of the young business and professional women in civic, social, and educational benefits. The club maintains a scholarship fund for assisting selected girls to obtain business training after graduation from high school.

Mother's day will be celebrated by the Chicago Philanthropic club on Tuesday at 1:30 o'clock at the Congress hotel. The following officers have been elected to serve the club for the coming year: Mrs. Herman Korach, president; Mrs. Max Braun, first vice president; Mrs. S. C. Glen, second vice president; Mrs. Joseph Ginsburg, third vice president; Mrs. George Spencer, fourth vice president; Mrs. Stanley Goldman, recording secretary; Mrs. Herman Kessler, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Herman Dover, financial secretary.

The I Will club juniors will entertain their mothers and the senior club with a Mother's day program and tea today at 2:30 o'clock at the Morrison hotel. Miss Marion Schoemaker, chairman for the party, has arranged to have Polly Baumrucker, reader, and Lois Schmid, dancer, on the program. Muriel Allers, Lois Klem, and Bernice Kahlenberg will present a play under the direction of Roberta Slagle.

The Sarah Rosin Aid will givé a Mother's day luncheon at 12:30 o'clock on Wednesday at the Chicagoan hotel. Mrs. Sam Berger is president of the club.

Another Mother's day luncheon will be given by the Israel Leibovitz Loan fund on Wednesday at 12:30 o'clock at the Temple Judea. After luncheon the members and their mothers will play cards.

A delightful Mother's day tea will be given by the International Junior league of the Marks Nathan Jewish Orphan home this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the Congress hotel. The league will give its annual spring dance on May 15 at the Congress hotel.

The Chicago division, National Home for Jewish Children, will hold a Mothers and Daughters' day meeting at 1:30 o'clock Wednesday at the Medinah club. Mrs. Martin Wolf is chairman of the party.

The regular meeting of the Lawndale Ladies Aid society, which will be held Tuesday at 1:30 o'clock in room 601 Capitol building, will be followed by a Mother's day celebration. Democracy in Illinois to Be Voters' Topic

How to make democracy work in Illinois will be the prime consideration of members of the League of Women Voters at their seventeenth annual state convention tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday. Winnetka, famous as a model community, will be the scene of the meeting, and the Winnetka league, equally famous for its roster of distinguished leaders, will be hostess.

From their study of national and international questions at the recent national convention in St. Louis, Mo., league members will turn to such matters as a new state constitution for Illinois, the city manager plan for Chicago, and the merit system in local government.

Gov. Henry Horner has been invited to talk on "Hindrances to Citizen Effectiveness in Illinois" at the opening luncheon tomorrow at the Winnetka community house.

Mrs. George G. Bogert, state president, will conduct this session, at which state department chairmen will discuss the importance of a new state constitution to the development of the league's program. Mrs. Guy Alan Towney of Champaign, Mrs. Hasseltine Byrd Taylor and Mrs. Laura Hughes Lunde of Chicago, Mrs. O. N. Foreman of Jacksonville, and Miss Ellen Yockey of Taylorville will take part in this discussion.

Included on the afternoon program will be executive meetings of each department of work, a president's conference, a publicity conference presided over by Mrs. Raymond S. Simons of Highland Park, state publicity chairman, and a conference on new members. A directors' meeting, with a visit to New Trier High school and a tea for delegates also will precede a dinner in compliment to local league presidents, at which "Piquant Sketches of Famous Women" will be given. Mrs. Maurice A. Pollak of Highland Park, state organization chairman, will preside at the dinner.

Tuesday morning delegates will visit the Winnetka village hall to see the operation of the municipal manager plan which the town adopted in 1915. Winnetkans enjoy the lowest municipal tax rate of any Illinois municipality in the 10,000 to 25,000 population group, it will be emphasized to members. A visit to the Skokie school also is scheduled for the morning.

Tuesday's luncheon session will be devoted to a study of the "legislative processes," with Benjamin S. Adamowski, majority leader of the house of representatives; Mrs. Bernice T. Van Der Vries, state legislator and a past officer of the Winnetka league, and Mrs. W. W. Ramsey of Chicago as speakers.

Mrs. Ramsey, who directed the league's fight for permanent registration, will talk on "Checking Up on Permanent Registration." Mrs. Van Der Vries will give "Advice from a Legislator," and Mr. Adamowski will talk on "Simplifying the Legislator's Job." Mrs. William M. Bryant of Oak Park, legislation chairman of the league, will preside.

Mrs. Walter T. Fisher, newly elected national treasurer, will join other former presidents of the Winnetka league in giving a tea for delegates, alternates, and visitors that afternoon at her home.

Tuesday evening Adlai Stevenson, Graham Aldis, and Jerome G. Kerwin of the University of Chicago will speak at a dinner at the Shawnee Country club on "What Can We Do to Make Democracy Work Better in Illinois?" High spots of the national convention will be discussed Wednesday preceding the closing luncheon for Miss Marguerite M. Wells, national president, at the Indian Hill club. Miss Wells, who was reëlected at the recent convention to serve a third term, will report on proceedings at that meeting.

Mrs. Matthew P. Gaffney of Winnetka is chairman of the convention committee. Serving with her are Mrs. Edwin E. Aubrey, Mrs. Raymond S. Knapp, Mrs. R. C. Jacobson, and Mrs. Will F. Lyon, all of Chicago; Mrs. D. H. Mann of Evanston; Mrs. J. A. Meade of Western Springs; Mrs. C. E. Miner of Glen Ellyn; Mrs. J. H. Rosenstiel of Freeport, and Mrs. George Gaidzik, Mrs. Pollak, Mrs. Walter Rubens, Mrs. Philip Ringer, and Mrs. Simons, all of Highland Park.

New officers will be elected Monday, May 16. On a publicity program that morning Mrs. Fred R. Lufkin of Elgin, general federation vice chairman of press and publicity, will describe her work in training clubwomen to handle publicity. Mrs. Elizabeth Bailey Price, international publicity officer for the Pan-Pacific Women's association, also will speak on "Publicity, a Peace Making Factor."

Junior night is set for the evening of May 16. Miss Muriel Tarbell, 614 East 88th street, will talk briefly on the activities of Illinois' 13,000 junior clubwomen. She won a state-wide essay contest on "Why I Want to Attend the Triennial," and thereby became the one junior to represent her state. The juniors also are having a fashion tea Thursday and a ball Saturday evening.

Federation awards will be made Tuesday, May 17, preceding a dinner for Mrs. Lawson and the closing president's night program that evening. Among others on the convention program will be Milo Perkins, assistant administrator of the Farm Security administration, who will talk on "One Problem We as Americans Must Solve"; Welles A. Gray of the United States Chamber of Commerce, who will discuss "You and Your Taxes."

Church services for delegates today, a tea for Mrs. Lawson and her board of directors this afternoon at the Athaneum club, and meetings and conferences of federation executives tomorrow will precede the opening of the convention. An interlude of radio broadcasts, motion pictures, art tours, and sightseeing is planned for next week-end.

May Breakfast Annual Colony Club Affair

Once a year, for its May breakfast, the Illinois Colony club takes a day off from its self-imposed job of maintaining the Illinois Colony club Home for the Aged at Lyons. This annual holiday will occur for the twenty-seventh time next Wednesday at the Lake Shore Athletic club, with all thirteen "colonies," individual units that make up the club, represented.

It was in 1901 that the late Mrs. Viola Greene started the club to help "unfortunate aged gentlewomen." Units named for the thirteen colonies were formed with members originally from those states, and the club has retained this form, with each colony meeting individually under its own leaders as well as uniting with the other units for monthly meetings.

In 1928 the organization opened its own home for dependent aged women on a wooded tract of land on the Des Plaines river in Lyons. Here twenty-one women live in the care of Mrs. Clifton R. Hunn, member of the club. All through the depression the organization managed to support the home exclusively by its own efforts in spite of temporary reduced membership. Mrs. Harley H. Goul is commander-in-chief. The breakfast arrangements are in the hands of Mrs. Frank G. Koehne.

Mrs. Minna M. Schmidt will speak on "Great American Mothers and Hostesses of the White House, 1769-1938" at the May breakfast of the Colonial Coverlet Guild of America Wednesday noon in Marshall Field's Wedgwood room. Mrs. Rudolph Baumel and Mrs. Helen Dinnsen are receiving reservations.

The annual spring luncheon of the Woman's University club will occur at 12:30 o'clock Saturday at the clubrooms, 410 South Michigan avenue. The annual business meeting will follow. The preceding evening Mrs. Hope W. Graham, who recently returned from a trip around the world, will speak on "How the Old World Looks to Me." Mrs. Graham formerly taught history in the city junior colleges. A dinner will be given before her talk. The board of directors will meet at 5 o'clock tomorrow.

sembler of unique works of art. An invitation to spend the week-end at Monticello has been for many years one of the most shining dates on the calendar of the artistic Chicago set. The house itself is very beautiful. It is conducted in a smooth baronial way, and the company, too, is ever excellent with often the outstanding beauty of the hour, or perhaps an upstanding politician, and a background of old friends.

Robert Allerton's latest is a house he is building on one of the lesser Hawaiian Islands, a far cry from Illinois. The chances seem to be that he will not, like the late James Deering, limit his guest rooms to one or two. For all his friends are being invited to go out and feast on the beauty of the world as it rises in volcanic peaks from a turbulent blue sea. It is a safe invitation anyway, for the beautiful new house is rising an airplane journey away from Honolulu.

The John P. Kelloggs are island minded, too. In the last year they have acquired something large and beautiful in that line, which delights their hearts, off the coast at Vancouver. Louise, second daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John J. Mitchell, shares her husband's love of the wilds and is bringing up her sizable family of youngsters to be woodsmen. The Mitchell family was brought up at Lake Geneva in a cozy red house on the lake where hospitality had no limits. They were the great old days. John Mitchell had magnificent stables, and after the Sunday morning horse show in the ring back upon the farm guests were shown the harness room, with its pleasant smell of fine leathers, the carriage house, where were standing many shining four wheeled relics of splendid bygones, and the dairy. It was all done with large simplicity.

Lovely as Lake Geneva was, none of the Mitchell children has cared to live there. In America no children ever seem to carry on in the homes of their fathers. William H. Mitchell and Louise Kellogg live in Lake Forest. Jack Mitchell, whose wife is Lolita Armour, and Clarence, who married Marjorie King, live outside of Santa Barbara, and Gwendolyn has lived for years at Pasadena as Mrs. Robert Hunter. Jack Mitchell is the life of the whole countryside near Santa Barbara. His house is not one of aloof splendor, with high barriers and lodge gates. He and his wife mingle with their neighbors and are justly popular.

Present at Mrs. Upham's party were Mrs. Rufus Dawes, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Mrs. Walter B. Wolf, Mrs. James Ward Thorne, Mrs. Chauncey B. Borland, Mrs. Eugene Talbot, and the candidate himself, Charles Dewey.

Those present pledged themselves to have similar meetings in the interest of the former undersecretary of the United States treasury.

Mrs. Jacob Baur sailed last week on the Europa for a short visit in London with her married daughter, Rosemary, wife of an M. P., Bartle Bull. The Bulls are about to move into a house bought some years ago in a fashionable sector of London called "Belgravia" in Thackeray's novels. The house is a two storied Georgian affair, standing alone in Belgrave place, at the upper end of Belgrave square. Mrs. Bull does not really own the house in a sense, but merely the ground rights for ninety-nine years. So she has been slow to put in the repairs and improvements vital to a young American housekeeper, as regulated by London ordinances.

The Bulls expect to take possession in July. In the meantime they have the huge iron key to Belgrave square gardens, a lovely oval of trees and flowers and hedges, and their darling little blonde child, Romia, goes there daily with her nurse to play with little children of householders in Belgrave square. Among Romia's playmates are Harry Channon's small son, and the duke and duchess of Kent's little Alexandra and Prince Edward. Mrs. Bull has a finely modeled type of beauty greatly admired in London, and this she sets off by very exquisite clothes ordered largely in Paris.

CLOSE TO THE MOTHER OF RIVERS

Athabaska river, along the Columbia ice field drive in Jasper National park, Alberta. The field, giving rise to streams that flow into three oceans, is known as the mother of rivers. Summer Voyages to Europe Total 274

Two hundred and seventy-four voyages will start from Atlantic ports for Europe between May 15 and Aug. 15. Most of the ships will be full. Many travelers already are leaving for the spring events, such as the Eucharistic congress at Budapest, but most of them will wait until June, July, and August.

The Empire exhibition in Glasgow, the Cæsar Augustus exhibition in Rome, and the Handicrafts and Industrial exhibition in Oslo will attract thousands all summer. Other thousands will see the Derby run in England June 1. Still others will attend the Wagner festivals at Bayreuth, beginning July 24, and the Salzburg festival plays, opening July 23.

Wild Flowers Current Rave in California

By Ruth Billheimer.

PASADENA, CAL. It's wild flower time in Southern California, and natives as well as tourists join the caravans that wind over highways from Los Angeles to Bakersfield, where the display of color probably is the most spectacular to be found. So many persons take advantage of week-end holidays to make the trip of 100 miles or more north into the interior of the state, that trafic becomes a bit distracting and week days are choicest for motoring.

If the weather is fickle, there may be a thin, fresh cap of snow atop the ridge overlooking the flat, blue, lupin-blanketed floor of the valley where the sun may shine through dappling clouds. As far to the north as one can see stretch the lupin heads, mingled here and there with the cerise of owl clover, which gives a Persian carpet effect.

Off through the pass, orange California poppies, so deeply colored as to be nearly scarlet, splotch the slopes. A gigantic paint brush might have been wielded at random. On toward the desert, yellow coreopsis, baby blue-eyes and exquisite lavender thistle sage bloom in scattered patches.

In the course of the journey one sees lupin ranging from the deep blue, growing low to the ground . . . a foot or more high . . . to varieties growing on bushes as high as 7 feet. This is found in lavender profusion in the hilly region near the mission. Other varieties are pinkish or nearly white. Orange, yellow and reddish monkey flowers [mimulus], shaped like little trumpets and buckthorn, a little like sweet william and shaded from red to pink, add a deal of color. The wild, pungent mountain lilac that runs the gamut of blues from indigo to white, is a little past its prime, but a warm breeze blowing over patches of low springing yellow daisies brings another exotic fragrance.

The hills are lovely with grasses, tco, volunteer wheat and barley. Near the homesteads are generous squares of fresh turned earth and planted grain.

A detour before reaching Lompoc takes one past the little La Purissima Concepcion mission, destroyed many years ago by earthquake. Its few standing walls have been left bare, but the restored portions, built of adobe-and-straw brick made on the spot are plastered over. Even the hardware is handwrought and copied from old pictures, or, if no accurate record exists, from pieces found in other missions of the same period. Nails are hand wrought and furniture, too, is being reproduced.

La Purissima Concepcion now is a national monument. Under its jurisdiction, 4,000 persons once lived. Its reconstruction is being made earthquake-resistant and even the original sections are being reinforced wherever possible. Wandering through it, one's mind goes back to early California history which is made even more vivid by the Indian guide who himself was born at the Mission San Antonia de Padua.

The luncheon given by Mrs. Charles Bosworth and her daughter, Mrs. Gordon Padley, at the Annandale Golf club was virtually a Chicago reunion, for the majority of their 40 guests were Chicagoans of years gone by and some who are here visiting, including Mrs. William Dickey. Places were marked also for Mrs. Robert W. Campbell, Mrs. Scott Brown, Mrs. Charles Ransom, and Mrs. Edward Englar, former Evanstonians, Mrs. George Snow Gaylord, and her daughter, Mrs. Fritz Ruppel, Mrs. Clifford Anthony of Peoria, Mrs. William M. Burton, Mrs. Thomas Connor, Mrs. Alice Fenton Burrage, Mrs. James A. Harvey, Mrs. Theodore Smith, Mrs. James Rogers, Mrs. Edgar Willrich, Mrs. William Lake, Mrs. Thomas Kester, Mrs. Leander La Chance and her daughter, Miss Helen La Chance, Mrs. Gail R. Bucklin and her daughter, Jean, who now reside at Glendora, Cal., and Mrs. George Marcy.

It wasn't quite May day, but it might have been, so lovely was the luncheon table spread in the Mira Flora room of the club. Three long flat arrangements of spring flowers brought together an exquisite mixture of pink rose buds, yellow ranunculas and white stock. First there were cocktails and hors d'oeuvres in the lounge and, after luncheon, bridge.

PORTRAIT: "NED MORTIMORE"

Charles Sneed Williams ranks as one of the first of the outstanding American portrait painters of today. He has won an international reputation for the brilliance and fineness of his work. This present study, shown in the current Association of Chicago Painters' and Sculptors' exhibition at the Chicago galleries, 215 North Michigan avenue, is characteristic.

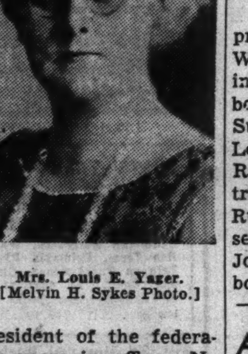
Decatur Host to Federated Music Clubs

The Illinois Federation of Music Clubs opens it three day annual convention today in Decature. At the last moment the meeting was moved from Chicago when a ruling of the Chicago Federation of Musicians made it financially impossible for the federation to present the program planned for the convention. The musicians' organization has agreements with the leading Chicago hotels providing that when an amateur or other nonunion musician performs a "standby" professional union member, paid according to the union scale, also must be present.

How the federated music clubs can present their programs unhampered by such rulings will be one of the principal topics discussed at the convention. It is felt by club leaders that if young artists cannot be given the encouragement of public performances, which the federation has no funds to pay for, the federation's avowed purpose of fostering music appreciation and helping young artists will be hindered.

Miss Helen Howe, director of music in the Chicago public schools and corresponding secretary of the federation, will speak on "Public School Music" at the opening session this afternoon.

Music programs, extension, and publicity luncheons are planned for tomorrow, with the annual banquet in the evening. Officers will be elected Tuesday, there will be a luncheon for club presidents past and present, and further music programs will be presented.



Mrs. Louis E. Yager. [Melvin H. Sykes Photo.]

Mrs. Louis E. Yager is retiring as president of the federation after four years in office. No nominations for candidates have been made public.

Mrs. William S. Ridgly of Decatur, former president and present first vice president of the federation, with Miss W. St. Claire Minturn, had invited the federation to hold its convention in Decatur.

Officers Elected at Two Illinois Club Conclaves

Two of the state's largest women's organizations, the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs and the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers, elected new officers at conventions this week.

Mrs. William T. Bruckner of Hinsdale was elected president of the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs Thursday defeating Mrs. Albert H. Johnson of Chicago in one of the warmest contests in federation annals. Mrs. Edward J. Lehman of Sidney, retiring president, was elected Illinois director to the General Federation of Women's clubs. Miss Delia Miller of Peoria, 16th district president, was made vice president of the central region of the federation.

The Illinois congress elected Mrs. Harry M. Mulberry of Chicago, president. She succeeds Mrs. Arthur R. Williams of Bloomington. Mrs. Russell Lyon of Chicago was made first vice president; Mrs. W. H. Whithey, Springfield, second vice president; Mrs. Charles J. Nixon, Hamilton, fourth vice president, and Mrs. Frank A. Damm, Chicago, treasurer.

The Illinois federation's convention was held in Chicago, and the Illinois congress met in Sidney.

Club Notes

Phi Alpha Lambda sorority will hold its annual initiation services today in the Bismarck hotel. Mrs. Henry Oehler, founder, will speak on the origin of the group. Miss Laurette Wright is president.

Robert F. Simon was installed as president of the Rubin Schlanger Wyshkover Juniors at a recent meeting. The final event of the season will be an earning fund dinner-dance next Sunday at the Royale Frolics café. Louis Friedman, vice president; Miss Raye Friedman, secretary; Miss Beatrice Ziven, financial secretary; Miss Ruth Herman, treasurer; Bud Shepet, sergeant at arms; Miss Ruth Mages, Joe Berezin, and Leo Preis are other board members.

Amelia Earhart's Flight Records Now in Archives

Arts Club Show Is Chief Among May Exhibits

By Eleanor Jewett.

There are several exhibitions about town which opened last month to continue into this. Chief among them is the gorgeous exhibit of paintings and sculpture by professional members at the Arts club. It is an annual exhibition which will remain on view to May 14. In the first gallery the stunning portrait, "Emily von Romberg," by Cecil Clark Davis, catches the eye. It is a brilliant piece of work and takes on an added beauty because it is neighbored by other rather doubtful portraiture. The one man's portrait to match is the effective "Portrait of a Lawyer—George I. Haight," by Paul Trebilcock.

In this first gallery Pauline Palmer has a superb canvas, "The Old Smoke House"; it is a powerful and atmospheric painting, simple, but very much alive. Anna Lynch shows a magnificent still life, "Zinnias and Cornflowers," and Agnes Potter Lowrie offers the "Life History of a Kite," which we follow from its initial adventure on the end of a string in a boy's hand, through its tangled state in a medley of wires to its ultimate freedom in the sky. Mrs. Lowrie has set her fantasy against a charming background, the landscape is as sweetly and primly drawn as those in the Italian primitives.

Amy Irwin McCormick is responsible for one of the most exquisite paintings in the exhibit, "From the Swamps of South Carolina," a delicious handful of green orchids in a glass vase whose depth is rich in shadows. There is a freedom of stroke in the technique and a sensitive quality in the coloring that find a quick response in the eye of the spectator. Another attractive flower study is the still life of Alice Mason, in which vivid poppies are exploding distractedly like so many gay torpedoes.

Gerald Frank shows a fine portrait of a pair of Cairn terriers. His painting is another one of the "best" in the show. The "Mexico," by Charles P. Killgore, is unusually fine, very dramatic in conception and beautifully handled. Elsie Donaldson and Frances Badger have both, in different ways, achieved intriguing, quaint effects with people. The most striking water color in the exhibit is the stirring "Twin Palms, Port Antonio, Jamaica," by Antimo Beneduce. The "Girl Sewing," by Harriet Blackstone, is an exquisite little study. Florence Furst shows "Spring Pattern," a luscious flower arrangement. The "Guatemalan Memory," by Thomas Tallmadge, is extremely nice, and Josephine L. Reischmann celebrates her return from California with a particularly glowing panel of yellow blossoms, "Cup of Gold."

In the sculpture, John Storrs with his "Standing Nude," and Sylvia Shaw Judson, with her "Prima Vera," share the honors. Both figures are beautifully and exquisitely modeled. C. Warner Williams has a delightful bas-relief in the little portrait group, "Brother and Sister."

At the Art institute a retrospective exhibition of paintings by Robert B. Harshe is hanging in a second floor gallery. It is a remarkably good show, with water colors that are piquant and gay. Amazingly good drawing is found in these several works and a feeling for line that is surprisingly true. Mr. Harshe's color is very attractive and a quiet humor that is most delightful is evidenced in many of the scenes.

The Association of Chicago Painters and Sculptors is concluding a successful show at the Chicago galleries, 215 North Michigan avenue. This exhibition naturally is not representative of all Chicago art, but it does mirror to a great extent much of the finer work being done today by Chicago artists. The association stands for progress along traditional lines and it seems to be achieving its goal. Where modern art is now an almost deadly round of repetition, academic art is advancing to new levels. And what a relief it is to find a picture that is well drawn and well painted!

Among the outstanding canvases in the Chicago galleries are "Still Life," by Leo Marzolo; "Gold, Incense and Myrrh," by Julius Moessel; "The Four Horsemen," by Anna Lynch; "Forsaken," by Pauline Palmer; "Mountains," by Marshall D. Smith; "A Cruiser in Puget Sound," by Walter Krawiec; "African Wood Ibis," by Karl Plath; "The Modeler," by Harriet Krawiec; "From Mount Tom," by Frank V. Dudley; "Ned Mortimer," by Charles Sneed Williams, and "Autumn," by Gianni Cilfone.

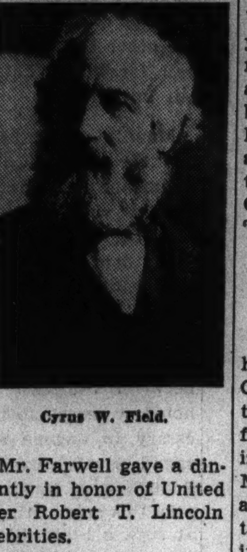
When Chicago Was Young: Most of G. A. R. Veterans Were in Their Fifties

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd, of New York.

Chicago, August 28, 1889.

Dear Julia: The summer, which is waning, hasn't been so disagreeable as I thought it might be, though our only holiday has been our brief New York visit. Many of our friends are abroad. An acquaintance of ours in London writes us of seeing John V. Farwell of Chicago, who is staying at the same hotel, the Victoria. Mr. Farwell gave a dinner there recently in honor of United States Minister Robert T. Lincoln and other celebrities.



Cyrus W. Field.

Our correspondent also mentions seeing Charles T. Yerkes and his wife at the Victoria. The London papers speak in flattering terms of the Yerkes couple, describing Mrs. Yerkes as one of the most beautiful women in Chicago. I have never seen her, but they are not accepted socially here, as the circumstances of his divorce from the first Mrs. Yerkes were not thought creditable to him. He is in London to promote a street railway or "tram," as the English call it. The street car lines owned by his syndicate here have been very profitable, paying enormous dividends, and I suppose he will make a great deal of money over in England.

Will and I attended the Grand Army encampment in Milwaukee this week. We saw Gen. Sherman, looking hale and hearty, and in good spirits. He responded with zest to the greetings shouted from the marching men: "Hello, Uncle Billy." Waving his hat in return he said: "I seem to have a large family." Mrs. John A. Logan came from Detroit with the family of Gen. Russell A. Alger. Gen. Alger has been elected commander in chief of the Grand Army for the coming year.

Sitting in the grandstand beside Mrs. Logan I saw the always touching spectacle of the veterans being reviewed by their former chiefs. One old soldier rode gallantly, his crutches hanging from the horn of his saddle. My Will had to have his cane with him, and it recalled the days, during the war, when his life hung in the balance and the doctor thought he might need to amputate the wounded leg. My eyes were full of tears most of the time as I watched the procession.

Much cheering greeted Miss Clara Barton as she rode along in a carriage behind the St. Louis G. A. R. post with an ambulance following her.

Will enjoyed it, though he was pale and tired at the end of the day. As we made our way to the train in the evening we saw a veteran in the familiar blue, with the gold band about his hat, using his cane to draw in the dust of the sidewalk a map of Gettysburg, showing a wide-eyed youngster where his regiment was stationed during the battle. We stopped a moment, listening to the old man, who said he had been in the Mexican war as well as in the Union army. He must have been 70 years of age [most of the G. A. R. men are in their fifties] and he shed a tear or two as he told of all he had been through. Will shook hands with him, gave him some money to have a good time at the encampment, and then we went on, Will murmuring Goldsmith's lines:

"Wept o'er his wounds, or tales of sorrow done,

Will had another convention on hand this week, the second one in Chicago. The American Bar association meets for the first time away from Saratoga, where it was organized. The meeting place is the First Methodist church, corner of Clark and Washington streets. I went over this morning to hear the address of its president, David Dudley Field. What a remarkable family that of the Fields! David Dudley Field is, I suppose, the greatest lawyer in America today. His brother, Stephen Johnson Field, is on the Supreme court bench. Cyrus W. Field, greatest of them all, is responsible for the laying of the Atlantic cable, and Henry M. Field, younger than the other three, is a liberal Presbyterian minister and editor of a church paper, The Evangelist. There's something in blood, isn't there?

Lovingly yours,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOTNOTES.

Gen. Russell A. Alger, who was secretary of war in the cabinet of President McKinley, was father of Mrs. Charles B. Pike of Chicago.

A faithful reader, Miss Mary K. Thompson of Chicago, sends us a list of physicians who lived on Indiana avenue during the '80s and '90s. Because of this street being the home of so many doctors it was known as "Pill Alley." Here is the list sent us by Miss Thompson:

N. S. Davis, Dr. Andrews, Dr. Roler, Frank W. Jay, Daniel T. Nelson, Dr. Kretschmer, James H. Stowell, D. A. K. Steele, William E. Quine, Dr. Boyd, George M. Chamberlin, G. F. Shears, Charles H. Loder, Dr. Boulter, Dr. Haseltine, Dr. Koch, H. R. Chislett, Henry B. Fellows, Dr. Hawley, Marie J. Mergler, Dr. Snow.

To this list, we add, from our own memory, the names of E. C. Dudley, and Frank Cary.

It was due to the fact that so many hospitals were located on the south side that Indiana avenue became "Pill Alley," a convenient thoroughfare for the home of a medical man.

Has any reader a name to add to this list of doctors who lived on Indiana avenue in the '80s or '90s?

OLD CHICAGO HARTHSTONES. 2 West Walton Place.

This massive red brick house, trimmed with brownstone, was built for Edmund Burke, father of Mrs. John P. Wilson. After it was vacated by the Burke family it was rented by tenants equally well known. Robert T. Lincoln lived in it. So did Mrs. Emmons Blaine. The house has been added to until it extends to Oak street, but the original building had twelve large rooms. The Misses Fanning have owned it for many years. The spacious entrance hall has a grand staircase with English oak balustrade and a curious fireplace with a glass window above it.

Treat Corners Well: They'll Repay Effort

"What's Wrong with Your Rooms?" a booklet by Edith Weigle answers many puzzlers of furniture arrangement, including the common query of "Where shall we put the couch?" Its price is 5 cents by mail, 3 cents at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower lobby.

By Edith Weigle.

Many a home decorator knits her brows and puzzles her brain over the corner problem. True, some room corners just naturally take care of themselves, but there are others, and plenty of them, that demand some clever sort of treatment or other if they're not going to stick out like sore thumbs.

One thing is definite: It won't be helping matters any to draw a couch, or a desk, or a cabinet across a troublesome corner. Large pieces of furniture should follow the architectural [wall] lines of the room, and should never cut across them. Chairs, screens, certain tables, and, of course, wedge-shaped cupboards are different. They can be lifesavers to this decorative problem.

If your room is Victorian, with couches and chairs that have been handed down to you by your parents or grandparents, you can make any corner charming by placing there an old fashioned "what-not." On the shelves you can arrange your favorite little pieces of porcelain: Figures, or vases, or glass paperweights, or what have you. A low bowl of trailing ivy would be artistic for the smallest top shelf.

And "what-nots," like rocking chairs, seem to be perennially popular. You'll not have any trouble finding just what you want in the stores.

If your room is not Victorian but colonial, with walnut or mahogany furniture, then by all means treat it to a handsome corner cupboard. It may be of the woods just mentioned or it may be painted to match the white woodwork of the room.

For modern interiors there are interesting bookcases built especially to fit in corners, with other straight units to be placed at either side. You get as many as you need. And as they come unfinished you paint or stain them yourself, or have the store where you purchase them do that job for you.

If your room is of no special period try filling the corner with a profusion of potted plants. It will make the whole place lovely. Glass or metal shelves can be put in by any one at all handy with tools, and at small cost. On them you can arrange your ivy, geraniums, sansiveria, philodendron and the rest of your indoor garden treasures.

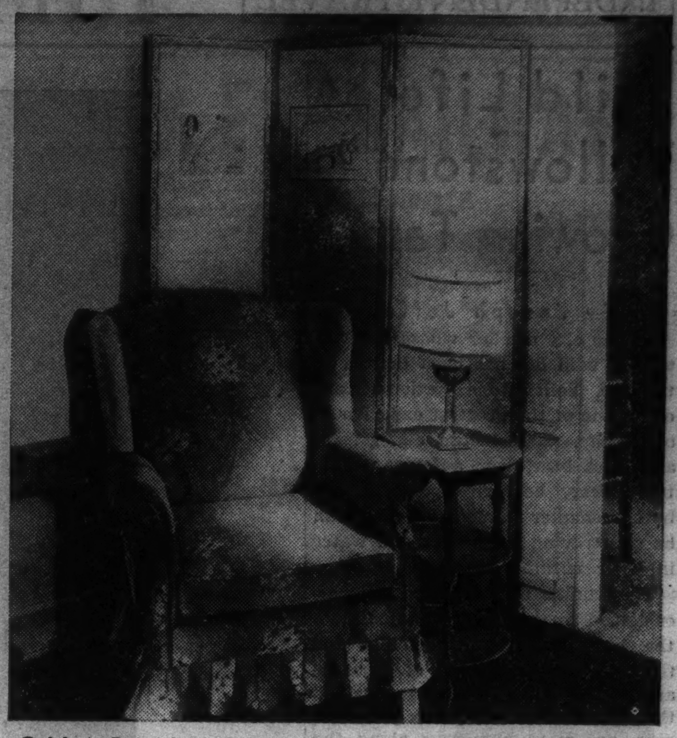
Perhaps the most pleasing solution of the corner problem, however, is to use an attractive screen [it need not be expensive] and a small group of furniture. The photograph today shows an example of this method. Before the screen, which by the way, is covered with wallpaper and decorated with artistic maps, one for each panel, you see a comfortable armchair upholstered in a floral printed mohair, and a chairside table with a lamp for reading.

This group is most inviting and makes the corner a real asset to the room, instead of a bugbear. In the establishment where this picture was taken there are shown other clever ways of getting around the corner in decoration, any of which you can copy in your own home.

And like so many of the most pleasing features of making your home more comfortable and more attractive you'll find it's not so much the amount of money you expend as it is your own ingenuity and thoughtful planning.



CHARMING BUT REASONABLE

One of the best treatments for that bothersome corner is to place an attractive screen before it and arrange a comfortable armchair and small table and lamp in front. This grouping makes a charming picture and is well within the means of the average budget.

Wild Life of Yellowstone Is Growing Tamer

By Joseph Joffe.

To the city dweller whose observation of wild life has been limited to the zoo, Yellowstone National park offers one of the greatest experiences of his life. Here moose, elk, grizzly, and black bear, deer, antelope, mountain sheep, beaver, coyotes, and a host of smaller animals and birds can be seen roving the woods and water in their natural state.

The animals are becoming more accustomed to the sight of humans, to the noises of the automobile and trucks, and to the smell of gasoline, and, with the knowledge gained through years of living in a protected area, are more numerous along the main traveled highways. There they can be readily seen by motorists and from the buses of the transportation company. At Willow park some eight miles south of Mammoth Hot springs, moose inhabit the swampy area and are a constant source of pleasure to those who take a few moments to view one of the animals which only few zoos of the country can boast of housing. Excellent opportunities for photographing these large wild animals are afforded, with many chances for close-up observation.

The new buffalo show corral on Antelope creek has proved popular with park visitors and practically all cars making the trip from Canyon to Tower falls stop at the inclosure so that occupants may view the fine specimens of American bison. Unfortunately, the large buffalo herd of the park, numbering more than 900 animals, roams the high country near the eastern boundary during the summer and cannot be seen by those who use automobile transportation as a means of viewing the park wonders. A horseback trip into this region, requiring camping out, affords the lover of the wilderness area an opportunity to view these large, shaggy beasts at fairly close range. So that motorists and train visitors may be able to closely observe these animals, this special show herd is brought in to the new Antelope creek corral.

The bear show at the Canyon feeding grounds presents the finest wild animal exhibition available in the entire country. Here nightly during the summer season some thirty to sixty lordly grizzlies, young and old, large and small, imbibe in the choice morsels of food brought out from leftovers from the tables of the hotel and lodge. A few blacks are also observed on the platform, but usually after the grizzlies have had their fill, or they may be seen a few hundred feet from the platform, resting beneath the trees, awaiting an opportunity to rush in to grab a mouthful. Some five hundred blacks and browns roam the forests and roadsides and afford pleasure to park visitors by their clown-like antics.

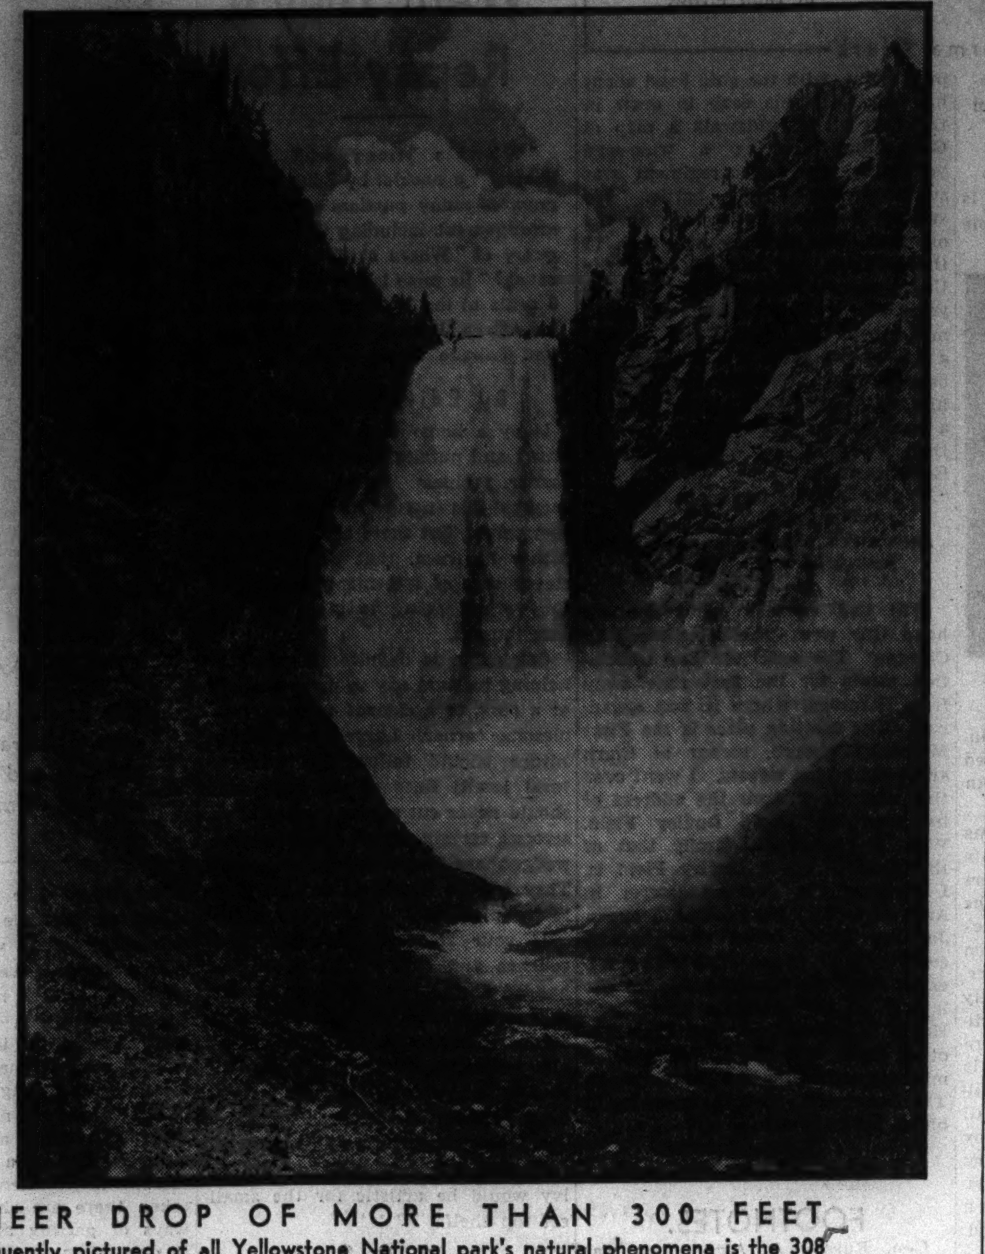
The bear "lunch counter" at Old Faithful, which for years provided entertainment to the lover of wild life, has been discontinued. The bears at Old Faithful have moved in too close to the campers and because of the more interesting geyser attractions with which the animals must compete, park authorities abandoned the feeding platform.

Elk and deer may be seen in various sections of the park. The Gardiner flats, just inside the north gate, afford the visitor an opportunity to view at close range large numbers of antelope, the swiftest of the park's wild animals. Visitors making the trip over Mount Washburn are usually rewarded with the sight of mountain sheep.



A SHEER DROP OF MORE THAN 300 FEET

Most frequently pictured of all Yellowstone National park's natural phenomena is the 308 foot lower fall of the Yellowstone river. The photographer snapped this shot from the foot of Uncle Tom's trail, which leads the visitor 750 feet down to the bottom of the canyon.

So. California Has All Types of Recreation

Los Angeles, Cal., May 7.—Travel officials here are pointing out that southern California has nearly every type of scenery found in the world—from the Alps of Switzerland to the sand dunes of Sahara. One can bask in the morning on a South Sea beach, lunch in the brisk atmosphere of Hollywood, and before the night test aquaplane skill on a mile-high lake in a forest.

Many of the beaches have municipal fishing piers, and there are dozens of fishing barges anchored at sea.

Beach life in southern California may be as crowded with activity or as restful as one likes. A single day's program may include fishing at sunrise, a mountain hike, tennis or golf, a swim before luncheon, an afternoon canter, cocktails and bridge, dinner, and dancing until dawn.

Catalina Island—twenty-five miles offshore—has everything, from the glass bottomed boats at Avalon [revealing fantastic sea gardens], to wild goat hunting in the mountain wilderness beyond the settlement. Catalina also has still-water swimming, deep sea fishing, primitive trails for hiker and equestrian, a yacht harbor, and a casino overlooking Avalon bay. The island is the home of one of the most complete bird farms in the world.

Golfers find virtually every type of course in southern California—from ocean shore to mountain top. Some are easy, others of championship caliber. There are hundreds of miles of scenic bridle trails and many polo fields.

Although many changes have taken place in the nearly four centuries since Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo headed for the lee of Point Loma to make the first landing of white men on America's western shores, this region still retains much of the old world flavor of its Spanish beginnings.

MORE OR LESS PERSONAL

Visiting in Chicago last Tuesday, John F. Brennan, passenger trafic manager of the United States Lines, said trans-Atlantic bookings had shown a heavy increase in the last three weeks. He attributed the gain to the clearing away of the war clouds over Europe, the favorable rates of exchange now prevailing on the other side, and the reductions in rail fares and hotel rates recently put into effect.

Mountain climbers from Chicago and the middle west will join with Canadians this summer in the thirty-third annual encampment of the Alpine Club of Canada. The meet is to be held in the Columbia ice field section of the Canadian Rockies July 16 to 30. With the opening of the new road from Jasper Park lodge to the ice field, visitors are able to drive between the two points in a few hours, whereas formerly it was necessary to engage a pack train and spend several days en route. The field, largest North American glacial area this side of the arctic, is situated at such a high altitude that a heavy snow covers the ice even in the hottest months. Midsummer skiing is one of its attractions.

Harry Dooley of Chicago, president of the Gray Line association, has been chosen to head the sightseeing business in New York during the World's Fair there next year. Larry Delp becomes general manager of the business in Chicago.

Two weeks' vacations embracing many of the major attractions of the west were announced yesterday by the American Express company. Beginning June 12, that company will conduct rail tours from Chicago to Colorado, the Grand Canyon, California, the Pacific northwest, and the Canadian Rockies. The schedule will continue weekly until the end of August.

Cable advices received last week from Hamburg confirmed the previously reported order for the building of a 36,000 ton steamer for the Hamburg American Line-North German Lloyd. The new ship will have a speed of 23 knots and accommodations for 1,300 passengers. It will be placed in the North Atlantic service.

"Czechoslovakia" will be the subject of Dr. Dudley Crafts Watson's travel talk at the Old Heidelberg inn Thursday afternoon.

Albert Cotsworth, passenger trafic manager of the Burlington railroad, said yesterday that the Buffalo Bill, fast train between Denver and Yellowstone, would resume operation June 29. This train, initiated last year, complements the Zephyr service between Chicago and Denver. It is designed for travelers wishing to stop off in Colorado on their way to the park.

Led by R. H. Palenske of Chicago, the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies will make their annual five-day trip from Banff, starting July 29. This year's trail will take the riders over a part of the route followed by Sir George Simpson in 1841. The organization's membership of 1,200 is scattered all over the world.

The Santa Fe's California Limited is to be reëstablished in daily service from both Chicago and Los Angeles May 22. This was made known yesterday by T. B. Gallaher, passenger trafic manager.

The All-Year Club of Southern California writes this department that England's favorite game, cricket, is being introduced this season in Los Angeles, Hollywood, Pasadena, Santa Barbara, and San Diego. On Sundays tourists are flocking to Hollywood, there to see C. Aubrey Smith, Errol Flynn, Boris Karloff, H. B. Warner, and other members of the British motion picture colony in action with the blade-like bats.

In response to the demand of inland Americans for vacations at sea, the American Express company has scheduled a series of six tours from Chicago and the middle west to Bermuda. The rail journey eastward will be broken by stops at Niagara Falls and Washington, and the voyage from New York will be on the Furness Bermuda liners. The first excursion is to start June 19, the last one Sept. 11.

Manager John C. Pollock of the Chicago and North Western Union Pacific department of tours lets it be known that from June 19 to Sept. 4, inclusive, escorted tours will leave Chicago each Sunday morning for Rocky Mountain park in Colorado. Each is to be of eight days' duration.

YOU WILL in Alaska!

Sailing Alaska's smooth ocean lanes, your ship will pause before a sparkling blue glacier that towers perhaps three hundred feet from the water's edge. Then, the Captain, like Joshua of old, sounds the ship's whistle to bring down thundering, tumbling tons of ice, as fell the walls of ancient Jericho!

Only one of the many breath-taking thrills awaiting you in nearby Alaska! Northward from Seattle your one-class All-American steamer sails mile on enchanted mile along the world's longest protected ocean waterway. May-through-September, Alaska's warm, refreshing sun shines upon crackling, roaring glaciers; upon towering mountains reaching the ocean's edge to thrust their snow-capped peaks into the sky; upon wild flowers and green forests, fabulous lakes and somersaulting waterfalls. In the great Interior wait the wonders of Matanuska Valley, Mount McKinley National Park, and the storied Yukon.

A complete choice of cruises and cruise-tours combined with moderate rail and all-inclusive steamer fares puts a glorious Alaska vacation well within your reach. Soon, board a modern, completely air-conditioned train to speed over scenic rail routes to Seattle; then on to Alaska—the land of gold and of leaping salmon, of grotesque totem poles, of historic Russian settlements!

Life in Lumber Camp Intrigues This Traveler

By Adeline Lobdell Pynchon.

On a glorious day when the sun is brilliant and the sky bright blue, with here and there a fleecy cloud for variety, we motor to Comox lake, where a launch awaits us. We are guests of the Comox Logging company superintendent, who has arranged the trip that we may see everything pertaining to lumber operations. The little boat is to take us ten miles along the coast of the beautiful body of water to the logging camp in British Columbia.

The lake is fringed with a forest wilderness. Several glaciers peep through or over pine topped cliffs; the water, a deep blue, makes ripples of white foam as the launch swishes through it. The boat turns one rocky bend after another and, rising from the shoreline, mountain pictures unfold like the pages of a book. Each hilly curve obstructs with its gigantic wall one more of nature's views. Coming to the last leaf of the book, we see at the end of the lake the camp built on logs floating at the water's edge. There individual cabins for the workers are cozy and inviting. The kitchen, mess, and living hall are comfortable and substantial.

The married members of the camp live in crude shacks on shore. The floating camp facilitates matters when it must move to a new lumbering site. When the men finish extracting, from a territory leased from the government by the logging company, all the trees of commercial value the buildings are moved down the lake and moored near a new lumbering location. The company is a subsidiary of the Fraser mills at Westminster, the largest in the British empire. The mills are on the Fraser river and you pass them on your way home when you travel in an observation car through some of the most gorgeous scenery in the world.

We are much impressed with the cleanliness of the camp. We could have eaten off the floor and we wonder if the Chinese are an especially cleanly race, the cooks being of that nationality. My luncheon neighbor is a "scaler." I learn that a "scaler" is he who, by merely looking at a log, can estimate the number of board feet in it. His accuracy is almost magical. But he has plenty of experience and practice, for he goes into the woods for a month or two at a time in order to tap the forest trees, perhaps 50 square miles of them, to estimate the value of the tract of land and decide whether or not it would be worth while for his company to lease it from the government.

After leaving the car we walk deep into the forest. The filtering sunlight drips through tree branches, makes picturesque shadows and patterns on the soft fern carpet beneath our feet. The afternoon silence is broken only by the measured strokes of an ax or the sizzing buzz of the rhythmic saw. Two men, each holding an end of the saw, are manipulating the tool on a tree said to be 400 or 500 years old. Back and forth they saw, every now and again stopping to take stock of their progress or to hammer an ax head deeper into the gash they are making. Already the tree has been undercut, which means the gash cut into the front of the tree to direct the course of its fall. The men can gauge its fall exactly; they topple the tree in the spot they desire. They have the bodies of athletes. Their muscles play across bronzed backs like the nuances of emotion that surge in the souls of the spectators. These woodsmen are magnificent specimens of manhood as stripped to the waist their torsos shine with the perspiration of health.

A few days later we return our car to the garage at Victoria and sail on the Princess Kathleen to the city of Vancouver. We pass a fleet of little white Japanese fishing boats near Steveston. There are literally hundreds of them. Yards of salmon nets trail from each tiny craft. The steamer winds its way in and out of danger flags, for in circumference the nets must be the size of a city block.

When we enter the second largest land-locked harbor in the world—the largest being at Sydney, Australia—we are nearing Vancouver with its 40 miles of water front and its Stanley park where President Harding delivered his last public address. In the park there are 827 varieties of wild flowers. On the way out to Point Gray hill, where on 12,000 acres of land overlooking the harbor the University of British Columbia is situated, you pass Suwash rock, under which the bodies of some Indian chiefs of the Suwash tribe are buried. From the top of the rock the ashes of the Indian poetess whose nom de plume was Pauline Johnson were blown to the four winds.

ONE OF THE MOST DANGEROUS OF BIRDS

Miss Rose McNellis and the king vulture she has tamed in the Catalina Island bird park off the coast of southern California. This rare bird, a native of South America, is regarded as extremely dangerous. Unlike the eagle, it does not use its claws to carry its prey or tear it apart. Instead, it strikes with the weight of its body and then uses its beak to transport the unlucky quarry.

Robert E. Good Named Western Agent of Lines

George C. Gaede, passenger trafic manager of the American Export Lines, yesterday announced the appointment of Robert E. Good as general western passenger agent, with headquarters in Chicago. For six years Mr. Good was manager of the passenger department with the United States Lines in London. He has made thirty-two cruises to the Mediteranean. In his new position he succeeds J. Henning, resigned.

A series of two weeks' escorted tours to Mexico was announced yesterday by the Robert J. Neidlinger Travel Service of Chicago. The first trip will begin June 19.

Direct air service to Glacier National park from Chicago, effective June 15, was announced Thursday by R. F. Ahrens, district trafic manager of United Air Lines. Passengers leaving here at 9:15 p. m. on a sleeper plane will reach Glacier the following morning. The service, Mr. Ahrens said, is made possible by the completion of a new airport close to the park entrance.

Beginning May 15, the Great Northern railway will add an eight section, five bedroom Pullman to the Empire Builder, running between Chicago and Seattle. This will increase the train's sleeping capacity by twenty-six passengers.

1938 Chicagoland Map Off Presses

With several new features—such as the location of all the hospitals and Red Cross first aid stations—added, THE TRIBUNE Public Service office's 1938 map of Chicagoland came off the presses last week.

The map, embracing the entire tourist region from Madison and Grand Rapids to Peoria and Lafayette, has more detail than ever before. Included are all the railroads, highways, lakes, golf courses, forest preserves, and tourist camps of the Chicago area.

Tourists Spoil Bears, Park Officials Lament

YOSEMITE, Cal.—[U. P.]—Park officials insist tourists have caused bears to become lazy and lose their dignity. Where formerly a bear climbed a tree and knocked over his luncheon in a real "he-bear" manner, as much as he will do nowadays is to climb into an automobile and eat the tourists' lunch, while the tourists laugh and think it is cute.

Snow Shoes in Xenophen.

The first book to mention transportation on the snow was Xenophen's "Anabasis," which tells of Armenians who put enlarged shoes on their horses while traveling in the mountain passes.

THE TRIBUNE TRAVELERS' GUIDE

BUSES—TRAINS | STEAMERS—PLANES

When City Folk Hark to Call of the Mountains

Last week saw near-midsummer heat around Chicagoland, and one result was that the people turned their attention toward the tonic coolness of western America—sometimes referred to as the first of the air conditioned systems.

In this day of fast transportation by train, plane, and bus, nearly every resort area between Chicago and the Pacific coast may be visited, and traversed, in the course of a two weeks' summer vacation. And these areas boast of some of the finest recreation facilities and scenic splendors to be found anywhere.

The United States has, in the 16,678,478 acres of its national parks and monument system, the highest mountain on the continent, the most extensive caverns, the most recently erupting volcano, the oldest living trees. It has wilderness areas where the vacationist may lose himself, and yet find himself in solitudes and beauties unguessed.

In their national playgrounds the people of this country have shaggy buffalo, clownish bears, antlered elk, fleet deer, and Rocky Mountain bighorn. The tourist may enter the homes of prehistoric Indians who lived in cliff caves in the southwest. He may walk across an Indian corn field 1,000 years old. He may see the bones of dinosaurs and the petrified logs of trees buried by inland seas. He may see, in Yellowstone, more freaks of nature than he ever pictured in the wildest flights of his imagination, and, in the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, nature's most stupendous handiwork.

The Rocky Mountain areas of Colorado and Utah, extending over a territory approximately 300 miles wide by 400 miles long, form one of the most magnificent playgrounds in the world. In few other areas are there such lofty mountain peaks sheltering such beautiful valleys and plateaus, such shimmering lakes, such inspiring canyons.

The natural wonders include Great Salt Lake, the world's largest "dead sea"; Pike's peak, the Royal gorge, and the Garden of the Gods. Among the national parks are Rocky Mountain and Mesa Verde in Colorado and Bryce canyon and Zion in Utah. Many of the most interesting sections and "sights" are preserved as national monuments.

On the Canadian border is Glacier National park, now a component part of the Waterton-Glacier International Peace park, established to mark the more than one hundred years of peace between this country and Canada. Glacier is a land of ruggedly moulded mountains bearing in their fastness sixty small glaciers, remnants of the vast ice sheet that once covered all but the highest peaks of the region; of enormous glacier-scooped valleys, and precipices thousands of feet deep.

Mount McKinley National park in Alaska has the highest mountain in North America. In addition, Mount McKinley claims the distinction of rising higher from its base than any other mountain, even those in the Himalayas.

Mount Rainier, in Washington, is one of nature's oddities, a volcano, still steaming although considered extinct, and snow-covered. Over the summit of the mountain and down its sides is the largest single peak glacier system in the United States. Through the snow at the summit, steam melts holes, but down its sides pour twenty-eight named glaciers, veritable rivers of ice, and there are others still unnamed.

Few persons realize that California's Yosemite park, with its magnificent scenic effects, has an area of no less than 1,176 square miles. It lies on the west slope of the Sierra Nevada mountains about 200 miles due east of San Francisco. The Yosemite valley proper occupies only eight square miles. The park above the rim is less celebrated, principally because it is less known. This lack is due largely to the fact that it was not opened to the public by motor road until 1915. Nearby is Sequoia, home of the big trees.

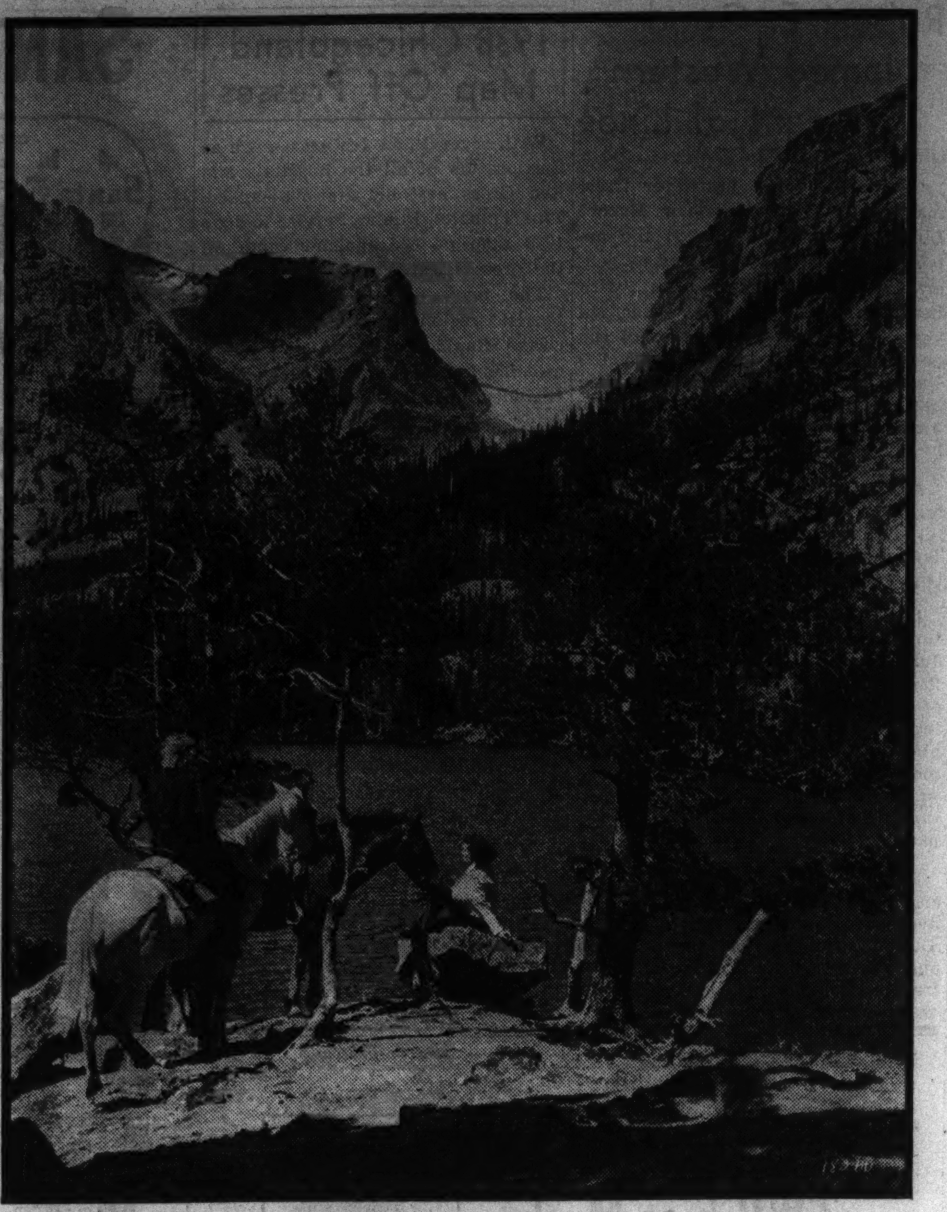
Across the Canadian border, in Alberta, are more than 7,000 square miles of national parks. Jasper, 240 miles west of Edmonton, has become known for the grandeur of its snow-capped peaks and the beauty of its lakes, waterfalls, and mountain streams. Banff, which is about eighty miles west of Calgary, is also a famous vacation land. Within its boundaries are Banff, with its spectacular golf course, swimming, mountain climbing, tennis, and bridle paths, and Lake Louise, regarded as one of the seven perfect landscapes of the world. From these points trails lead out in all directions to mountain lodges and campsites.



IN LOCH VALE, ROCKY MOUNTAIN NATIONAL PARK
Colorado's recreational facilities have a background of snow-capped Rockies, virgin timber, and sparkling lakes. These facilities are now only an overnight train ride from Chicago.

Americans in a Hurry.

LONDON.—(AP)—An American couple attending the theater for the first time the other evening almost committed a sacrilege. They started to leave after the final curtain before the orchestra played "God Save the King." The anthem is played after every show while the audience stands at attention.

Refrigerators for Iceland.

Iceland does not live up to its name, for skating and skiing can be had there only a few days each winter, and summer visitors find the mean temperature of Reykjavik, its capital, the same as that of Milan, Italy. Refrigerators are regularly sent there from America.

It's Safer on a Train Than in Own Home

In the last three years 50 million passengers have been carried in pullman cars on railways in this country without a single fatality. . . . Accident statistics go to show that a person is safer on a train than he is in his own home. . . . Due to improvements in safety devices, a railroad employé's risk of being hurt while at work is now only about one-fourth as great as it was fifteen years ago. . . . These, and a lot of other data, are set forth in a "Do You Know?" booklet put out by the Association of American Railroads. Some of the others are given below.

Although the land area and population of the United States are less than 6 per cent of the world's total, this country has 32 per cent of the world's railway mileage—240,000 out of 757,000 miles of line.

Based on the roads' safety record in the last seven years, a passenger could have ridden more than 2½ billion miles, or continuously for 5,000 years, without meeting death in an accident.

Thirty-five multiple-unit streamlined passenger trains are now in operation, and many others are being built.

Steel rails which have been welded together for more than a mile in length are being used by certain roads to determine their practicability.

The American railways and the Pullman company have nearly 10,000 air conditioned passenger cars in operation and are constantly adding more.

If all the cars and locomotives in this country were coupled together they would make a train almost 17,000 miles long.

If the 200,000 railroad bridges in the United States were placed end to end, they would extend 3,860 miles—a distance greater than that from New York to San Francisco.

More than a million persons work directly for the railroads, and almost as many more are kept busy in making the things the roads need.

About 600 billion gallons of water are required annually to quench the thirst of the iron horse and for other railway uses.

In normal times the roads buy and use one-fifth of the timber cut in this country, and about 23 per cent of the bituminous coal mined.

Dining cars serve approximately 25 million meals a year—enough to feed every inhabitant of a city of nearly 23,000 population three times a day for a whole year.

Wyoming Basin Yields Fossils of 9 Dinosaurs

BILLINGS, Mont.—[U. P.]—Dr. Barnum Brown, curator of the American Museum of Natural History, announced here the discovery of skeletons of nine dinosaurs which roamed the plains of Wyoming about 8,000,000 years ago.

The skeletons, the first of the Mesaverde Cretaceous period ever unearthed, were found in a fossilized ribbon on an anticline near Baxter basin, Rock Springs, Wyo. At the time of the discovery, Dr. Brown's party was searching for the remains of the "world's giant dinosaur," tracks of which have been found over the basin area.

DETOUR

By FREDERIC BABCOCK

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay.—[Special.]—After the vastness of Buenos Aires and Argentina, a visit to this city and country is apt to be in the nature of an anticlimax. . . . Uruguay, smallest of the ten South American states, can boast of no cities comparable in riches or splendor with those of Europe or North America, nor of art and architectural masterpieces brought down through the centuries, nor of a perfected industrial development. . . . It is a young nation with scarcely a century of political independence, and it is still in the period of formation. . . . But, after the first let-down feeling, the visitor can, if he is so minded, find plenty of fascination.

● Montevideo has one distinction not shared by any of its rivals on this continent. . . . Its population of two-thirds of a million is—this correspondent was informed—98 per cent white. . . . They are a friendly people, simple in their customs, and sincere in their wish to give the visitor a new meaning of the phrase, southern hospitality. . . . Buenos Aires, with all its magnificence, doesn't put on half as good a front for its guests.

The city takes its name from the Cerro, a conical hill rising from one of the suburbs to a height of about 500 feet. . . . It is related that in 1726 a sailor, cruising toward the promontory at the mouth of the Rio de la Plata, cried out: "Montevideo!" . . . Which meant, of course, that he saw a mountain. . . . If he had stuck around for a couple of hundred years, he might have added that he also saw a city of complete serenity.

● It is a cosmopolitan place, with large colonies of Spaniards, Italians, Frenchmen, Germans, and Britishers. . . . It is a place of wealth, with few signs of poverty anywhere. . . . Its civic pride has been applied with ability and intelligence, so that today it is becoming one of the really splendid capitals in the western hemisphere. . . . Its Prado houses 800 varieties of roses—said to be the greatest collection in the world. . . . Its most ambitious splurge, the Palacio Legislativo, built largely of marble, and at a cost of $12,000,000, can hold its own with anything in this part of the world. . . . Its Avenida 18 de Julio is a wide and stately thoroughfare, lined throughout its two mile length with shade trees and handsome buildings, with here and there a sidewalk café to give it a touch of Paris.

Montevideo's La Carreta monument.

As far as this observer is concerned, however, all the other attractions are topped by one of lesser grandeur. . . . That is the bronze monument of La Carreta. . . . It stands on a slight elevation in one of the parks, and it shows six oxen pulling a covered cart, with the driver and two other oxen bringing up the rear, and the whole array outlined against the sky. . . . It was imported from Italy and put up as a reminder of Uruguay's primitive past. . . . It doesn't sound like much in the telling, but few who take the trouble to find it can get away without ten or fifteen minutes' contemplation of the story it portrays.

● Close by the city are four beaches strung along the Plata's shores and reaching their climax at Carrasco, a resort of great hotels and casinos, along with elegant villas and summer homes. . . . A little farther out is Piriapolis, a suburb with the rather staggering number of 40,000 eucalyptus trees along its streets and 30,000 bushes and trees in its Park of Roses.

From there on the republic is, for the most part, made up of ranches, cattle breeding establishments, some agriculture, stretches of rich grasses, and a smattering of towns, streams, and beauty spots. . . . The terrain has neither the flatness of the Argentine pampas nor the hilliness of central Brazil. . . . Its appearance might best be described as "wavy." . . . Uruguay is the only South American country without a tropical region. . . . Its entire population does not run much over two million, and nearly half of the total lives in the Department of Montevideo.

● This cruise has been raising hob with our previous conceptions of geography. . . . Even at this distance northward from Cape Horn we're as far south as Africa's southernmost tip, and farther away from the United States than is almost any part of Europe. . . . We've been gadding about the world from stem to stern, instead of around the middle, and for several weeks now the sun has been far to the north of us. . . . It's going to be difficult to get orientated all over again when we return home.

First Wisconsin Resort Built of Slabs, Drift Logs

Sturgeon Bay, Wis., May 7.—Extensive building activities in Wisconsin on the part of resorts and summer hotels in preparation for the coming vacation season has recalled the story of Wisconsin's first summer resort, situated in northern Door county.

This original summer hotel—so the story is told by old timers—was built on a remote bayou called Shivering Sands, and its builder was known as "the sage of Shivering Sands." The hotel was made of slabs and drift logs, ax trimmed, and fastened together with spikes, bolts, and twisted irons after the fashion of a breakwater crib. The sage named it Castle Romance.

Castle Romance was four stories high. The ground floor housed the pigs, the second floor his geese, and third his guests. The furniture consisted of two iron beds and a piano.

But, the career of Castle Romance was brief. The structure had no foundation, and the sands, true to name, shivered and caused the castle to sag and settle toward the bayou.

GOING SOMEWHERE?

Chicago travel officials say there will be more railroad tours westward out of this city this summer than ever before. The national parks are preparing for another record season. Glacier will open June 10—five days ahead of schedule—Yellowstone will begin its season June 30, and Rainier will be ready for visitors June 15.

Announcement was made last week that the Canadian Pacific's Empress of Britain would cruise around the world again in 1939. The liner will sail from New York Jan. 7 on a 128 day voyage that will include Madeira, Gibraltar, Algiers, Monaco, Naples, Athens, the Holy Land, Egypt, India, Ceylon, Penang, Singapore, Siam, Batavia, Bali, the Philippines, China, Japan, Hawaii, California, and Panama. Hongkong, Shanghai, and Peiping are included in the itinerary, on the theory that the war in the orient will be over by next winter.

A "white collar" tour of Europe, designed to appeal to business and professional people of limited time and means, has been arranged by the Holland America and Anchor lines, Treasure Tours, and the Simpson Travel Service. Miss Lois Pannell of Oak Park will conduct the party, sailing Aug. 5 on the Statendam and returning Sept. 7 on the Tuscania. France, Belgium, Holland, England, and Scotland are to be visited.

Word comes from Oregon that the warm weather there has brought fly fishing into its own in the waters of all except the high mountain areas. Many of the mountain lakes are still covered with ice, and the regions around them are blocked with snow. The best fishing results there are not obtained until June and July.

A music pilgrimage to Europe, led by Dr. Franklin Dunham, educational director of the National Broadcasting company, will sail July 2 on the Nieuw Amsterdam. A group under the leadership of Louise C. Struve, head of the division of home economics of the University of California, will leave on the same ship for an epicurean tour of France. Both parties are to be under the sponsorship of the American Institute of Educational Travel.

A series of cruise tours from Chicago to Cuba, Panama, Honduras, and Guatemala has been arranged by the Illinois Central railroad and the United Fruit company. The 20 day trips call for stops in New Orleans, Havana, Cristobal, and Tela; those lasting 19 days take in the Guatemala highlands, but eliminate Havana and Cristobal, while those of 12 days' duration include Tela and Puerto Cortes.

Railroad fans of Chicago and vicinity are to be taken on a two weeks' tour of the Pacific northwest, starting over the Milwaukee road July 10. The return will be by way of San Francisco, Salt Lake City, Colorado Springs, and Excelsior Springs.

Special summer cruises from Vancouver to Alaska on the Princess Charlotte are to be repeated this summer. The ship will sail June 22 and July 4 for 11 day voyages to Taku glacier, Juneau, Sitka, and Skagway.

Taking advantage of the fact that more than six million persons spend their summer vacations in Wisconsin, the Peninsula Players at Fish Creek, on the Door county peninsula, are preparing for another season of drama. Last year they were the only organization of the kind in that region.

Summer cruises on the upper Mississippi are to be inaugurated by the Chicago and North Western May 28, says Passenger Trafic Manager R. Thomson. The voyages will run from Clinton, Ia., to La Crosse, Wis., twice weekly, affording the passengers 182 miles of river scenery.

Thirsty? Sit on Floor and Drink Salted Coffee

By Mason Warner.

ABISKO, Lapland, Sweden.—Mr. and Mrs. Ingemar Smedberg [my volunteer interpreters on this trip] and I took a walk along the lake shore to the east of Palnoviken. Mr. Smedberg soon was thirty or forty yards in advance of Mrs. Smedberg and me. Without stopping, he passed a typical Lapp hut at the side of the trail we were following.

Mrs. Smedberg and I paused and peered through the open door. At that moment a Lapp woman came up fr[illegible] with a pail of water. "Gud dag," was Mrs. Smedberg's greeting.

A friendly smile and a few words in Swedish were the reply. Then the two women engaged in conversation.

"She is inviting us in," said Mrs. Smedberg after a few minutes. "Come on."

We entered. The floor was covered two to three inches deep with clean birch branches, thickly leaved. In the middle of the rear semi-circle of the hut were two shelves, with newspapers used as shelf papers. On them were a few pots, kettles, pans, and two alarm clocks, in orderly arrangement. At one end of the shelves was a small sewing machine of Swedish make, with a drive wheel to be turned by hand. Just the machine on the birch covered floor. There was no stand for it. It was ready for easy transportation in a pulka when the ice and snow would drive the herd of reindeer south.

In the center of the floor was a fire. There was nothing resembling a fireplace—only stones, piled and arranged in a circle to keep the fire from the branches.

Suspended from the roof, on a chain over the fire, was an open kettle half filled with what appeared to be a reindeer stew. The chain holding the kettle was attached to a birch pole lying across the smoke exit in the roof.

The hut contained three small, plain, box-like chests and nothing else worth noting. There were no chairs, no table, no beds, no couches. While I was observing the outfit, Mrs. Smedberg and the Lapp woman were talking to each other—slowly, with brief intervals of silence—at ease, but not with ease.

The native woman's complexion was very light for a Mongolian. Her cheek bones were high. Her eyes were blue, beady, and alert. Her friendly manner and primitive graciousness made up for lack of beauty. She was little more than four feet tall, weighed about 100 pounds, was somewhere between 30 and 40 years old, and quick and deft in movement.

"She wants to know if we will drink a cup of coffee," said Mrs. Smedberg, turning to me. "Remember it is salted—boiled with salt in the water."

All in all, our hostess appeared to be a neat and tidy housekeeper, under the circumstances. So we accepted.

By word and gesture we were invited to sit down. Mrs. Smedberg knew Lapp etiquette and I followed her actions. She knelt down on the branches and settled back until she was sitting on her heels—like the Japanese lady in the print. I followed suit.

The housekeeper went to her shelves and from a tin can took a handful of coffee beans. Then she produced an old-fashioned hand grinder and ground the coffee. From the shelf came a burnished copper coffee pot with a capacity of two quarts or more.

Mr. Smedberg looked in at the door, was invited to join the party, but politely declined, and said we could join him further up the trail.

After filling the copper pot with water, the Lapp woman added two pinches of salt. I could not see if they were thin or thick pinches.

The pot was placed over the fire, resting on two stones, and the water boiled quickly—sooner than one anticipated with that open fire—and our coffee was poured into wooden cups. The cups had been carved into a shape similar to a round gourd cut in half, with projecting, short, flat dipper handles, and cup and handle taken in one piece from a block of birch. The Lapp woman took one from her belt for her own use.

Our hostess then offered goat's milk for our coffee, but we drank it black. After the Lapp manner, I placed a lump of sugar in my mouth, permitting it to dissolve as I consumed the salted coffee. How did it taste? Try it and see.

While refreshments were being prepared and served, the two women carried on a limping, low-toned, quiet-voiced conversation, fragments of which Mrs. Smedberg interpreted for me.

"A few Lapp women roast and grind their coffee every time they make it—for one cup or many. She does not. She roasts it and keeps it ready for grinding as wanted."

The half-sitting, semi-erect posture soon developed into painful strains in the front leg muscles above the knees. I could stand it no longer. We rose, said "Gud dag," and Mrs. Smedberg and I started up the trail.

"She would not talk about herself," said Mrs. Smedberg. "It has been raining here. Not many strangers visit the camp. She used more Lapp words than Swedish and I could not understand all she said."

We soon overtook Mr. Smedberg, who was waiting at a wire fence [no barbs] that streched northward from the shore of Torne Trask.

"It is possible this fence marks the boundary lines between two Lapp camps," he said. "The herds of one camp must not trespass upon land allotted to another."

Upon return to the camp, we verified Mr. Smedberg's assumption. The fence marked the boundary of the lands upon which could feed the reindeer herds belonging to the Lapp camp of Laimolahti, with its twelve families on the other end of Torne Trask, thirty-five miles to the east.

THE VOICE OF THE TRAVELER

THE CHAPEL AT VALLEY FORGE.

Chicago, May 1.—To the Travel Editor: In your "Tips to Tourists," April 24, in answer to a query concerning Valley Forge, you made no mention of the chapel.

Long famous as one of the finest memorials of any kind in America, it makes worth while the twenty-three mile jaunt up from Philadelphia. It is, in fact, the only adequate memorial to Washington's stay in Valley Forge in the winter of 1777-'78. Besides the million dollar church [paid for by tourist and historical society contributions], which is often referred to as the "American Westminster," there are the bell concerts to be heard and a fairly complete museum to visit.

Is it possible that since the death of the founder, Dr. William Herbert Burke, the chapel has been closed to the public? Or why is it that you failed to mention this important part of Valley Forge?

THOSE YOUTH HOSTELS.

Chicago, April 23.—To the Travel Editor: I am sure there are many people who, like myself, would love to travel abroad, but whose lack of money makes this almost impossible.

Every once in a while there is a letter in "The Voice of the Traveler" mentioning vagabond travel. Sometimes there are articles referring to the "Youths' Hostel association," which makes touring less expensive. I have never heard any one telling his experiences along this line, and somehow I hardly know what to expect from it.

If any of your readers have information, through actual experience, about this organization, could they let me know? I am only 18 now, but my older sister and her friend hope to travel with me in this way. I would greatly appreciate a letter. My address is 6020 Woodlawn avenue.

From a future traveler who craves the unknown and unexpected,

[MISS] MARY RENSTROM.

"GOD BLESS THE SHUT-INS."

Milwaukee, Wis., April 26.—To the Travel Editor: Regarding Edwin H. Roper's letter in your column recently: Please don't be influenced by his remarks and omit from your column the "simple letters from shut-ins," as he puts it. He cannot be very sympathetic with invalids, as he claims, or he would never have written as he did and said their letters have practically no news value. I am sure he has never been a shut-in or an invalid or he would not have been so critical.

I am neither a shut-in nor an invalid, but I select this section of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE first and try to write short letters or cards to every one whose names appear therein. And I have had such grateful replies that I feel more than rewarded for the time I give.

Probably the letters of shut-ins have no news value, since the senders cannot be up and going like the rest of us, but they are to me voices of people who are lonely and interested in what is going on. I am not traveling around at present; so possibly Mr. Roper would say my letters would have no news value, but I try to write of the interesting things I come in contact with here, or write of other places where I have been, and then I ask various friends to send cards from their travels or residences so as to help furnish a variety of interest. Every one likes to receive letters, and who could greet the postman more joyfully than a person who has to do his traveling and making friends by mail?

I hope those whose names appear in your paper have very few days when the postman passes by their door. God bless the shut-ins and God bless your important column!

R. A. R.

THIRD CLASS.

Chicago, April 25.—To the Travel Editor: Your reply to a correspondent—that third class on board ship consists of two, four, or six berth rooms on the lower decks—is not correct. The designation really means the forward part of the ship, although it may extend to the middle, and it includes upper as well as lower decks. Your definition would include tourist class, which goes down as far as the fourth deck.

PICK YOUR CAPTAIN.

Chicago, April 25.—To the Travel Editor: Now that it is the fad to travel extensively by freighter, a timely word might be useful.

I have recently returned from a lengthy journey, in the course of which I was on three different freighters. One provided a highly enjoyable experience, one was passable, and the third, because of a domineering and sadistic captain, was unbearable. I was forced to leave the ship, and so far have been unable to get any refund on my passage.

When there are so few passengers the personality of the captain sets the entire tone of the voyage. It is well, therefore, to inquire beforehand as to his type.

A. A.

THANK YOU DEPARTMENT.

Natchez, Miss., April 29.—To the Travel Editor: Many thanks to THE TRIBUNE for the space given us this year in publicizing our seventh annual pilgrimage to the ante-bellum homes of Natchez. We know you will be pleased to learn that the pilgrimage was an outstanding success and that the attendance from Chicago and vicinity was larger than ever before.

NATCHEZ GARDEN CLUB,
By MRS. GERARD H. BRANDON, President.
MRS. JOSEPH F. DIXON, Publicity Chairman.

Wheat Ridge, Colo., May 2.—To the Travel Editor: I want to thank you very much for putting my name on the list to receive mail from travelers. I have been getting so many cards and letters that I feel I have had more than my share. I am deeply grateful to all your readers. This is a wonderful work your paper is doing for the shut-ins, giving them, as it does, an opportunity to get in touch with the outside world.

LYDIA BAUCH.

Chicago, April 24.—To the Travel Editor: I was disappointed to read Edwin H. Roper's letter objecting to the space you are giving the shut-ins, and am glad you printed those replies.

I am a patient at the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium and am one of the many shut-ins who receive cards, letters, folders, and souvenirs from your readers.

THE TRIBUNE and its readers are doing a wonderful thing for the shut-ins. Keep up the good work. And thanks to all the travelers who have sent me cards. We shut-ins really appreciate them.

AMELIA JAEHNKE.

MAIL FOR SHUT-INS.

Chicago, April 24.—To the Travel Editor: Will you be so kind as to place this name on your list to receive cards and letters from travelers? Mrs. Josephine Hutchinson, 2630 North 4th street, Milwaukee, Wis. She has been bedfast for nearly ten years. In her earlier life she was a school teacher and she enjoys books, magazines, puzzles—anything to pass the time. She is 76 years old, tries to keep busy, and has taken so much pleasure from reading.

A RELATIVE.

Kempton, Ill., April 23.—To the Travel Editor: I have a brother who is 22 years old and has been a cripple since birth. He would be greatly pleased to receive a postcard, letter, or anything else to cheer him in his loneliness. His name and address: Durwood Cloos, 393 North Chicago avenue, Kankakee, Ill.

MRS. ESTELLE DOWSE.

Chicago, April 24.—To the Travel Editor: I am writing for my mother, who has been in bed with a heart ailment for the last seventeen weeks. She receives very little correspondence and would deeply appreciate cards and letters from your readers. Her name and address: Mrs. M. P. Werner, 3851 North Harlem avenue, Chicago.

THE $1,000,000 BUILD-UP!

TRIBUNE COLOR STUDIO PHOTO

When "Norwegian" Sigrid Gurie was revealed as a Brooklynite her film sponsors were only momentarily embarrassed. They said the ruse had proved Miss Gurie's ability as an actress.

Priscilla Lane posed for fashion pictures, was escorted by celebrities, greeted visiting notables, all as a part of the campaign to launch her career in Hollywood.

Jacqueline Laurent has been started along the $1,000,000 road to box office recognition.

How Movie Stars Are Born in Hollywood

By ED SULLIVAN

Hollywood, Cal.

● Yet Susan Hayward already is well known the length and breadth of the country. Movie fans have seen her wearing the latest fashions; they've heard that she is a cross between Clara Bow and Maude Adams; they've seen her name linked romantically with young Warner heroes; they've read that her streamlined figure has been voted the No. 1 chassis in Hollywood; her picture has been supplied to every newspaper "morgue" or reference library.

● The fame of Susan Hayward, nationally known although she's never made a moving picture, is a timely illustration of the high-powered million-dollar build-up which Hollywood gives an actress or actor.

Clark Gable was kicking around M-G-M when an appearance in "Dance, Fools, Dance" brought fan mail and started him on a great career.

The $1,000,000 Build-Up

Studios Risk Fortune on 'Finds'

Simon, pronounced See-moan See-moan," are all part and parcel of the million-dollar build-up process which is carried on out here twenty-four hours a day.

Ivy Lee, the public relations counseler who "sold" John D. Rockefeller to the world, was a piker compared to the publicity department of the major studios, whose function it is to make unknowns known in every remote village that has a theater. Ivy Lee at least knew all there was to be known about the senior Rockefeller.

Lee was prepared for repercussions and had plotted his answers. Not so with the Hollywood publicists who charted a million-dollar build-up for Sigrid Gurie, distinguished Norwegian dramatic actress, and then, with the campaign launched, learned too late through the divorce courts that Miss Gurie, instead of stemming from the fjords of Norway, actually stemmed from Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn.

Even the Gurie incident, while embarrassing, brings no blush to the case-hardened cheeks of the Hollywood ballyhooers. Within twenty-four hours the Gurie publicity campaign was altered. The Goldwyn high-pressure boys, without even blinking an eyelash, were engaged in selling the country the idea that Miss Gurie had proved her ability as an actress by fooling the mighty Sam Goldwyn. It's an ill wind that can't be harnessed to supply current to the Hollywood typewriters.

That is Robert Taylor with the scar. He appeared anonymously in the "Crime Doesn't Pay" series, and as a result of his acting the studio received so much fan mail it marked Taylor for the stardom he now enjoys.

The million-dollar build-up process has altered, of course, in the passage of years. As recently at 1927, for instance, when Dolores Costello and Warner Oland were appearing in "A Million Bid," the publicity men of the day advertised it thusly: "Steeped in the human fires of desire." That was hot stuff (no pun intended). Of "Captain Salvation" the 1927 publicity men screamed: "Blood lust and love on a scarlet hell ship." The industry at the time was geared to tomtoms. The public was naive and could be stampeded by adjectives. Terrific, colossal, and gigantic were a Hollywood trinity. Publicity stories were faked with impunity and the sky was the limit in exaggeration.

Then newspapers started sending correspondents to Hollywood, hard-boiled reporters who likely as not called a spade a spade and a hoax a fake. The influx of reporters continued, and now there are 239 accredited correspondents headquartered here. More than any other single factor this rush of reporters contributed good taste to Hollywood's blatant publicity. They were a refining influence in the publicity welter. They discouraged fakes by exposing them. They did away with the 1927 spree of adjectives by kidding them to death.

At first the Hollywood high-pressure ballyhooers hated the newly arrived newspaper men with a fierce hatred. But, as I've pointed out, these Hollywood publicists turn everything to advantage. They realized that with reporters on the scene their task had been lightened almost to the vanishing point. Now all they had to do was sell a bill of goods to the Hollywood correspondents and within twenty-four hours the news of a picture or the name of a player would be flashed over the world. The million-dollar build-up process has been premised on that idea ever since.

Sam Goldwyn and his experience with Anna Sten added the final contours to the million-dollar build-up policy of the major studios. Up to that time the publicity men were convinced that the way to sell a newcomer to the public was to claim everything in sight for him. Overselling players and pictures got its first tremendous jolt when Goldwyn spent a fortune on Miss Sten and the public rejected her. So today the studios undersell rather than oversell, acknowledging that the public taste can be influenced but not blackjacked. The arbitrary method of a studio saying, "This is a star," has been sidetracked by the more persuasive campaign adopted in the typical case of Susan Hayward.

Tyrone Power. Film date with Simone his break.

At no time in the Hayward campaign has Publicity Chief Bob Taplinger at Warners' permitted any communique to go out under the Warner seal claiming that Miss Hayward is a great actress. He has pointed out suavely that, like Clara Bow, Susan is red-headed and comes from Brooklyn, leaving you to draw your own conclusions. He has said truthfully that Miss Hayward was judged to be the possessor of the No. 1 curves of Hollywood, and if you press him he will admit suavely that the one who said she has the No. 1 figure is the masseur employed on the Warner lot, and he will even admit that the masseur might be a bit prejudiced.

Harry Brand, the very competent publicity chief at Twentieth Century-Fox, notes a sociological trend in studio publicity, marked in the case of Arleen Whalen. Mr. Brand, an old hand at the business of giving a million-dollar build-up to the unknowns of celluloid, says: "Years ago the idea was to glamorize a girl. If she came from a poor home it was considered wise to hush that up and invent rich grandparents. Today a publicity department is tickled to death to get a young actor or actress with a working background. Take Arleen Whalen. She was a manicurist when Zanuck discovered her. In the old days I would have played down the manicurist angle and would have suggested that she was an heiress who took up manicuring for a hobby. At the very worst I would have made her the owner of the shop. Today we get all the pictures we can of her as a manicurist and play her up as a working girl who earned her dough the hard way. We fall in step with the political and social philosophy."

Robert Taylor's first M-G-M picture was a short, part of a series called "Crime Doesn't Pay." To give greater authenticity to these shorts, the actors never are identified. Yet at the preview of that short, at which cards were distributed for patron opinions, each card submitted asked for the name of the boy in the three-reeler. It was then that M-G-M knew that Taylor had the makings of a star, and they started the build-up process.

The mechanics of the million-dollar build-up may intrigue you. In Taylor's case they had to fatten him up. He was too angular, too gawky. They turned him over to a physical trainer. His eyebrows were too bushy, so they called in an expert barber to shave out and thin out the tufts of hair that gave him a sinister and sullen appearance. He wasn't getting much dough, so they bought him suits of clothes, a dinner jacket and tails, and sports suits. They gave him an expense account so that he could take out girls selected by the publicity department and so get his name in the syndicated columns. Once a player moves up in the salary brackets, these financial aids are withdrawn, but to the youngster who is on short salary the studio advances all of this money cheerfully. The most expensive part of this first building up campaign is the money spent for makeup tests and portraits.

Arleen Whalen during the experimental period had thirty makeup tests to find out which coiffure and facial makeup showed her off to best advantage. Each test cost $1,000, a total of $30,000. Portrait sittings at $15 a negative go into other thousands of dollars.

Once a young actress, like Susan Hayward, Jacqueline Laurent, Priscilla Lane, Arlene Whalen, Marjorie Weaver, Florence Rice, or Sonja Henie, has been selected for million-dollar grooming, the publicity department gets her to pose for fashion pictures. Then they select escorts for her, preferably somebody with star rating so that her picture is snapped with somebody of importance to give her prestige. Suddenly you hear that she has been named among the ten best of something or other, for the ten best racket is the oldest of ballyhoo devices. Then you may see her greeting a visiting senator or governor, or you will find her picked to preside as queen of a college campus. Perhaps she will be selected to ride in the main float at the Pasadena flower festival.

With the new name established throughout the country, the studio then beats its head over the selection of that hugely important first rôle in the first picture. Publicity and advertising have done all that is possible in the matter of exploitation, but now the performer is to be presented to the public, and if the money invested in the performer's build-up is to be recouped it is vitally important for that first rôle to be a good one. You see, inevitably the making of a star comes right back to the public. Tyrone Power appeared in only one scene of "Girls' Dormitory." The studio was flooded with letters asking the identity of the boy who had met Simone Simon at the railroad station. Zanuck immediately took the unknown Power and made him a star in "Lloyds of London."

Clark Gable was kicking around the Metro lot for years. Suddenly, after the release of "Dance, Fools, Dance," the letters started pouring in with rave expressions about Gable. M-G-M made him a star in his next picture. The importance of the public as a jury can't be overemphasized, so the next time you see some youngster or veteran and enjoy his or her performance, don't be ashamed to sit down and write a letter to his studio and tell the bosses about it. That's how stars are born.

The final step in the million-dollar ballyhoo is the world première, at such a theater as the Carthay Circle. That costs the studio about $18,000 for one week. Street signs and billboards cost $2,600; the radio broadcast in front of the theater, including the cost of announcers, comes to $1,100; the lobby display of portraits and flowers costs $766; the bleachers where acres of fans will sit cost $500; the red rug on which the celebs will walk from their cars into the theater is comparatively cheap at a rental of $75. Break down the balance of the sum into police protection, accident insurance, and some other items and you have the complete picture.

In building up such a youngster as Tommy Kelly, who played the lead in "Adventures of Tom Sawyer," the studio is necessarily limited. About the best you can do in such a case is to build up the Cinderella note of the selection, pose him with his Bronx schoolmates, photograph him in the school at the studio, and compose a picture of a nice kid. Selznick's Boswell, Russ Birdwell, confessed to me that the main problem with this picture was to sell it as adult entertainment so that older people would come in to see it.

However, that was just an incident in Birdwell's current set-up of problems. It is he who is weighted down with "Gone with the Wind," probably the greatest headache from a publicity standpoint of any picture ever planned out here. Birdwell, fully aware that it would be dangerous to get too much publicity on "Gone with the Wind" before it reached the cameras, deliberately discouraged it. However, the wags went to work on the selection of Scarlett O'Hara with a vengeance and every newspaper paragrapher and radio comic worked it to death. As a result the timing of a "Gone with the Wind" exploitation has gone with the wind and the picture has not yet neared the shooting stage.

Dear Miss Tinée: Will you please tell me who died in "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine"? And please be so kind as to include a picture of Bing Crosby and his address. Wishing you loads of success, I remain

MARION O'CONNOR.

Editor's note: "Spanky" McFarland died in "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine." Here's Bing's picture, and his address is Paramount studio, 5451 Marathon street, Hollywood, Cal. And the same to you!

BING CROSBY
A fan asks for his Hollywood address.

Dear Miss Tinée: I was rather amused at your article about Ken and Kermit Maynard. They do happen to be brothers, and both were born and grew up in this, my fair city of Columbus, Ind. I went to school in East Columbus with Kermit, and I knew Ken, but, he being older, I didn't know him so well. Their parents and sister still live in this city.

Yours, MRS. G. E. MITCHELL.

Editor's note: The mistake is all mine! I'm sorry. And thank you so much for your interest and the information.

Dear Miss Tinée: My girl friend and I have been arguing for a long time, and we decided to write to you to find out who is right. The subject is the stars' ages. She insists that the stars listed below are older than I think. Would you please put down their right ages?

R. K. and V. D.

Deanna Durbin, born in 1922.
Rochelle Hudson, born in 1916.
Shirley Temple, born in 1929.
Grace Moore, born in 1901.
Jane Withers, born in 1926.
Robert Taylor, born in 1911.
Barbara Stanwyck, born in 1907.
Carole Lombard, born in 1909.
Janet Gaynor, born in 1906.

Dear Mae Tinée: S. O. S.! S. O. S.! Will some one please come to the rescue of rising young starlets?

Take Marjorie Weaver, for example. After stealing the show from Loretta Young and Tyrone Power in "Second Honeymoon" she was given a small part in "Sally, Irene, and Mary," and I hear she's scheduled for an unimportant part in "Kentucky Moonshine." Is that fair? Hollywood, give her a chance. With her fine talent she certainly deserves it!

MARJORIE WEAVER
Continuation in small parts brings protest.

Our Twentieth Century-Fox starlet isn't the only one that's suffering from a bad case of minor parts, either. Look what's happened to Joan Fontaine after "Damsel in Distress," and where is Anne Shirley after her grand support in "Stella Dallas"?

Though the name of a recent popular song was "You Appeal to Me," may I change it to "I Appeal to You," Miss Tinée, to give our starlets a chance to display their talents? I wonder if you would print this to see if other fans would agree with me?

PEGGY LEITH.

Crystal Lake, Ill.

Editor's note: To make your life brighter, I rather guess I'd better print your S. O. S. (pome).

Dear Miss Tinée: Would it be possible to show the picture "A Family Affair" again in some theater? I think you have quite some influence to make them play it again. You see, there are so many people that did not know at that time it would be the "Hardy Family." The other two pictures are just grand, and I would love to see the first.

Yours very truly, MRS. H. W.

Editor's note: Let's see if your letter won't exert the needed influence. Exhibitors usually like to show pictures that folks like to see.

Besieged by Germans for Five Days in Argonne

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

FULLY as inspiring as the heroic defense of the Alamo, the famous charge of the Light brigade at Balaklava, or Custer's desperate fight on the banks of the Little Big Horn was the exploit of the celebrated Lost Battalion, the most widely discussed incident of American heroism of the World war.

The Lost Battalion was not in the strict sense a battalion, it never at any time was lost, and its commander, Maj. Charles W. Whittlesey, did not tell the Germans to "go to hell," as once popularly supposed. These facts, however, take away no glory from those valiant doughboys and their officers who broke the enemy line in the Argonne forest and held out for five days, virtually without food, with only a limited supply of ammunition, and completely surrounded by German troops.

The Allied Meuse-Argonne advance saw the American 77th division, commanded by Maj. Gen. Robert Alexander, held up on Oct. 1, 1918, by strong enemy entrenchments in the Argonne, a wild country of hills and ravines, covered by thickets and scrub timber, that favored defensive warfare such as the Germans were fighting. The 77th was on the extreme left of the American line, with a front approximately 4,000 yards wide. On its left were French troops, part of the 38th corps. On its right was the American 28th division. Still farther to the right, beyond the 28th, was the veteran American 1st division.

Alexander's division, composed largely of New York City men and filled in with replacements from the west, had its two infantry brigades facing the Germans on a front running roughly from east to west. Of these two brigades, the one on the right was the 153d, composed of the 305th and 306th regiments, while on the left was the 154th, made up of the 307th and 308th regiments. Major Whittlesey was in command of the first battalion of the 308th, the regiment on the extreme left of the American line.

Early in the morning of Oct. 2 there was an assault by the 77th division against the strongly occupied positions of the Germans in the woods to the north, in conjunction with attacks by the French on the left and by the 28th division on the right. This push failed. Shortly after 11 o'clock that morning Brig. Gen. Evan M. Johnson of the 154th brigade telephoned to Col. Cromwell Stacey, commander of the 308th infantry, to the effect that the attack would be renewed at 12:30 in the afternoon and must be carried out regardless of opposition and casualties.

Major Whittlesey at the hour set advanced into a ravine that ran northward from the American lines to the region of Charlevaux mill, on Charlevaux creek, which was his objective. Leaving Companies D and F of his regiment behind to draw the attention of the enemies west of this ravine, he pushed forward with the main part of his battalion and two platoons (nine guns) from Companies C and D, 306th machine gun battalion.

His force encountered deadly opposition from enemy machine guns in the woods of the eastern slopes of La Palette hill, on its left, along the base of which it was supposed to advance. Retracing its steps, the command cut across the ravine and escaped from the fire of the Germans by plunging into the deep wood of hill 198, on the right. Here Whittlesey's men were reinforced by the second battalion of the 308th under Capt. George G. McMurtry.

The combined battalions moved forward, swung to the north, and soon (about 4 o'clock) stumbled onto a line of permanent German trenches in the gloom of the forest. These trenches were unoccupied. Off to the right the 307th infantry was attacking, and the Germans had been pulled over that way to resist. As a result Whittlesey's men pushed forward without any immediate opposition.

About 6 o'clock in the evening the major and his mixed force arrived in the region of Charlevaux mill after a drive through the woods which had netted them thirty German prisoners and three enemy machine guns. Whittlesey selected as his position for the night the southern slope of a hill just north of Charlevaux creek and slightly to the east of the mill.

Whittlesey had reached his objective, which, according to orders, he was to hold. He had under him now Companies A, B, C, E, G, and H of the 308th infantry and the previously mentioned two platoons of the 306th machine gun battalion. As night was falling he disposed his command by companies from left to right in the following order: H, B, C, A, G, and E. The territory covered was between 300 and 400 yards wide on the side of the hill. Efforts were not made then to locate other outfits at right and left. Whittlesey took it for granted that the other outfits were in position on his flanks. The soldiers dug funk holes into the side of the hill. Outposts were established.

Thus, without knowing it, this courageous band of Americans took up a position that was to be held from that evening until the evening of Oct. 7, five days later. The position came to be known as the "pocket," from the nature of the terrain in which it was established. The Germans called it and the soldiers in it the Amerikanernest (American nest).

Whittlesey up to this time had maintained contact with his regimental headquarters through a series of runners and runner posts. When the objective was reached the colonel of the 308th was notified through a messenger and the information was relayed at once to brigade and division headquarters. Since American and French attacks had failed at all other points in the line, it was apparent at once at headquarters that Whittlesey and his men were in an extremely dangerous position. General Alexander ordered the third battalion of the 307th infantry, which until this time had been held in reserve, to make a hurried march through the night to reinforce their comrades.

Of the companies of the 307th that set out to join Whittlesey only one, Company K, under Capt. Nelson M. Holderman, carried out its mission. Companies I, M, and F wandered about through the woods in a circle and returned to their regimental line next day. Captain Holderman's company, which had bivouacked for the night in a position about 300 yards south of that of Whittlesey's men, joined the latter about 7 a. m.

Lieut. Karl Wilhelm, commanding Company E, was ordered by Whittlesey early that morning—the morning of Oct. 3, the first day of the five-day siege—to attack any of the enemy that might be at the rear in order to make it possible for Companies D and F to come up. These were the companies, it will be remembered, which were left behind at the mouth of the ravine the previous day. It was Wilhelm's task to open the way for these two companies in the rear so they could strengthen the command in the advanced position, the force that soon throughout the whole civilized world was to be known as the Lost Battalion.

Although the Germans ineffectively shelled the Americans about 8:30 a. m., it was not until later that morning that Whittlesey had any reason to be alarmed by his position. Patrols that had been sent out to attempt to establish contact with friendly forces on right and left came back with reports that the enemy were on both flanks. Having brought a couple of cages of pigeons along with him in his advance, the major, twenty minutes after the German bombardment, released one of the birds with a message to the effect that his outfit was being shelled by the enemy, and asking for artillery support.

Major Whittlesey

This, the first pigeon message sent out, followed several that had been sent out by runners and gave the command's position with accuracy in respect to the coördinates on the field maps carried by Allied officers. In fact, virtually all of the messages sent out by Whittlesey, according to a preponderance of evidence, correctly placed his position to the north of Charlevaux creek and east of the mill by the same name.

Shortly after a heavy trench mortar of the enemy had opened up at 10 o'clock on Whittlesey's men from a position about 600 yards to the west, Lieutenant Leak of Company E staggered back to the position, followed by eighteen men. That a portion of Company E under the command of Lieutenant Wilhelm had been able to fight its way through to the regimental line Lieutenant Leak did not know. All he knew was that Whittlesey's rear was cut off by the enemy, that Germans were filtering in and completely surrounding the command.

The men in the pocket had only emergency rations, most of which were eaten the night before. They had no overcoats, no blankets. For their machine guns, rifles, and Chauchats (automatic rifles) there was not any too much ammunition. The command had no medical officers, only three enlisted men from the medical corps, with a scanty supply of bandages.

The Lost Battalion was fortunate in being commanded by able officers. Whittlesey, in peace time a New Englander practicing law in New York, was level-headed and cool. McMurtry, a one-time Rough Rider, was of the type to maintain a high morale among his men. Holderman was a born soldier. He enjoyed fighting. The younger officers were efficient and as brave as their superiors.

The afternoon of Oct. 3 saw the failure of an attempt by Company K of the 307th to establish contact with American forces at the rear. That was the last effort to force a passage through the Germans who swarmed in behind the advanced position of the Americans, although from time to time attempts were made to get runners through. The Germans attacked the pocket twice that afternoon and twice were beaten back. The supply of dressings and first-aid bandages was exhausted that night. The men suffered from cold and hunger.

On the morning of Oct. 4 Whittlesey released his fourth pigeon, asking for rations to be dropped by airplanes. The enemy bombarded the pocket for an hour or more with three trench mortars. Two friendly planes appeared, one of which dropped messages that fell within the enemy lines.

Shortly before 3 p. m. a devastating artillery fire fell upon the men in the pocket. The shells came from the south, destroyed much of the cover of the position, and caused approximately thirty casualties. The shelling lasted more than an hour and a half and drove some of the members of the command away from the position and into the hands of the Germans. As this bombardment from the south was in progress the Germans in the woods joined in with trench mortars and machine guns. In the confusion of it all Whittlesey released his last pigeon, Cher Ami, with the following message:

"We are along the road parallel 276.4. Our own artillery is dropping a barrage directly on us. For heaven's sake, stop it."

Faithful Cher Ami got through, minus an eye and with a leg shot away. Firing had ceased, however, when the bird's message was delivered to headquarters. How the American artillery happened to fire upon the Lost Battalion is a matter not exactly clear in all its aspects. There was a liaison officer of the 305th American field artillery with Whittlesey's men. It is known that he sent a message by pigeon. Then there was the matter of a map in possession of the artillery that had the Lost Battalion wrongly located as to coördinates. All of the officers and men under Whittlesey were convinced that they were shelled by their own artillery.

There were two attacks by the Germans following the bombardment. Both of them were beaten back. Night brought a great deal of suffering to the men, especially to the wounded.

Throughout Oct. 5 the troops in the pocket could hear the sounds of battle to the south. A desperate attempt was being made to relieve them. Although the American attack failed, it did before midnight of that night get a battalion through the German wire in the ravine leading north to Charlevaux mill. The French that day occupied La Palette hill for an hour, but were driven back. In the meantime the Germans had attacked the men in the pocket after sweeping the position with machine gun fire. As in previous attacks, they were repulsed. This assault was delivered after the pocket had been subjected to a bombardment by French artillery off to the southwest.

The rolls of the dead and wounded were mounting rapidly. The night of Oct. 5-6 saw increased suffering. Oct. 6 was a repetition of the previous days. Further efforts to drop supplies from planes failed.

Those who were killed lay unburied. The wounded were suffering terribly. Gangrene had set in in some cases and many of the wounded were slowly dying. The night of Oct. 6-7 was one of stark horror. The morning of Oct. 7 dawned upon a dismal scene. Still the Germans were being held off. American prisoners taken by them had given the information that Whittlesey's command contained more than twice as many as it actually did. The enemy, in other words, did not realize how few really were the defenders of the pocket. Shortly before noon that day the Germans attacked from the north. The Americans, many barely able to stand, beat back the attack.

About 4 o'clock in the afternoon there appeared an American soldier carrying a white flag. He was taken before Major Whittlesey. He gave to the major a neatly typed letter which read as follows:

To the Commanding Officer, Infantry, 77th American Division.

Sir: The bearer of this present, Private Lowell R. Hollingshead, has been taken prisoner by us. He refused to give the German intelligence officer any answer to his questions and is quite an honorable fellow, doing the honor to his fatherland in the strictest sense of the word.

He has been charged against his will, believing that he is doing wrong to his country, to carry forward this present letter to the officer in charge of the battalion of the 77th division, with the purpose to recommend this commander to surrender with his forces, as it would be quite useless to resist any more in view of the present conditions.

The suffering of your wounded can be heard over here in the German lines, and we appeal to your humane sentiments to stop. A white flag shown by one of your men will tell us that you agree to these conditions. Please treat Private Lowell R. Hollingshead as an honorable man. He is quite a soldier. We envy you.

THE GERMAN COMMANDING OFFICER.

This message, written by Lieut. Fritz Prinz, who once lived in Seattle, roused the Americans to heights of unconquerable fury. Whittlesey merely read it and passed it on to McMurtry. He did not shout to the Germans:

"Go to hell!"

There were no Germans in the immediate vicinity for him to shout to, and, besides, he was not of the shouting kind. He sent Hollingshead, who had been captured while searching for food packages dropped by planes, back to his company.

So angry were the starving men at the appeal of the Germans to their humane sentiments that when the latter attacked again that day they fought even more ferociously than before. This was the final attack upon the pocket.

All the while American elements that had filtered in through the German wire were moving closer and closer. Away off to the right the famous 1st division was pushing into the German front. The enemy knew, even before troops of the 82d American division were brought up to attack in a gap between the 28th division and the 1st division, that they would have to retire. These three divisions to the east crashed through far to the northward, finally on Oct. 7 threatening the rear of the Germans who barred the advance of the 77th division.

Night had fallen when an advance squad from Company B, 307th infantry, stumbled into the position occupied by Whittlesey's men. The Lost Battalion was relieved at last. More troops came into the pocket from the south. The next morning General Alexander arrived.

Of the 679 soldiers under Whittlesey who had attacked the Germans on Oct. 2, 107 were dead. Of the 463 officers and men who were cut off on Oct. 3, 69 had been killed or were missing. Only 194 were able to march out of the pocket, and of these many were wounded.

For their inspiring record of fortitude and tenacity and for their superb courage and leadership Whittlesey, McMurtry, and Holderman were given the congressional medal of honor, America's highest award for valor. A number of others, officers and men, were awarded other decorations.

A Fur-Lined Bullet—The Racing Cheetah

Greyhounds No Match for Leopardlike Animal

By SAM BREWER

London.

FASTER than the 5:15 express; bred in the Indian jungle, yet tame as a parlor tabby—that is the modern racing cheetah.

A cheetah in full stride.

Eight of these leopardlike animals have been introduced to English dog racing fans, with spectacular results. Imported with the idea of racing them against greyhounds, the cheetahs promptly ran themselves out of competitive jobs. They were far too fast for the best of the dogs. Now all they can do is race against greyhounds once a week in an exhibition of their speed.

At their first appearance, Dec. 11 at Romford stadium, the best of the team, Helen, romped home many yards ahead of the fastest dogs, setting a track record of 15.86 seconds for 355 yards—55 miles an hour. The best of the dogs can do only about 38 miles an hour, while any of the cheetahs can do 40 or 42.

Efforts to even matters up by giving the dogs a long start failed. With 40 yards start in 440 the dogs still lost. And with more than that the cheetahs refused to run. They depend on keen eyesight rather than scent, and they cannot see the bit of rabbit used as a lure if it is too far away.

Cheetahs have been used for centuries by oriental princes to run down game, as medieval kings used falcons to hunt birds and small animals.

The sport is so old that nobody knows where or when it began. It is believed to have spread from Egypt to Persia and later to India, where cheetahs lived wild in the jungles. When in recent years the native stock began to fail it was found that cheetahs reared in captivity were lazier than the wild stock and lacked the terrific speed of those caught in the jungle and tamed.

From Kenya Colony, East Africa, Indian princes ordered fresh supplies of wild cheetahs, and British settlers made a business of catching them for sale to maharajahs.

Although they are the fastest animals in the world for short distances, cheetahs lack stamina and cannot go far. Hunters ride them down on horseback and say that a cheetah can rarely keep ahead of a good horse for more than a mile. Once tired out, they are roped and taken away for training.

They look much like leopards, but they are gentle and easily tamed; and, above all, they never turn on a man, as leopards and other cats are likely to do, after they have been tamed.

For all their looks, cheetahs are not classed with other members of the cat family. They are in a special group known to scientists as the jubatus. Their legs are longer and their bodies lighter than in cats. Their paws and claws are doglike, and they cannot pull the claws entirely out of sight as can cats. They purr like cats, but when they lick your hand it is like being licked by a barbed wire fence instead of the sandpaper effect of a cat's tongue.

They are timid and easily frightened at first; then they become doglike in their affection.

The idea of bringing a team of cheetahs to England for exhibitions originated with a young English sportsman, K. C. Gandar Dower, and a friend in Kenya Colony who has kept his identity secret.

That was nearly four years ago. Three years was spent in catching and taming cheetahs, and in December, 1936, twelve of them arrived here. Four died, but the other eight are healthy and have grown unusually thick coats as protection against the raw climate.

Another year was spent in trying them out with dogs, getting them used to the climate, and teaching them to chase the electric hare. Dower describes the training process as "judicious bribery and corruption."

Miss Ruby Henderson, an English girl who has been their trainer, agrees with him. She says they are very intelligent and extremely self-willed. They cannot be punished, because they do not seem to understand that the beating is a result of their own misdeeds. As a result they have to be coaxed and training is a tedious business.

Cheetahs and greyhounds got along together from the very beginning. If the dog gets the bit of rabbit that is attached to the electric hare as a lure the cheetah lets him alone. If the cheetah gets it the greyhound that tries to take it away gets a powerful cuff across the ear.

When it was first announced the cheetahs were coming to England the news raised a great stir. Timid Britons wrote letters of protest to newspapers and members of parliament against the introduction of "savage beasts" into the country. There is no record, according to Dower, of even a wild cheetah ever having attacked a human being.

Dower acknowledged that cheetahs will never be able to compete with greyhounds on the tracks. There can never be a large enough supply of racing cheetahs to displace dogs, and, as already explained, dogs cannot match the cheetah's speed.

They cannot be classed as performing animals, either, for the simple reason that their trainer admits it is impossible to make them do anything unless they want to do it. They were trained first by dragging a dead rabbit behind a car; then they were taught that when they caught the electric hare there was a piece of rabbit waiting for them to eat.

For twenty-four hours before they race they are not fed, so they will show more enthusiasm for the chase. But if they do not feel in the mood they refuse to run, and if one of them gets a long lead over the others they give up the chase and stroll back to their cages.

Only a few leaps away from the starting post, the cheetah already has established a lead.

Mysterious Fate of Madcap Starr Faithfull

Still a Puzzle to Lawless New York

Starr Faithfull, whose death still has lawless New York puzzled.

By WILLIAM FULTON

New York.

WAS THE strange death of Starr Faithfull, the Greenwich Village madcap beauty, a murder or suicide? Hints of blackmail and murder to save the reputations of prominent and powerful persons mingled with the girl's own last letters, in which she poured out her unrequited love for a handsome ship's doctor. The case is still carried on the books here in New York as unsolved.

The body of Starr Faithfull, the stepdaughter of Stanley E. Faithfull, well-to-do retired chemical manufacturer, was cast up by the sea on the shore at Long Beach, Long Island, on the morning of June 8, 1931.

Dr. Otto Schulz, the medical examiner, said death had been caused by drowning and that Starr had been the victim of a criminal assault. Bearing this theory out was the fact that the arms and other parts of the body bore bruises incurred before death. There was nothing to indicate, Dr. Schulz insisted, that the girl had committed suicide.

District Attorney Elvin I. Edwards of Nassau county, who took charge of the case, contended repeatedly that Starr was too much under the influence of veronal at the time of her death to have been capable of suicide. Much was learned subsequently about Starr's erotic makeup and bizarre history that would seem to belie this official opinion, but the mystery still remains.

Starr was a fanciful girl who drank liquor, as she said, in an effort to "like people" and took sedatives "to forget." Only 25 years of age, Starr possessed a trim figure, brown hair, brown eyes, and fair skin. She was excessively proud of her good looks. She was, the personality experts said, a narcist, so named after the youth in Greek mythology who fell in love with his own reflection mirrored in the waters of a fountain and was transformed into the narcissus flower. Many of Starr's waking hours were occupied with thoughts of her own physical appearance.

Her popularity was attested to by the numerous male friends she had. In her circle of admirers moved New York politicians, artists, and wealthy men. In England a peer's son, whose name was never made public, was a close acquaintance.

Investigators of the case were extremely interested in a tragedy which befell Starr in her girlhood, as revealed by members of her family. Her stepfather said this episode "warped her mind and killed her soul." He exhibited her "memory book" which she had kept while at Rogers Hall, a girls' school in Wellesley, Mass., chronicling a trip through the White mountains and Quebec with the man Faithfull accused of turning the course of Starr's life. A Boston attorney admitted during the inquiry that he negotiated a settlement for $20,000 between Faithfull and the man he charged with harming his stepdaughter.

On the other hand, three letters purportedly written by Starr to Dr. George Jameson-Carr, the ship's surgeon with whom she was infatuated, lent credence to the theory that the young woman determined to end what she described as her "worthless, disorderly bore of an existence."

Although these letters bore out the suicide theory strongly, they did not remove murder as a possibility. After all, it was pointed out, the girl in the abandon of her last day of life might have encountered some one who killed her before she had an opportunity to carry out her plan of self-destruction, whatever it might have been.

There were garments missing when a beach comber stumbled over her body that have never been discovered, nor were the authorities ever enlightened regarding the manner in which she entered the water after having first swallowed enough veronal to put her to sleep. She might have walked into the surf from the beach, or she might have fallen or been pushed from an ocean liner putting out to sea.

It was an escapade aboard Dr. Jameson-Carr's ship, the Franconia of the Cunard line, which made Starr bitterly certain that her chances of winning his affection had gone to smash.

The episode occurred on May 29, 1931, when the Franconia was in port following a seven months' cruise. Starr boarded the ship, longing for her doctor friend. Peering through a porthole in his cabin, she saw him entertaining a group of friends. The lonely girl had carried a bottle of liquor aboard, and now she drank heavily of it. Either by design or accident she was still on the deck of the big liner when it warped out of the pier and started down the Hudson on the way to England. Starr was without a ticket and passport. She was put off on a tug and taken back to shore.

The first of the notes, posted May 30, the day after the sailing, hinted at suicide in a vague way, but then again Starr spoke wistfully in another paragraph of seeing the doctor again, promising he would suffer "no more bother from me."

The second was a note couched in formal terms, apparently prompted by the thought that Dr. Jameson-Carr could show it to his superiors in explanation of her stowaway act on the Franconia. She apologized for the fracas she had caused on the Franconia's last departure from New York and explained that she brought her own liquor aboard and "drank too fast."

The third of the farewell letters was written on the stationery of a 5th avenue department store and was posted in the Grand Central terminal on June 4, the day she disappeared from home. In this she told Dr. Jameson-Carr that she looked forward to her last twenty-four hours with joyful anticipation. But again her mind had shifted before the letter was completed, for she asked the doctor to see her the next time he was in New York.

"If there is an after life it would be a dirty trick," said this last letter of Starr's, "but I am sure 50,000,000 priests are wrong. That is one of those things one knows. Nothing makes any difference now. I love to eat, and I can have one delicious meal with no worry over gaining. I adore music, and I am going to hear some good music. I believe I love music more than anything.

"I am going to drink slowly, keeping aware every second. Also I am going to enjoy my last cigaret. I won't worry because men flirt with me in the streets. I shall encourage them. I don't care who they are."

It was this last note of reckless abandon which prompted the theory that Starr might have been the victim of another hand than her own.

But the tone became more somber.

"I am going (definitly now—I've been thinking of it for a long time) to end my worthless, disorderly bore of an existence—before I ruin any one else's life as well.

"Being a sane person, you may not understand—I take to dope to forget and drink to try and like people, but it is of no use. I am mad and insane over you. I hold my breath to try to stand it—take allonal in the hope of waking happier, but that homesick feeling never leaves me.

"I have, strangely enough, more of a feeling of peace, or whatever you call it, now that I know it will soon be over. The half hour before I die will, I imagine, be quite blissful."

But the end showed that she still clung to life and the hope that in it she might once again see the doctor.

"If you come to see me when you are in this time you will be a sport—you are assured by this letter of no more bother from me, my dear. STARR."

Dr. Jameson-Carr took his holiday (English for vacation) on a trip back to the United States with the trio of farewell letters when he learned of Starr's death. He was represented as having only a "professional interest" in the girl, which on one occasion, at the request of the family, which considered him "a good influence," he stretched to the extent of making a social call at her Greenwich Village apartment in New York.

Starr had once made a trip to England, telling her friends she was to be married to a ship's officer on her arrival. She became stranded abroad without funds when her prospective bridegroom disclaimed all knowledge of his engagement. On that occasion Dr. Jameson-Carr bought her a third-class ticket home and asked Mr. Faithfull to reimburse him.

The surgeon was absolved, as were all other man and girl companions of Starr. The detectives on the case failed to fill up the gaps which might have proved murder on one hand or suicide on the other. That is why the chapter does not end, but resolves itself into a question mark.

By ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

(Copyright: 1938: By Chicago Tribune-New York News Syndicate, Inc.)

IF YOU do not "walk in beauty" it certainly will not be because we do not keep after you about it. It may not help your peace of mind to learn that we intend to keep after your walk more. Why?

Because it is the Waterloo still left to be conquered by women who would be lovely.

You are good at makeup. You know clothes. You're aware of dietary measures, too, and the latest nail and toe tints. You are familiar with skin care, and your hair certainly is a decorative asset. But so many, many girls and women walk incorrectly, which is just too bad.

The other day one of the leading dress authorities hit the nail on the head when she said: "Fashion is what you wear. Style is how you wear it!" Please pin up that little maxim to read as you prime yourself for conquest on job, man, or parade. Say it over: "Fashion is what you wear. Style is how you wear it!"

Get the knack of thinking not in terms of what shall I wear today, but how shall I wear it? Then you are on the way to posture that is going to mean something to your clothes. You are going to look a million times smarter on a budget that you can easily afford. You do not have to pay so much for your clothes if you carry them well.

We hate to be everlastingly nagging on this subject, but we can't help it, because we see so many girls and women who would be lovely did they recognize carriage for the beauty that lies within it. Instead we see young ones "deb-slouching" along with knees bent and arms swinging ahead of them, as if needed to row them along; the curved back and the drooped head resulting as in profile No. 1. You see them stand, as in profile No. 2, with swayback, abdomen protruding, double chin in the making, and rounded shoulders. Dress that figure in an import, in your mind's eye, and what have you? You answer. You know. Mentally slip the costume on profile No. 3 and you have something, the something every one may have who learns how to carry herself well.

We plead for the side view habit of figure analysis and the supercritical eye. Studying yourself in the long mirror full face is deceptive. You are too apt to concentrate on the face, but get a slant on the back and side view. That's what lets you see how others see you. Here your smile can't dazzle or your pearls distract.

When you get a good profile view, and you see what you are doing to ruin the dress effect with the swayed-in waistline, the bulges above and below it, you're no woman if you don't pull in your abdomen, lift your chest up, your head ditto, pull in your derrière, and give yourself an air that will put you over attractively. Pull yourself up tall. Pull your head up tall so that the hat will look like something. Get behind your veiled coquetry, if veil you wear, with a come-on air, not with the head-drooping collapse that's totally lost on observers. Pull yourself up tall. Feel tall and light, easy, and graceful on the feet. Not rigid of mind or muscle, remember; just stretched tall. This lifts everything. Your chest goes up, your stomach flattens, your back straightens.

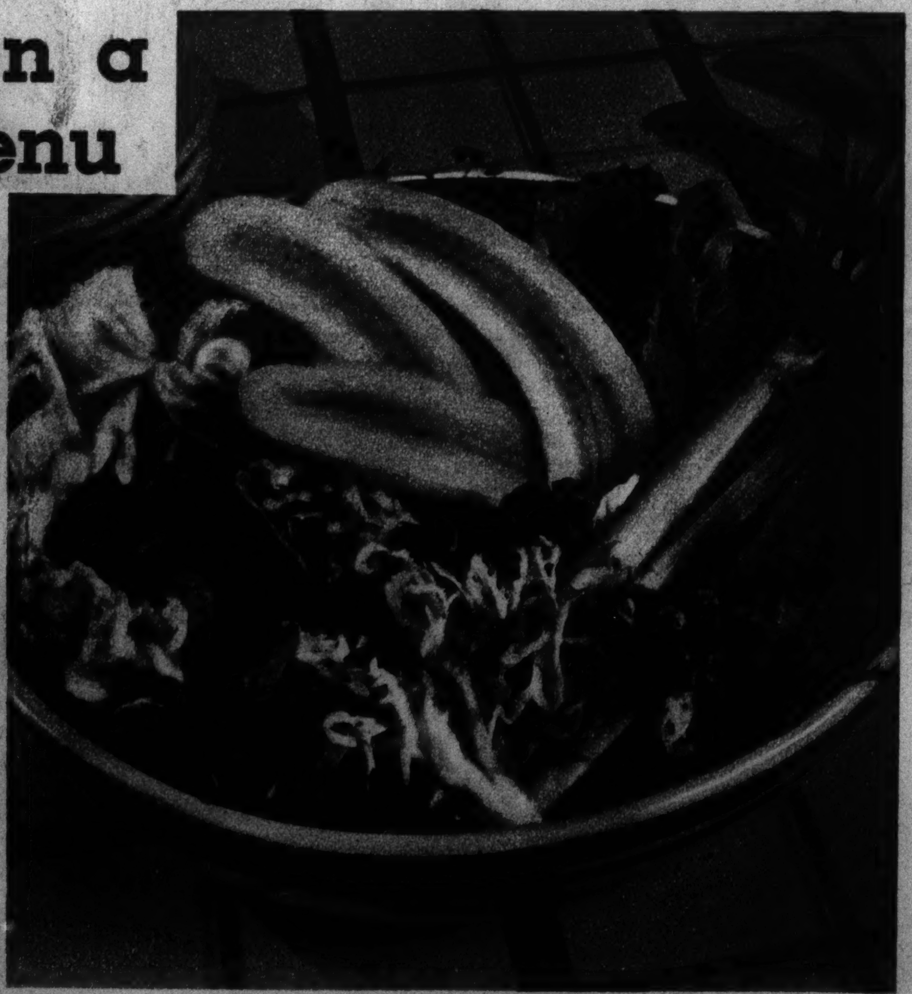
Don't, we beg, look the bent and toil-worn sister with sagging midriff and shoulders bent. Don't chuck the chin forward, the rest of you following a few inches behind (and this is a common sight). Don't swing the arms. It makes you appear to be going in many directions. And that arrogant bustle walk, which looks as if you were bent on getting there from the middle up, the rest of you left away behind. Tuck your rear hipline in as if some one were about to paddle you back there. That's the trick of eliminating the rear bulges. And don't bend the knees!

And your feet. Don't let them get away from you. Keep them going straight, with toes pointed ahead. You can't get the spring of youth, the light and airy grace your frock needs, with feet turned out. They trip you on your road to conquest.

Just one posture reform trick in the morning is urged. Before the dress goes on, line yourself up against the wall, flat, flat, flatter of back, so that the whole backline is flattened against the wall. Then a tall, tall pull from soles up to top of head, and you have it when you walk away from the wall.

Variation on a Luncheon Menu

A great pile of whipped cream, generously sprinkled with chopped pistachio nuts and ground caramelised sugar, tops this rich "company" dessert. There are apricot halves hiding under the whipped cream, and the basis of the dish is a rich cream pudding that's not at all hard to make. It's called nougat fruit cream.



Lengthwise halves of banana and two spring onions add a new note to this salad bowl. The greens are chicory, lettuce, watercress, and endive, and there are tiny whole radishes and sliced cucumbers, too.

By MARY MEADE

"SOMETHING crisp and something creamy, a little sweetness, a bit of tart, and everything tasty" are the magic words you must mumble—or at least keep in mind—when concocting the perfect luncheon.

You can always depend on a salad bowl for that something crisp. Chicory, endive, watercress, lettuce, and all the tempting greens now on the market are the basis of the salad. Use any one or a combination of them, only be sure that they are crisp, cold, and dry. Toss them up ever so lightly with French dressing. Use a chilled bowl and serve on chilled plates. Be careful not to bruise the leaves—a gourmet we know of uses a camel's hair brush to paint each leaf with a thin coating of dressing! When you've become expert at the rite you can do your tossing at the table.

For variety add crisp radishes, sliced cucumber, or quartered tomatoes to the bowl. Fresh fruits—any that seem most mouth-watering at the moment—will add flavor and color accent.

Incidentally, the salad dressing will be all the tartness your meal will need.

The creamy food might be a creamed soup or vegetable, but since a salad bowl is practically a lunch in itself, a milk dessert of the type pictured at the left will be a better choice. My department has mimeographed copies of this recipe which we will be glad to send you on receipt of a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Address your requests to Mary Meade, Tribune Tower.

To complete the luncheon serve a hot bread with the salad bowl, dainty cookies with the dessert, and a thin soup for appetizer.

Checking off on our fingers, we've included the crisp, the creamy, the sweet, and the tart, and if you've followed directions carefully it'll be tasty.

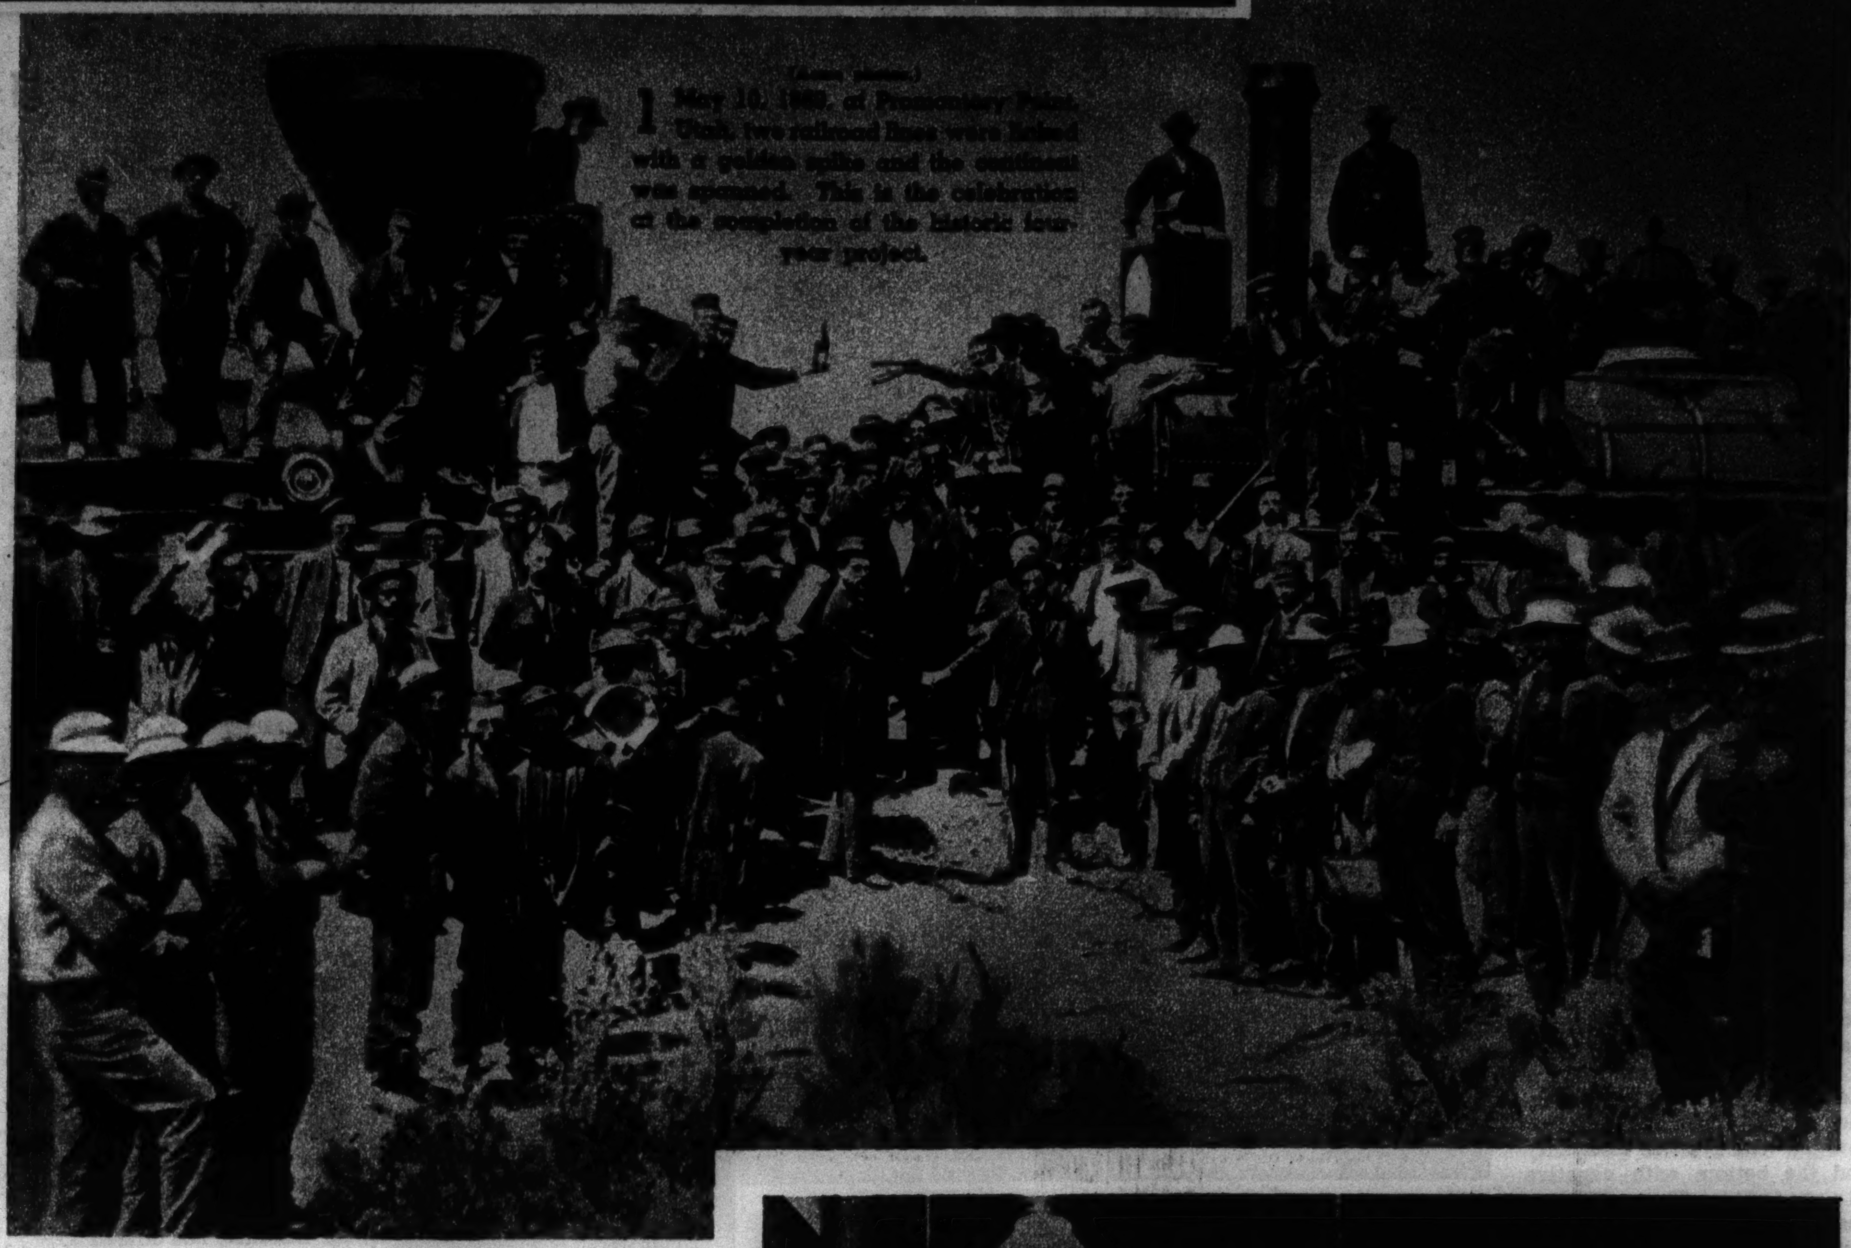
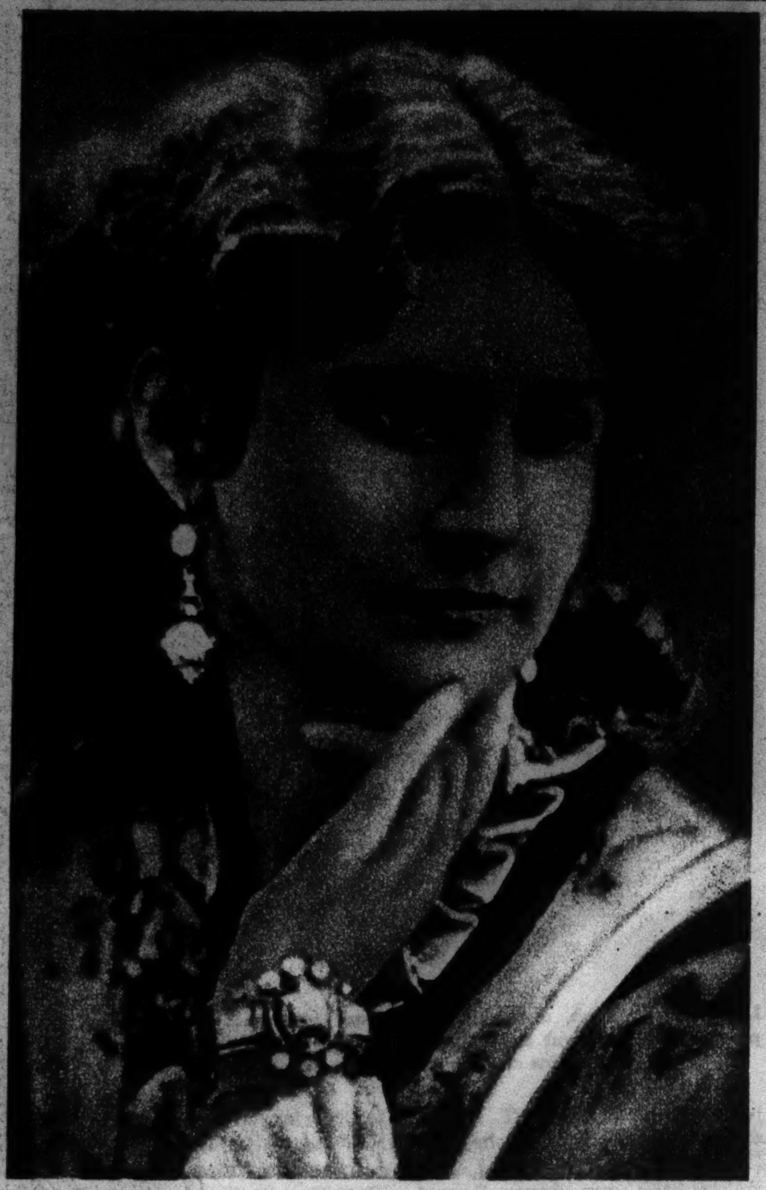
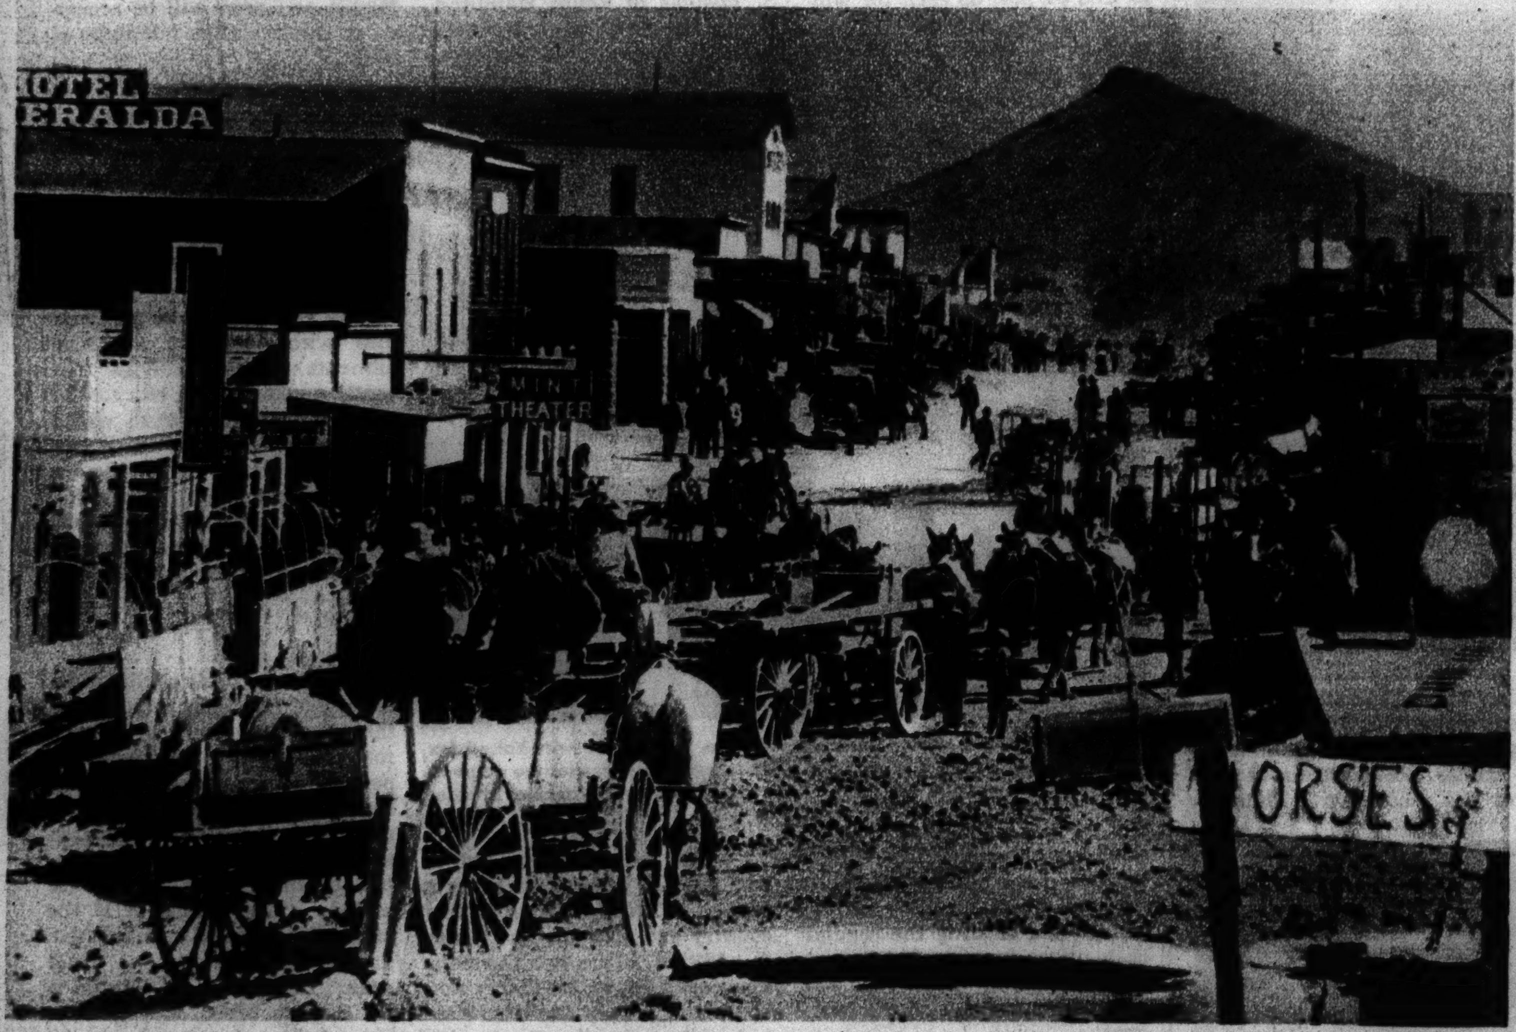
When East and West Did Meet



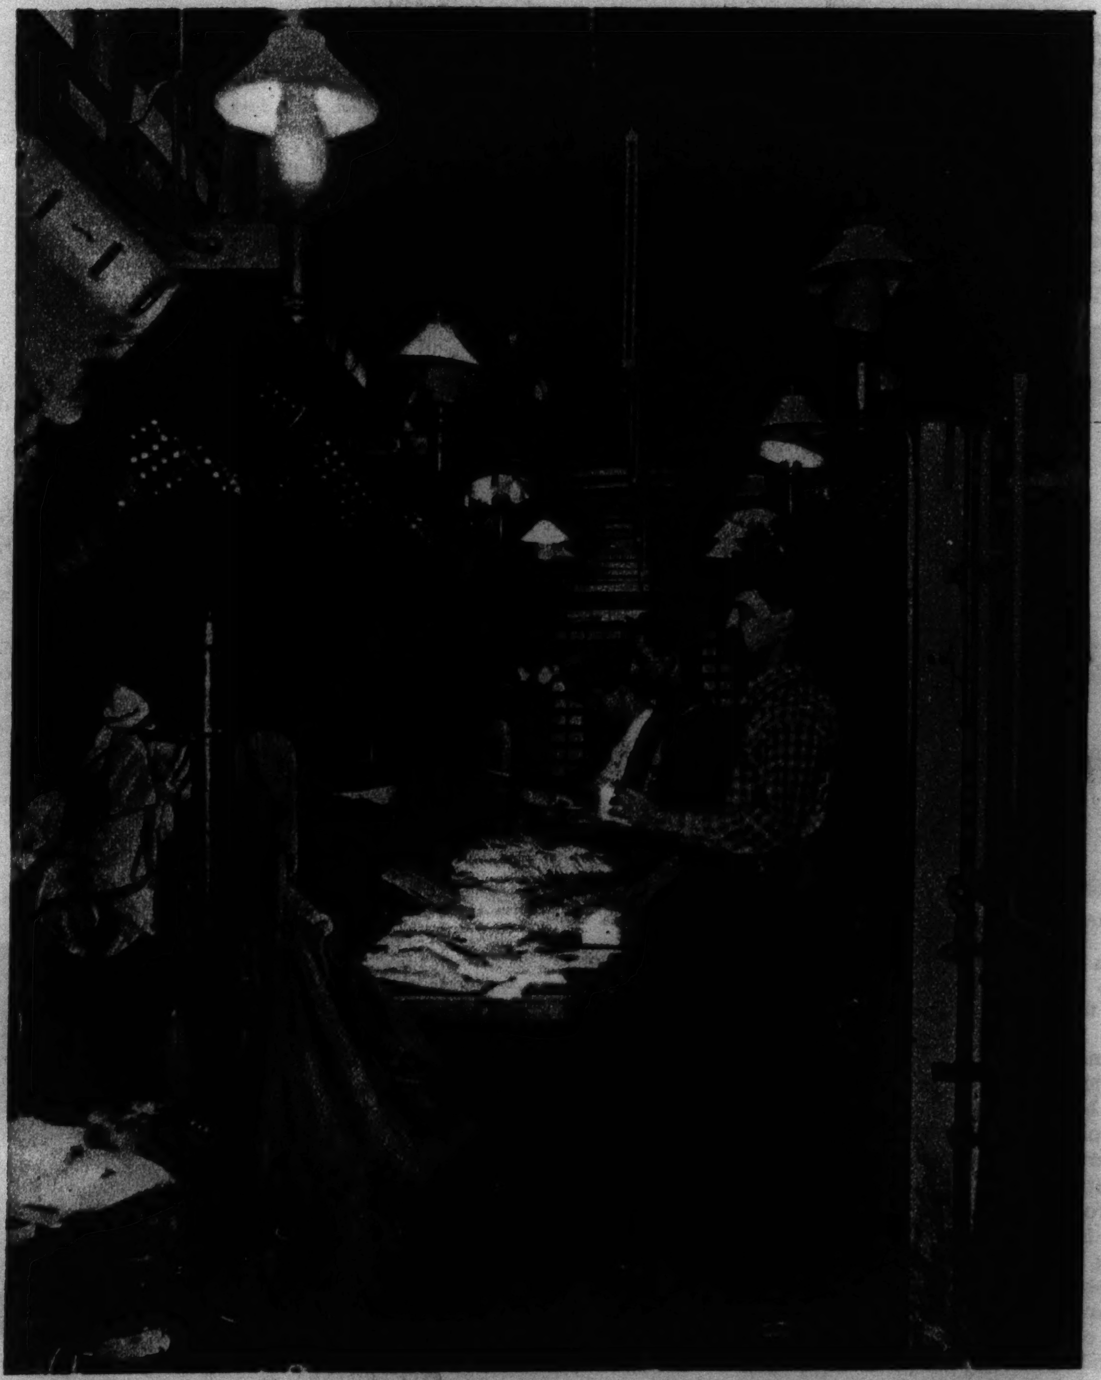
1 May 10, 1869, at Promontory Point, Utah, two railroad lines were linked with a golden spike and the continent was spanned. This is the celebration at the completion of the historic four-year project.



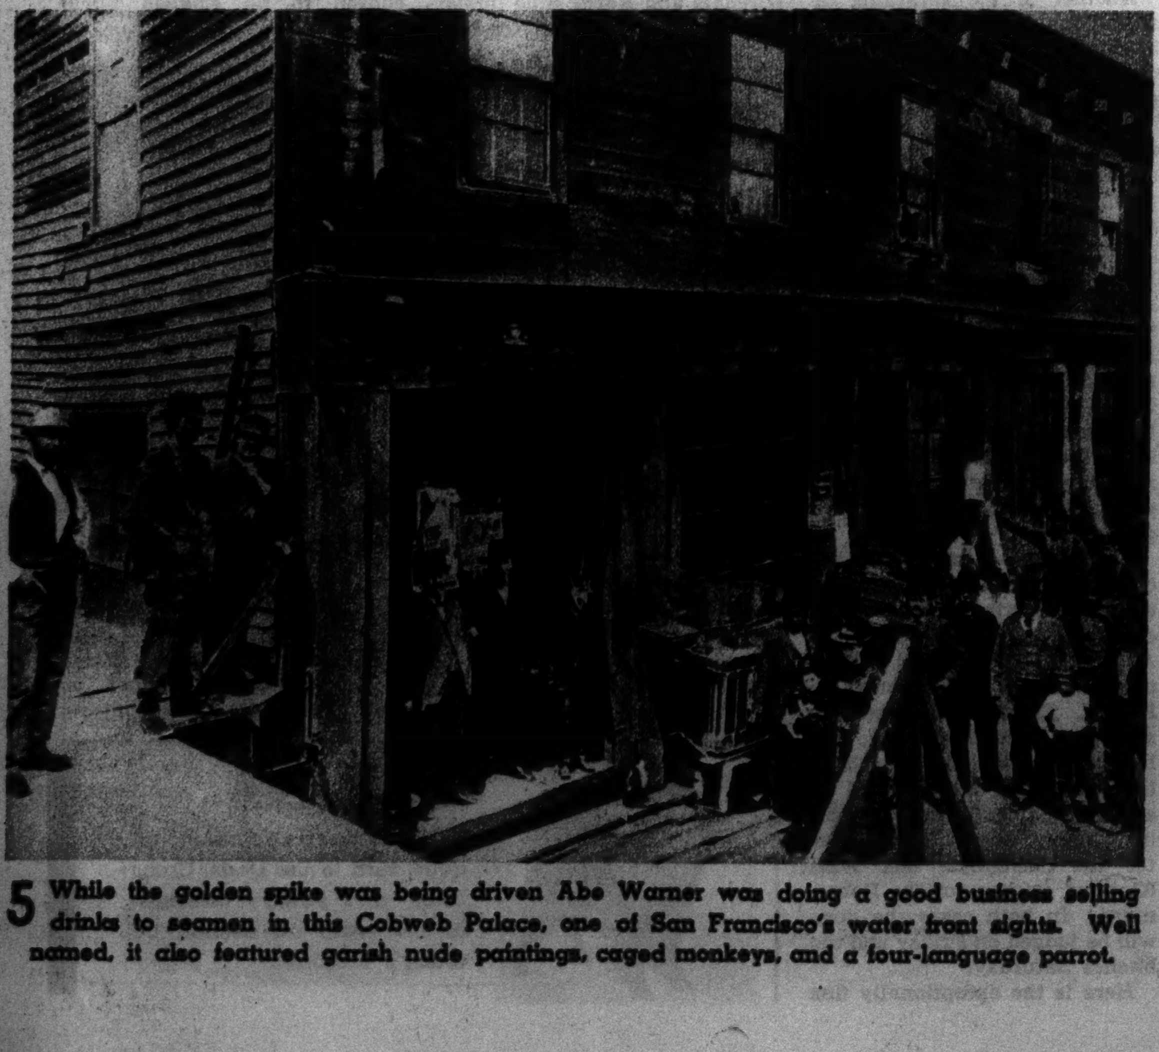
2 Out in San Francisco, Broadway-born Charlotte ("Lotta") Crabtree was reigning as queen of the theater. She had been trouping since she was 6 years old.



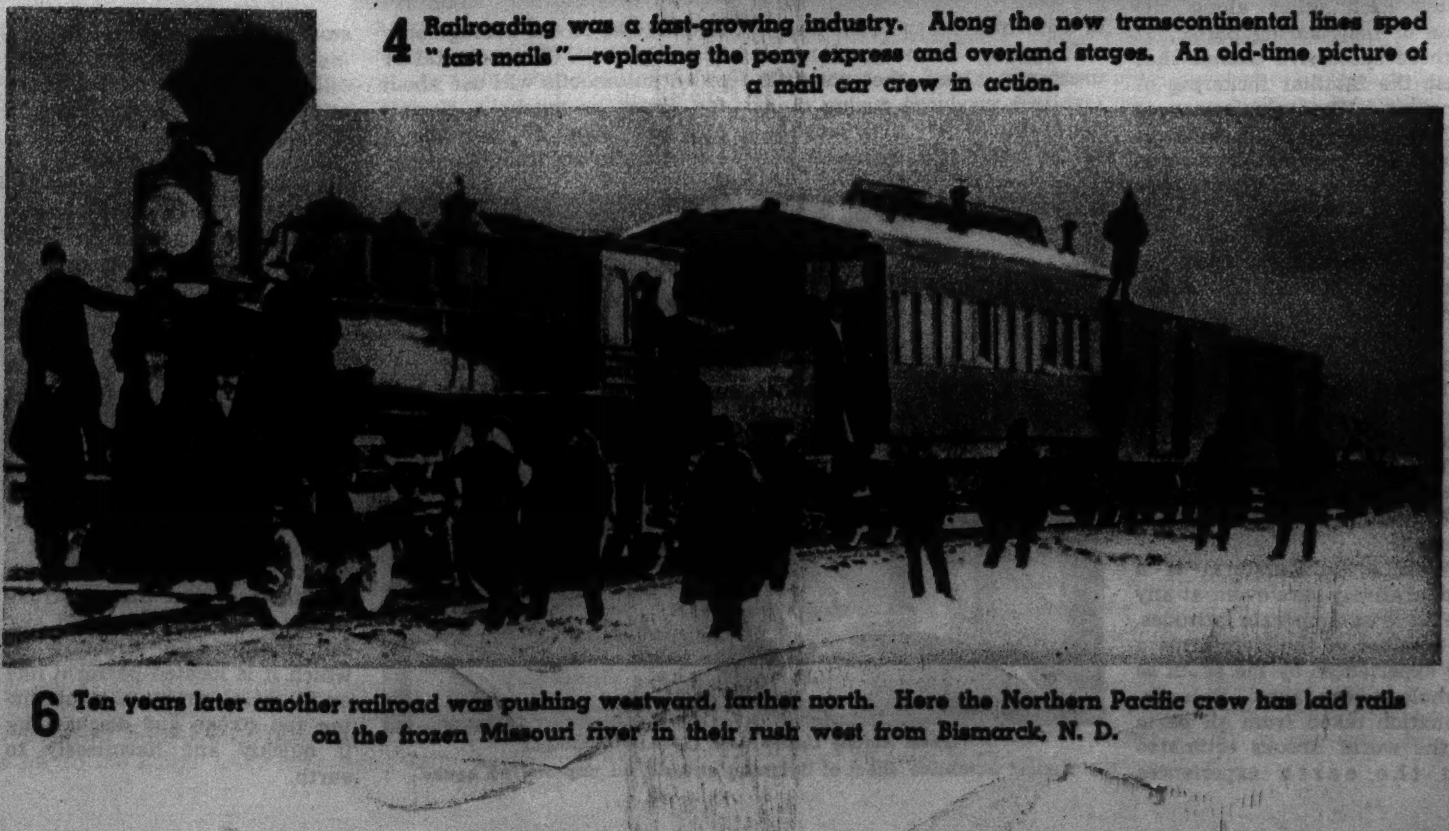
3 Gold towns changed slowly. This is a street scene in Goldfield, Nev., about thirty-five years ago.



4 Railroading was a fast-growing industry. Along the new transcontinental lines sped "fast mails"—replacing the pony express and overland stages. An old-time picture of a mail car crew in action.



5 While the golden spike was being driven Abe Warner was doing a good business selling drinks to seamen in this Cobweb Palace, one of San Francisco's water front sights. Well named, it also featured garish nude paintings, caged monkeys, and a four-language parrot.



6 Ten years later another railroad was pushing westward, farther north. Here the Northern Pacific crew has laid rails on the frozen Missouri river in their rush west from Bismarck, N. D.

Lightning—a Power House Wasted

THE ANCIENT Greeks explained lightning simply, for according to mythology Jupiter slew his enemies on earth by hurling thunderbolts. Today, thanks to the researches of Prof. C. T. R. Wilson, Nobel laureate of the Cavendish laboratory, and Dr. G. C. Simpson of the British meteorological office, we are in a position to explain the causes of lightning and its devastating effects in a less naïve way.

That the effects of lightning can truly be destructive is evidenced by the unusual photographs printed on this page. Various data will be presented to show how wasteful nature is—by virtue of the tremendous electrical energy squandered and the heavy loss to property.

A local thunderstorm may be likened to a gigantic electrical machine stretching about a mile in each direction. According to the theory of C. T. R. Wilson, the top of the cloud becomes charged with positive electricity and the bottom with negative electricity. These different charges accumulate until the potential difference reaches some thousand million volts, sufficiently great to break down the resistance of the air. The lightning flash is then a spark a mile or two long which discharges the cloud. Detailed study of these flashes has revealed that they are actually rapid movements of streams of ions (electrically charged atoms and molecules).

An example of what lightning may do to cattle if trees and fences in the pasture are not grounded.

Most lightning flashes pass from top to bottom of the thunder cloud, but occasionally the bottom of the cloud sparks to ground and a tree or a barn or a transmission line is "struck by lightning." Once the spark has followed a particular path through air, this path remains a conductor for a certain time, and generally several flashes follow each other along the same or neighboring paths. It is these successive flashes that cause the familiar flickering of lightning. The calculations of Wilson show that it requires about twenty seconds for a cloud to accumulate enough charge for another flash.

Thunder is due to the same cause as the sharp crack we hear when an electric spark jumps. The noise is produced all along the lightning flash. The long-drawn roll of thunder with a series of bangs is due to the different lengths of time taken by sound to reach us from different parts of the spark. (Sound travels 1,100 feet a second, taking 5 seconds to travel a mile.)

While a thunderstorm is a comparatively rare event at any one place in temperate latitudes, the number of thunderstorms a day experienced by the earth as a whole is very large. From information taken from all parts of the world Brooks estimates that the earth experiences 16,000,000 thunderstorms a year, or 44,000 a day. There will be on the average 1,800 thunderstorms in progress in different parts of the world at any one moment (the average duration of a storm is taken as one hour).

Another example of lightning's lethal effect among cattle grouped along a wire fence that was ungrounded.

It appears from recent measurements that the potential (volts) produced during thunderstorms is very high indeed—of the order of a thousand million volts. On the other hand, the actual amount of electricity that flows in a lightning flash is almost unbelievably small. Professor Wilson estimates the amount of electricity in a single stroke to be on the average only 20 coulombs. (The self-starter of an automobile will use about ten times as much; a 60-watt bulb uses about 30 coulombs of electricity in one minute.) However, since the time occupied by a lightning stroke is of the order of 1/1,000 second, the average value of the electrical current is 20,000 amperes. Lightning strokes to the supporting towers of transmission lines have been found to carry currents as high as 250,000 amperes!

Since the potential is so extremely high, a lightning flash represents a very large amount of energy. It is estimated that over the whole earth thunderstorms are continuously expending energy at the rate of four billion kilowatts—man's generating plants are insignificant in comparison.

Although the majority of lightning flashes that occur are within the thunder cloud, nevertheless discharges to earth do occur, with a heavy loss to property and life.

Ever since the time of the versatile Benjamin Franklin the value of lightning rods in the protection of buildings has been recognized. When properly installed there is little doubt of their effectiveness. They do not always decrease likelihood of a stroke, but they do prevent damage in the event that a stroke occurs. The lightning rod system makes the structure on which it is located perform like an all-metal structure by receiving the stroke and discharging it quickly and harmlessly to earth.

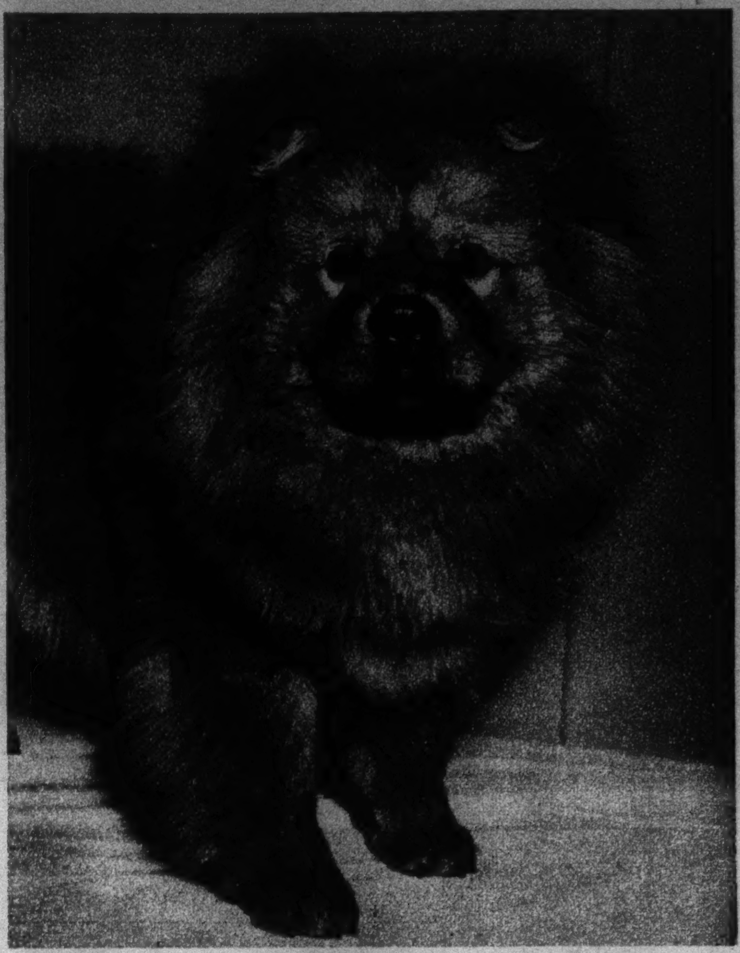
Richest Dog Show Due May 28

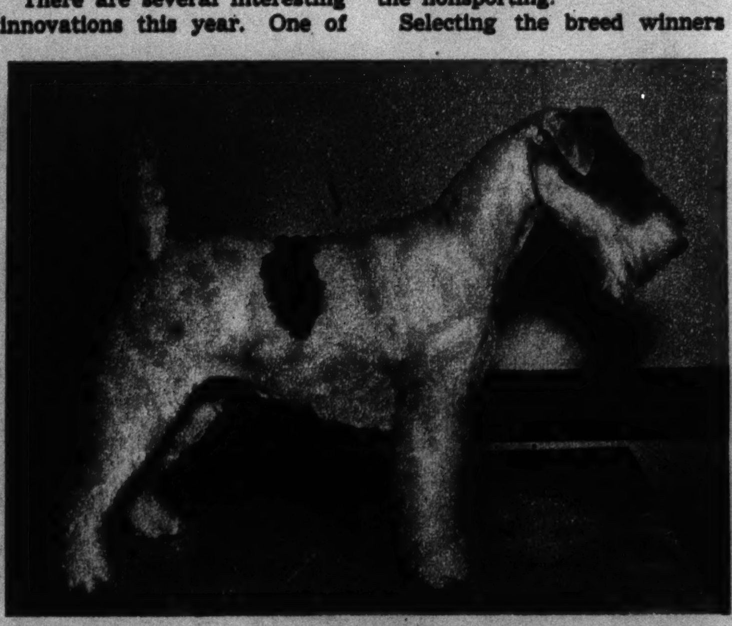
ALTHOUGH thousands of dog owners apparently are not interested in dog shows, there is one that is held every spring which we believe has the widest possible appeal. This is the Morris and Essex Kennel club combination outdoor garden party and dog show, which this year is scheduled for May 28 on the polo field at Giralda Farms, Madison, N. J. This is the country's richest classic—a one-day event held outdoors on a beautiful estate. In point of entries, delightful background, breeds represented, international character of the judges, and other features, the Morris and Essex might well be ranked as the most unusual dog show in any country. It is a remarkable party for dog fanciers, judges, and spectators.



Lion-headed, sober, and with sharp dark eyes, this young chow dog provides an excellent study in chow expression. Its name is Yangtze Sandra and it's only eleven months old.

Approximately $20,000 in cash and sterling silver trophies will go to the winners. In all of the regular classes there are cash prizes of $10, $3, and $2, offered without regard to the number of dogs that are entered. Many of the thirty-one specialty clubs which consider the Morris and Essex classes their breed fixtures have dipped into their treasuries to increase the class money. The Dachshund club, for instance, has offered $500 to increase the class money to $15, $5, and $4, post $5 each for winners, reserve, and best of winners in all coats, and $50 for best of breed.

There are several interesting innovations this year. One of them is separation of the miscellaneous class into six divisions corresponding to the variety groups and offering the regular cash prizes in each division, so that the small dogs will not have to be judged with the large ones.



With twelve points toward her championship, this female wire-haired fox terrier well knows what is expected of her when she poses for the camera. Her name is Rosebud Research. She was sired by Champion Invader of Wild Oaks.

Another is the awarding of four trophies in each group and having them identical for the corresponding places in each group.

It is the practice at many shows to give larger trophies in some groups than others, depending on their relative popularity. Mrs. M. Hartley Dodge, president of the Morris and Essex club and the moving spirit in organizing and continuing this show, feels this is essentially unfair. It may have been more difficult to win with a dog in one of the less popular groups than it was to capture first place in the most popular division, and she feels that at least the trophies should be the same in all groups.

Last year, because of the big classes and the desire to have the judge give his opinion on every dog shown under him, the A. K. C. gave permission to have the Dachshund judging start on Friday. This year that permission has been extended to the Doberman pinschers. Each of these breeds is being judged by an outstanding German authority, Gustav Alisch of Hanover for the dachhunde and Willi Kloth of Aachen for the Dobermans. In both cases the dogs will be judged on Friday and the bitches Saturday.

Here is the exceptionally fine judging slate: Harry T. Peters of New York is doing best in show; William H. Pym of Vancouver, the gun dogs; Robert Vagt of Jamaica, L. I., the hounds; Charles G. Hopton of Brooklyn, the workers; George S. Thomas of South Hamilton, Mass., the terriers; G. V. Glebe of Bryn Athyn, Pa., the toys; and Anton A. Rost of Brooklyn, the nonsporting.

Selecting the breed winners on which these variety judges will pass is a corps of experts gathered from all parts of this country and abroad. The latter, in addition to the two Germans mentioned above, are Harry Fottrell, chairman of the Irish Kennel club, who is to do the Airedale and Kerry Blue terrier breeds and the special for best fox terrier; Mrs. Alice Dixon of Marlow, Bucks, England, for the cairns, and Mrs. Kathleen Thornton of Farnborough, England, for German shepherds.

The preliminary closing date for entries in this big show is May 9, and none will be accepted or altered after midnight of May 16.

DOG NOTES

Of all the ailments that afflict dogs there are few if any that baffle the amateur owner like a skin trouble. Yes, even a veterinarian sometimes has his troubles with some of the skin ailments which afflict dogs. Recently a veterinarian was telling us of a form of eczema which superficially looks so much like sarcoptic mange that it was worthy of comment. If your dog has skin trouble it will pay you to consult a good veterinarian before the trouble has gone too far.

English authorities have selected the Labrador retriever as the most suitable of all breeds for police work in England. Experiments were conducted with a number of breeds, including most of those usually considered as "police dogs." A representative of the British home office stated: "The Labrador is the right size, hardy, keen-scented, and as sensible as one could wish. In addition to this he is an English breed, and so it is very fitting that he should be chosen to do English police work."

Diesels for Distance

Germans' Record Flight Proves Motors' Value

By WAYNE THOMIS

A STRONG argument for research and development of compression ignition, or Diesel, motors for airplanes in the United States was advanced on March 27-29 by four German airmen. Their object lesson was the establishment of a new world's record long-distance flight by a seaplane when they flew a Dornier Do-18 boat with two Diesel engines 5,242 miles nonstop.

The previous mark had been held by Capt. Mario Stoppani of Italy, who was seriously burned and the only one of a crew of four rescued two months ago when his Cant-Z trimitored seaplane burned off the coast of South America after flying 4,360 miles. The absolute distance record is held by the Russian land plane which flew 6,242 miles from Moscow to San Jacinto, Cal.

The German pilots proved beyond all doubt that the most efficient and economical engine for long-range operations is the Diesel. The brilliance of their accomplishment is increased by the fact that they flew an old and notoriously heavy seaplane designed for much shorter-range operations.

The Dornier boat was in the air 43 hours, traveling at a speed of 122 miles an hour, according to the crew's report. The average consumption of the heavy oil burned by the Diesel engines was .36 pound for each horsepower hour. The engines developed a maximum of 600 horsepower each and were cruised at approximately 450 horsepower, or 75 per cent of full power. Thus the Do-18 was cruised on 900 horsepower each hour.

With those facts established, a number of interesting comparisons may be made. At their cruising rate of power the Diesels consumed 324 pounds of fuel an hour, and the airplane remained in the air 43 hours. Thus a total of 13,932 pounds of fuel was burned before the airplane landed with tanks virtually emptied. We can safely assume that not more than 14,000 pounds, or 1,941 gallons, of heavy oil fuel was carried.

Let us see what is the maximum possible distance that the Do-18 could have flown if the motors had been the best electric ignition engines, cruised at the same horsepower and using as fuel the best and most economical gasoline.

First consider that the standard United States gallon measure of heavy oil weighs 7.2 pounds, while the same quantity of gasoline weighs 6 pounds. Thus while the Do-18 could carry 14,000 pounds of heavy oil, it would have been able to carry only 11,649.72 pounds of gasoline, even though the plane tanks were full. Remember that fuel consumption for all motors is calculated at pounds consumed for each horsepower used each hour.

Now, a Diesel engine burns between .35 and .36 pounds of fuel per horsepower hour. The Do-18's two engines burned .36 pounds per horsepower hour. The Diesel engine is the only type of internal combustion motor now in service which is this efficient. Most gasoline engines burn closer to .50 pounds for each horsepower each hour. However, we will assume for purposes of comparison that the electric ignition engines will burn .42 pounds for each horsepower hour.

At that rate they would consume a total of 378 pounds each hour, assuming that the electric ignition engines also delivered 900 horsepower for cruising at 122 miles an hour. Drinking 378 pounds an hour from a total load of 11,649 pounds, the electric ignition motors would permit flight for only 31 hours 45 minutes. And, cruising at an average speed of 122 miles an hour, the plane would travel 3,873 miles instead of the 5,242 miles flown on the Diesel fuel.

Thus with motors burning gasoline the Do-18 could fly only 73.8 per cent as far as it was able to fly with the heavy oil motors.

Now for the disadvantages of the heavy oil engines. At their present stage of development they do not deliver the short bursts of high power that electric ignition engines do. The latest Wright Cyclone engines of the G-100 series are rated to develop a maximum of 900 horsepower at 2,200 revolutions per minute at 6,000 feet for continuous operation. But these same engines develop 1,200 horsepower at 2,300 r.p.m. for five minutes at takeoff, when extra power is needed.

The Germans got around the need for the burst of power by catapulting their Diesel-engined Dornier boat at the start of the record flight. It would have been impossible to fly the Do-18 off the water with its great load of fuel by using only the power of its own motors.

The flight was organized by the Dornier works with the aid of the Deutsche Luft Hansa and the Condor syndicate of Brazil, the latter two being German air line companies. The crew consisted of Werner von Engel, in command; Erich Gundermann, the co-pilot; Helmut Rosel, radio operator, and Hans Stein, second radio operator and machinist.

They were catapulted from the Westfalen, one of the German catapult steamers, at 2:05 p. m. on March 27 from a point off Start point, Devon, England. The boat passed Las Palmas on the Canary Islands twelve hours later and picked up land at Fernando Horonha, 230 miles off the coast of Brazil. The flight continued past Pernambuco, the old Zeppelin station, to Caravellas, 480 miles short of Rio de Janeiro, the intended destination.

The plane has been used on many South Atlantic ocean crossings on the service the D. L. H. has operated consistently since 1936.

Development of the airplane Diesel engine has been abandoned in the United States. Back in 1930 and 1931 the Packard Motor company developed a 225-h.p. radial Diesel engine and with it set a world's nonrefueling endurance record which still stands. Engineers here have been discouraged by the weight of the Diesel engine, which is far greater than for the electric ignition motor.

However, Diesel-powered German bombers are in use. They will be discussed next week.

Color Camera Records Beauty of Wild Flowers

By BOB BECKER

GROWING in meadows, swamps, and woodlots throughout Chicagoland are hundreds of different kinds of wild flowers, as well as less aristocratic flowering weeds and flowering shrubs or trees—all adding much to the beauty of our landscape. One representative of each of these three groups—the cardinal flower, Queen Anne's lace, and the wild crab apple—are reproduced in color on page one of the picture section.

One of the most common flowering weeds in Chicagoland is the Queen Anne's lace, wild carrot, or bird's nest, which may be a joy to the flower lover but commonly is a pest to the farmer. Topped by a white, lacy flower, its stem may grow from one to three feet above the ground. Queen Anne's lace usually appears in June and may blossom on through the season until frost kills it in the fall.

Few of our wild flowers serve as such colorful and beautiful subjects for the Tribune color camera as the cardinal flower. This is one of our most brilliant blossoms of late summer and early fall. Aside from its color the cardinal flower is of unusual interest to the flower lover because it is one of the few wild flowers that cannot depend on bees for pollination. Humming birds must visit the flowers to pollinate them. This member of the lobelia family prefers moist, low places. The flowers that were photographed by the color camera were found blossoming along a small creek on the Tribune farm near Wheaton.

Hospital Proved

CLEANSING CREAM

Here is a cream whose cleansing power you cannot possibly doubt. Hospitals have used Albolene for 20 years . . . Consider it safe even for babies!

BLACKHEADS 1
Hardened skin secretions are locking dirt and germs in your pores. Penetrating Albolene Solid first loosens dirt . . . then floats it out.

PIMPLES 2
Germs have started irritations in the blackheads. Irritated skin needs a bland, pure cleanser. Use hospital-proved Albolene Solid.

LOOSE PORES 3
Pores can stand just so much packing and stretching before they lose their resilience permanently. Keep pores fine with Albolene Solid.

Now, this hospital-proved cleansing cream is available to you. Here's how Albolene Solid works:
1. On the skin, Albolene becomes almost instantly a fine, delicate oil. Watch it spread...and sink into the pores.
2. Quickly, Albolene Solid helps soften hardened skin secretions. Holds them suspended...makes it easy to get out the dangerous dirt!
3. Not like heavy, gummy creams...Albolene Solid is quickly absorbed by cleansing tissues. No gummy deposit is left behind. Your pores are clear.
Don't just clean—ALBOLENE your skin! 50¢ and $1.00.

HERE are the facts! Sworn records show that among independent tobacco experts, Lucky Strike has twice as many exclusive smokers as have all other cigarettes put together. These men are auctioneers, buyers and warehousemen. They deal with all, but are not connected with any manufacturer. They know tobacco from A to Z... and they smoke Luckies... 2 to 1!

Remember that every Lucky Strike gives you the throat protection of the exclusive process, "It's Toasted." This process removes certain harsh irritants present in all tobacco, and makes Lucky Strike a light smoke—easy on your throat.
